'Law Not Criteria' Says Labor Chief

PORT ELGIN, Ont. (CP) — The executive vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) warned Monday that organized labor will resort to illegal activity, if necessary, to fight strikebreaking by employers.

Jean Beaudry told a CLC-sponsored labor seminar in this community about 25 miles southwest of Owen Sound: "The law is not the criteria; let's win the fight. If we have to cross the border line between legal or illegal activity, we'll do so."

The 150 union members, students at the seminar, pressed for stronger leadership to combat strikebreaking.

Discussion in the session also brought on admission from Mr. Beaudry that the 1.7-million-member CLC and the 165,000-member Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) are headed for a major confrontation on the issue of admitting provincial civil service associations into the CLC.

Mr. Beaudry said CUPE, which claims jurisdiction for provincial civil servants under an earlier commitment from the congress, had been unable to bring any of the provincial civil service groups into its ranks.

The CLC has applications for affiliation from civil service associations in Alberta, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. A decision on the applications will be made by the CLC executive council July 11. But to admit these groups will require a two-thirds majority of council members to over-ride a CUPE veto.

CUPE has threatened a break with the congress if the provincial civil service groups are admitted.

Fowler and Powell had only five demerit points in the race. Second was Paddy Graham of Calgary, who also had five demerit points but was placed second for taking longer on his flight. Scott Rowed of Calgary was third with six demerits. Demerit points were given to fliers who incorrectly estimated their arrival time on each of the legs of the flight.

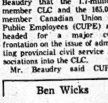
Dayan Vows To End Terror

TEL AVIV (AP) — Defence Minister Moshe Dayan vowed Monday that Israel will liquidate the Palestinian terrorists he said must have been behind the murder of an Israeli air attache in Washington.

He promised to strike at the terrorists "wherever they are" until they are wiped out, implying a possible stepup in the shadowy war Israeli and Palestinian agents have been waging since the Munich Olympic Games last year.



Dayan talked to reporters at Lod Airport during the arrival of the United States Air Force jet carrying home the body of the slain attache, Col. Yossi Alon, accompanied by his weeping widow and three children.

Alon was killed early Sunday outside his home in the Washington suburb of Chevy Chase, Md.

U.S. and Israeli officials said there was no positive evidence that the Palestinian guerrilla movement was responsible for gunning down Alon.

Dayan declared, however: "I don't see the possibility of anyone else" except Palestinian terrorists. He told reporters the guerrilla movement had announced over Cairo radio that one of its men had slain Alon.

Missing Men on Private Trip

VC Deny Responsibility For Canadians' Safety

SAIGON (AP) — The Viet Cong said today that they assume no responsibility for two missing Canadian officers of the Vietnam truce observer force.

The Viet Cong indicated they suspect that the officers may have gone into Communist-controlled territory with ill intention.

The officers, Capt. Ian Patten of Toronto and Capt. Fletcher Thomson of Ottawa, have been missing since last Thursday near Xuan Loc, 46 miles northeast of Saigon.

Field reports and South Vietnamese and Canadian authorities said that they are being detained by the Viet Cong.

In the meantime, the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) made another effort in seeking the release of the officers.

The four nations in the ICCS—Canada, Indonesia, Hungary and Poland—agreed in a meeting to send a letter to the two-party Joint Military Commission (JMC) composed of the South Vietnamese and the Viet Cong, asking it to "immediately offer its co-operation" in starting a search for the missing Canadians. The JMC also was requested to provide a guarantee of safety for the search.

It was not immediately determined when the search was to begin

Part of $2-million Giant from Belleville

Stephens - Adamson Division of Borg - Warner (Canada) Ltd. in Belleville supplied this stacker for Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd.'s new cement plant at Bath, Ont. It is a small part of a 1.75 mile, computerized system engineered in Belleville. The system, scheduled to come into operation in the fall, will handle raw materials and an annual production of 1.1 million tons of finished cement. Computerization at the plant, which will be Canada's largest, means that the whole conveyor system can be operated by one man from a central control room.

Computerized Conveyor System Soon in Operation at Bath

A year after the first components were shipped to the site, test runs will soon begin of a $2-million computerized materials handling system made by Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd.'s Bath plant by Belleville's Stephens - Adamson Division of Borg-Warner (Canada) Ltd.

Stephens - Adamson engineered and installed the 1.75-mile system that will move raw materials and 1.1 million tons of finished products through the new plant each year. Upwards of 300 people at Stephens - Adamson have been involved in the design and manufacture of the equipment that is expected to be in operation in the fall.

Equipment used in the system includes two rail-mounted bucket-wheel reclaimers, the largest and smallest of their kind made in Canada, two travelling stackers and 27 belt conveyors with a total length of 9,200 feet. The conveyor units range in width from 24 to 54 inches. Two drag chain conveyors also form part of the system.

Thousands of tons of limestone mined from a nearby quarry will be crushed and fed directly by conveyor from the pit into a 1,000 - foot long building. Silica and gypsum will be off-loaded from rail cars and trucks onto conveyors for stockpiling.

A travelling stacker with a 62-foot long boom will be used to stockpile the raw materials in the 470,000 - square - foot building.

At a rate of 500 tons an hour, a bucket-wheel reclaimer will chew into the stockpiles of limestone for processing. It is transferred to a series on conveyors for processing. A smaller reclaimer will put 100 tons of silica an hour into the processing system.

Output from the kiln will also be handled by Stephens-Adamson equipment. The kiln will be the largest in Canada and the second largest in North America. A 900-foot conveyor and a travelling stacker with an 81-foot-long boom will heap the "clinker" fresh from the kiln.

As required, the clinker will be carried to grinding mills by another conveyor system.

The longest section of belt conveyor supplied by Stephens - Adamson is a 54-inch-wide, 1,305 - foot - long unit that will carry the finished cement powder from the mills to the loading shed at a rate of 1,000 tons an hour.

A total of 50 different sized electric motors power the system. They have a combined output of 1,105 horsepower.

With a computer programming the plant's input and output, the total system will be operated by just one man from a central control room. He will have little more to do than keep a watch on things and push a button.

Canada Day Keeps Growing

TRENTON — More than 10,000 people swarmed over Centennial Park Monday celebrating the most successful ever Canada Day here.

While a collag. of activities kept large audiences busy, food stands and soft drink bars were completely sold out by early evening.

Trenton Rotary Club organizers estimated the afternoon crowd averaged 2,500 with this figure multiplying to m o r e than 8,000 for evening stage performances and fireworks display.

Canada Day began five years ago when members of Trenton's Citizens' Band decided some formal celebration should be held in commemoration of July 1.

In its first year Canada Day saw about 75 friends and relatives sitting in the park listening to the band.

Since then, the festivity has blossomed into one of the most energetic endeavors in the Quinte area, drawing partici- pants and audiences from all over the region.

Jerry Goldberg, Rotary Club member and chairman of the day's activities was very well off like clockwork - without a hitch."

The handicraft booths reported active selling with many individuals seeking permission to take part in next year's celebrations.

The men's open tennis tournament was won by a father and-son combination, Will and Bruce Mohr.

The women's open tourna ment was won by Pavia Cre ighton and Doris O'Dell. Mixed doubles women's tennis division was won by Kathy Crevisks and Lynn Alexander.

The invitational tyke baseball competition was won by Jets Restaurant; B division winners were Middleton Park North Stars.

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Housing Corp. today announced it has invited builders to submit price and design proposals for construction of 103 detached houses in Trenton for sale under the H ome Ownership Made E asy H.O.M.E. plan. Builders are given until July 31 to submit their proposals.

Viet Cong Objects

Tuan said his delegation had never been given notice of the officers' trip and therefore does not assume any responsibility for them.

Tuan cited several meetings between his delegation and Canadian delegates since the two Canadians were reported missing.

"On June 20," Tuan's letter said, "Col. (Charles) Simmonds confirmed that this was a private trip of the two Canadian officers, not for any purpose of the ICCS, and without an invitation from the Provisional Revolutionary Government (Viet Cong).

"At 1130 hours on June 29, our officers met at Xuan Loc with the four chief delegates of the Bien Hoa ICCS, and the Xuan Loc ICCS team. Officers of the Republic of South Vietnam were also present. The meeting unanimously asserted that the two Canadian captains had gone out on their own affair, but not on any mission given by the Xuan Loc team."

The letter said therefore the two Canadian officers must bear full responsibility for their action.

"The PRG, its military delegation, as well as the ICCS, are not bound to recognize anything concerning this matter," the letter said.

The letter said that Maj.-Gen. Duncan McAlpine, Canadian ICCS commissioner, later confirmed the statements made by Simmonds and the ICCS at Saigon.

However, Tuan said, Gauvin "has brought up the question of the Viet Cong's responsibility.

"In a meeting with me at 2000 hours on June 30," Tuan's letter said, "your excellency, while expressing Canadian government's concern . . . and desire that we continue to grant facilities assisting the search, have indicated the problem of our responsibility . . . ."

"I have explained to you that the PRG had never been given any advance notice of the two Canadian officers' trip and we did not know which side's area the two officers had gone into," Tuan said. "And I called your attention to the fact that our assistance came out of our goodwill only and not any tie of responsibility."

Nixon

believes Nixon knew of the cover-up as early as last September, three months after the break-in.

Nixon has denied having such knowledge before this spring. He fired Dean April 30, when his top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, resigned.

Ziegler said Nixon will not respond to a request from the Senate committee to appear, "because he feels he has the responsibility to maintain the prerogatives of the executive branch." A grand jury appearance would be constitutionally appropriate, he reiterated.

The committee's second phase is to cover charges of unfair practices in the 1972 campaign, with the final phase concentrating on campaign financing.

Mother, Daughter Killed in Crash

A Carrying-vile area mother and her six-year-old daughter were killed Sunday when their car left Hastings County Road 8 and struck a culvert here Sunday.

Dead are Mrs. O'Brien, 31, of RR1, Carrying-vile, and Kerrie O'Brien, who both pronounced dead on arrival at Belleville General Hospital.

Another daughter, Julie O'Brien, 3, remains unconscious in Kingston General Hospital with head injuries. She was transferred from Belleville General shortly after the 4:15 p.m. accident.

Mrs. O'Brien's nephew, Stewart Bennett of Oshawa, was also in the car. The three-year-old suffered a head injury but is reported conscious in BGH.

Provincial Police at Belleville said the 1971 imported station wagon was eastbound along a deserted stretch of level road when it ran off the road on the north side.

The car travelled 184 feet in a ditch and levelled a fence post before continuing another 33 feet into the barn.

The accident took place about three miles east of Highway 37. Police estimated damage to the car a $2,500.

Keeping A Cool Head

Canada Day weekend will be remembered as one of the hottest on record. On Monday, hundreds of youngsters headed for Zwick's Island wading pool in search of relief. One boy keeps cool by sticking his head into a stream of water pouring from an inlet pipe while others watch in anticipation.

Collision Follows Passing Attempt

TWEED (Special) — Three people are in Belleville General Hospital following a two-car collision on Highway 37 a mile south of Thomasburgh at 5 p.m. Monday. A 14-vehicles in one of the cars walked away uninjured from the scene.

The driver of one car, Mrs. Alma Lapierre, 38, of Ottawa, suffered cuts and bruises in the accident. Her passenger, Robert Beaverstock, 14, of CFB Camp Borden suffered a broken shoulder. Driver of the second car, Thomas Horvito, 25, of Ottawa, has back injuries.

Both cars were northbound when Mr. Horvito attempted to pass the Lapierre vehicle, lost control in loose gravel and crossed the highway in front of the Lapierre car. Police say the Lapierre car rolled several times and came to rest 150 feet from the highway. It was demolished. The Horvito car shot 234 feet into a field but remained upright. It received $1,500 damage.

Monday — 7 p.m. . . . McFarlane Gendron; alarm malfunction.

Manpower Now Trying Free Telephone Calls

A year-long test in free long-distance telephone service has been launched in Hastings County by Canada Manpower.

Starting this week, county residents outside the Belleville calling area may telephone city Manpower offices through a toll-free Zenith number.

The number assigned the service is Zenith 02640.

Results of the pilot project, including its cost, will be used to study possible introduction of the service in Canada.

The test was initiated after Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, discussed it last winter with a caller on an open-line radio show in Belleville.

At that time Mr. Ellis said it was "unfair" that people contacting the Manpower office in Belleville should be "penalized" by long-distance rates.

The city Manpower centre administers an area from Amelianburgh to the northern boundary of Hastings County.

Mr. Ellis broached the issue with officials in Ottawa and Manpower Minister Robert Andras announced the test project in March.

Advertizing for the new service begins this week in county weekly newspapers.

A Manpower official in Belleville estimated there are about 9,200 families and householders in the test area.

Cards informing of the new toll-free project will be mailed this week.

However, he said, Manpower probably would want to test the feasibility in other regions before contemplating its introduction on a national basis.

56-foot Seed Spit Record Challenged

NAPANEE — This town's successful watermelon seed spitting event will be repeated this year during Hoopla Days, scheduled for July 19 to 22.

Contestants will be vying to top the 1972 record of a 56-foot spit scored by Bill Devenne in the first running of the competition.

Napanee Chamber of Commerce sponsors Hoopla Days to involve town and district organization in promotion schemes and to attract attention to the town.

The main street will be blocked off for dancing during the four days of events and the Lions Club will serve pancake breakfasts and chicken barbecue dinners each of the four days. A beauty contest and tug-of-war are among the other events planned.

Now It's Official

The people of Belleville will again have somewhere to wet their feet other than their lawn sprinklers this year as the Kinsmen Pool opened its doors for another season. Mayor Robin Jeffrey was on hand to cut the ribbon at Saturday's official opening along with Kinsmen president Paul LeBlanc (right) and pool chairman Murray Mann.

Jail Property Damaged

Richard Blake Boomhower, 27, facing a Supreme Court trial for attempted murder of two Belleville police officers, was sentenced in Napanee provincial court Thursday to 30 days in Quinte Regional Detention Centre after he pleaded guilty to a mischief charge.

Crown Attorney G. G. Wynn said $215 damage was done June 20 when Boomhower broke a desk top and window in the jail. The crown attorney told the court Boomhower has a record of similar offences in Belleville.

The prisoner has been held in the detention centre in Napanee since an April shooting incident at his Carrington Road home.

New Citizens

With each passing year the international mosaic of Belleville's citizenry expands still further, to the incomparable benefit of the community.

Just as the city has grown physically, so too has the population. With this development has come a broadening cultural and ethnic heritage which enriches us immeasurably.

Last week's Citizenship ceremony is another reminder of our good fortune in this regard. It is Belleville's gain that we have new citizens from such diverse parts of the world — from as far away as China and the Philippines and the Argentine to various countries of Europe as well as from our neighbor, the United States.

These new citizens of course have been resident in Belleville and other Quinte communities for some time, but the formal citizenship ceremony is a reminder of their presence and of their contribution to the local and national scene.

Jeans Cult

The jeans phenomenon is one of the most inspiring — or uninspiring — stories of the fashion (or non-fashion) world. They are wonderful for the kids . . . or should we say they are awful? They are handy to be sure, but they are also the lazy youngster's outfit — he or she can't be bothered getting into anything else — and does that not include just about all of them? Well maybe not — after all there are still a few well-groomed sprites (if we may so call them), male and female, around. Yet, as one writer said recently, "when are girls going to get out of jeans and into clothes again?" A good question indeed, especially when there are so many who look great otherwise but have got this "anti" bee in their bonnet — that the scruffier and dirtier looking the garment, the more "in" they are. In this cool (homely) sophisticated (couldn't-care-less), materialist ("I've got everything man") era.

Wide Open Spaces

Bicycles it is plain to see, are enjoying a later - day boom. A little while ago we mentioned a Geographic article about two young couples who rode their bikes in all weathers and across all manner of terrain from Alaska through Canada to Florida.

It was a distance of some 2,000 miles and was only the first stage of a monumental journey which will end, hopefully, in southernmost South America.

Bikes indeed are popular — there is the gentle exercise it involves, and contact with nature, sights and sounds — things that are largely lost within the confines of a car.

The other day too we saw further evidence of the fun and considerable distances a bike can produce — a handsome and athletic young lad of perhaps 19 with a pennant on his machine indicating he was from New Hampshire.

Vandalism

Of all the evidence of social malaise that seems ineradicable from human nature, youthful vandalism is among the most distressing. Twice last week, schools in Belleville were victims, with damage from broken windows approaching $1,000. There is little use attempting to pinpoint the reasons for this kind of conduct — it is a combination of so many things — but it is to be hoped at all there is a clear need for greater vigilance and security, not to mention stronger discipline in the home.

Airlift

The airlift of supplies from Trenton to drought - stricken areas of Africa is something with which we can all identify. It is a reminder of our own good fortune, for few of us go without the necessities of life and seldom if ever does the natural order of things deny us such fundamentals. This is the kind of aid that should have our full support.

Link With Constituents

NDP's Mather Does His Own Question-and-Answer Thing

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The often unorthodox and usually inventive New Democratic MP Barry Mather of Surrey-White Rock has broken new constituency ground with a news letter to his riding that is different.

Mass mailings of "Reports from Ottawa" or "Your MP Says" or "An Accounting from Parliament Hill" as they are news letters from the Members to the constituents are titled variously, have been routine practice for years.

They usually take what Mr. Mather calls "the standard approach" a run-down of what the MP has been doing and saying in the Commons and its Committees.

More recently there has been the variation in the MP news letter of the questionnaire, in which the Member, asking questions on issues of the day, hopes to feel the pulse of opinion in his riding.

Mr. Mather has the novel approach of assembling the issues which most have seemed to bother his constituents . . . answering his own questions on each of them . . . and giving the answers.

The veteran MP, 10 years and five elections, sees it as a distillation of the current political issues which "bug people by and large" and the start of his position.

He figures he gets "more mileage" out of his News Letter using this format of asking and answering the key questions himself.

The style is short and sharp and he sees it grabbing people's attention more surely than the long and wholly "standard" report from Parliament Hill.

Here's Barry Mather questioning and answering himself:

Q. The Government is spending millions to promote multiculturalism. Is it right?

A. No. We have enough divisions in Canada without emphasizing them. Instead we prefer to see the money spent unifying us.

Q. The Montreal Olympics will cost hundreds of millions. Do you approve of (1) the nationalistic violence-creating Olympic spectacle and (2) the fact that Canadians will have to pay for a large part of it?

A. No to both. For a fraction of the cost co-ordinated federal-provincial - municipal programs could promote public health and fitness. I'd rather see federal funds go to the Marlboros or get a team from there in the big leagues, football or hockey. They're shot off now from this common Canadian denominator involving all the other provinces.

Q. Pensions have been raised $1 billion. Has taken the increase. What's the use of giving out more dollars of less worth but further expense to the taxpayer?

A. I do what I can to raise pensions and reduce costs. But a cut in property or income tax for pensioners would be of more value than a raise. A $25 monthly cut in costs would be better than a $25 temporary gain in income. The money would stay home.

Q. It's reported that MPs are to get secretaries and offices in their ridings at a cost of over $2 million a year. How do you justify that?

A. I don't. I oppose it. With the NDP I help maintain our own small riding office out of the expense portion of my MP income. If the government gave me an office and secretary in my riding it would be paid for among others by Liberals, Conservatives, Socreds who do not agree with me. This would be an unfair expense to the taxpayer!

Q. Do you support the billing of MPs for phone calls?

A. I believe the two languages should be available — but we are going about it the wrong way, from the top down. I'd like all Canadian children, English and French to begin at the baby class not the civil service level, to learn to use both languages.

Q. You voted against the further suspension of capital punishment. Why?

A. I proposed the first five-year suspension back in 1967. It came into effect 10 years later. I kept track of the result: It was a 65 percent increase in the rate of capital punishment administered by murderers. We live in a sick and violent society . . . capitalism. But against capital punishment as long as murderers more than I am against capital punishment carried out by the community for the protection of liberty and safety of society.

Barry Mather is distributing copies of Mather-questioning-Mather to weekly newspapers in his riding and a number of key constituents.

It's a "one-shot thing," he says, but he expects it will create more interest than "the usual report" from Parliament Hill.

If it does, and the interest reflected in the playback, he will likely become more than an experiment in MP-constituency communications.

Ex-President Looks at Operations of the UCS

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

On June 18, 1973, at a closed meeting of Council, I stated that this year was a year of change for the Belleville and District United Community Services. I would like to expand on this statement now, in the hope that it can clarify some of the confusion presently surrounding the UCS.

The 1973 Board began its term in mid - February with nine new Directors. At that time in my opening remarks to the Board I urged that we develop a positive public relations approach in the community. We had to begin, I suggested, by opening our meetings to the public and the press and this was done. I further contended that we had to commence a process of regular direct communication with our Member Agencies, and make a commitment to involve them in meaningful ways in our decision-making process and in our monthly meetings. The Agency Review Committee has begun this process, setting up teams of Directors to liaise with the Agencies. Our Budget Manual, which establishes procedures for communication between the UCS and the Agencies is now in the process of being revised and it is my hope that the changes will formalize the open and direct style of communication we have begun. It should be added here that the UCS Officers requested our Executive Director that minutes of our meetings in summarized form, be sent to the lay and professional heads of Agencies and to the Mayor, but this has not yet been achieved.

For the first time in at least four years the 1973 UCS has made a concerted effort to engage in social planning by forming a Social Planning committee comprised of several of our Directors and other interested citizen volunteers.

This committee, ably led by Mrs. Virginia O'Rourke, is seeking to focus attention on existing and anticipated community needs, and has already stimulated action in the Health service field. A general meeting of persons involved in providing Health Services has been held and that group elected a Study Committee to investigate the feasibility of founding a Regional Health Council and it is presently making a detailed study of area health needs and services.

The Social Planning Committee has been investigating the need for comprehensive counseling services in the community and it has taken an active supportive role with the citizens' Bureau which presently provides financial and para-legal counselling to a large number of area citizens. Support and encouragement has also been given to the Consumer Education Branch of the Citizens' Bureau which has recently published its highly acclaimed booklet "Dollars and Sense".

It should be noted here that the success of the Citizens' Bureau is primarily a result of dedicated efforts of its staff, and that the UCS is only a legal sponsor of the project. After a period of severe confusion at the beginning of 1973 in which several members of the LIP staff resigned, the 1973 UCS Board assumed the legal sponsorship of the project, took control of the funds (hitherto held in our Executive Director's trust account) and worked with the staff to refocus the project along lines which could be readily attained. In just three months the project has developed to its present stage and has received praise from numerous persons in this community and across the province.

At the end of 1972 the UCS board decided to exclude the YMCA from the 1974 appeal, a move I considered to be detrimental to the community's interests and I expressed my disapproval on numerous occasions in Board meetings. Though I had lost a battle in 1972 I pressed for re-reconsideration in 1973 and I am pleased that our 1973 Board has acted to accept the Y's application for admission to the 1974 Appeal, and that we are now working together cooperatively in a climate marked by goodwill and mutuality.

I am (obviously) proud of the accomplishments of this year's UCS board and my own involvement in those projects. We have struggled through four crises and have threatened close up of the LIP project, the Y reinstatement, an expression of no-confidence in the Executive Director by one Director, and a recommendation by the Executive Officers and four other directors that the Executive Director resign or be terminated. The President and the 2nd Vice-President have resigned, expressing a lack of confidence in the Executive Director. I suspect that a fifth crisis has begun. The present problem is compounded by the fact that the Agency has not yet enlisted a 1974 Campaign Chairman.

In closing I would like to thank all those persons who have worked with me during this year and in the previous years. May I also thank the Council for the constructive concern and criticism expressed during the June 18 meeting.

Pen. Security Is Weak

Montreal Le Devoir: When dangerous criminals start escaping over penitentiary walls and in droves, it is time for rapid and energetic action by authorities.

When, in effect, the public does not have the assurance that a solid wall separates them from prisoners considered dangerous, it will exercise uncontrollable pressure on all those involved in the administration of justice.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand must recognize fully that the crisis in the prisons is having dangerous repercussions in the administration of justice.

All evidence points to the need for an inquiry. Certain aspects already leap to the eye and Mr. Allmand has made reference to them. On one hand, the overcrowding of some prisons. On the other, the principles used for classification of prisoners. However, the incidents which have taken place at the famous "special correctional unit" (near Montreal) since Jean-Paul Mercier first stayed there merit particular examination. A glance at the unbelievable security resources at this institution, leads one to believe that it seems almost impossible for an escape to take place without the collusion of one or more guards.

"The Quebec Provincial Police, in possession of precise information concerning existence of a plot, promptly advised the prison's administration, but instead of time to double the guards . . . this surveillance . . . was never put into effect . . . Then all the guards have already forced Mr. Allmand to order an inquiry commission to look into the finding-out whether a conspiracy existed among the several guards to permit Mercier's escape. The inquiry should reveal, in fact, not only whether a similar plan existed which facilitated Mercier's first escape last August. In effect, it is certain that if certain guards had encouraged the help Mercier and his group escape, they could no longer remain in the correctional who could, at any time, reveal their participation and thus ruin their reputations. . .

That an escape takes place from time to time is nothing but normal: it is always regrettable but necessary proof that the penal system has not completely resigned itself to the irreversible need for life-long confinement. What astonishing is that the system succeeds neither in rehabilitating nor guarding its prisoners. It is this absurdity that must be eliminated — Mr. Allmand will perish under the combined attacks of civil liberties organizations and outraged citizens.

Cambodia Bombing

By BRUCE LEVETT

WASHINGTON (CP) — A grave clash between Congress and the White House over a bill initiated by President Nixon's veto of a $4.1 billion supplemental spending bill will shortly may be followed by another split, affecting government operations.

Shot down by Nixon was a spending bill which carried an amendment banning use of U.S. funds for bombing operations in Cambodia. The bill also covered many federal programs for the fiscal year which ends Saturday.

Now the stage is set for another Nixon veto which, if it comes, could signal the end of conduct of the country's business.

Yet the House of Representatives, mustering its biggest anti-war vote yet, wrote the same anti-bombing ban into a crucial continuing resolution which would allow federal agencies to function in the coming fiscal year until Congress can clear agency bills.

The vote, which sent the continuing resolution to the Senate, was 240-172. The Senate is expected to accept it, along with its anti-war amendment, before the July 4 recess. It, too, likely will be vetoed.

If it is, the president will have vetoed two crucial spending authority bills in a row in what a majority of Congress feels has been Nixon's broadest activity over Cambodia.

Without so much as a consultation with Congress, Republican man George Mahon, chairman of the House appropriations committee, the U.S. would have a financial standstill come to a halt — "a financial hatchet-fall flat on its face."

Democratic Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield says the government penalties could operate fiscally for two weeks or so before there is any threat of hamstringing.

Democratic Whip Thomas Eagleton of Missouri, Democrat and one of the leading supporters of the anti-bombing provision, said the provisions which would tie up the government over the issue are up to the president.

If Nixon vetoes the continuing resolution, Eagleton commented, "he would be deciding that the bombing of Cambodia is more precious than the functioning of the totality of American government. That is a pretty big chesque."

Nixon says that to cut off the bombing funds would be to lose all chance of a negotiated settlement in Cambodia. Administration observers here see an impasse.

Anti-bombing factions say they will include such amendments "again and again and again" in whatever legislation are up against Congress until the will of the American public prevails.

Nixon has pleaded that the supplemental funds vetoed along with anti-war amendments are vital to the orderly continuation of governmental business.

Unless some solution not appeared at this stage is forthcoming, either Nixon or the Congress, will have to compromise or back down on this issue.

Best Grower's Secrets Are Few and Simple

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

Jim McLeod says it's not the things you do that produce championship roses. Instead, it's the things you don't do.

And he should know. The Hastings Drive resident won his fourth consecutive sweepstakes Saturday as the first event over-all gardener at the Belleville Garden Club's annual Rose Festival, held at Centennial Secondary School.

Despite 870 entries, Mrs. McLeod's selection of roses won him top prize in three different categories along with the Belleville Yardmen Silver Tray as sweepstake winner. Asked to explain his success, he said: "Others do things I don't do."

He went on to offer three pointer he's picked up since planting his first roses and fingernails after moving to Belleville in 1957.

"I use an old hand-duster instead of squirting liquid on the plants," he began. "It's also quite important to have good soil. I plant bone meal, soil and peat moss in the hole when I am planting a flower.

"Also, it's important with roses not to give them a light watering. They're deep rooted. You should water them less frequently but give them a lot so it can reach the roots."

A federal civil servant for years, Mr. McLeod is now secretary of the Moira Conservation Authority where he is able to keep up with the latest developments in horticulture. Ongoing research by the federal and provincial governments offers a continuous flow of information on new plant varieties, insect control and growing methods, he says.

Some 1,000 visitors toured the gymnasium and cafeteria during the two-day show. A busload of 87 from Ottawa spent an extra hour in the school Saturday, so impressed were they by the local exhibits.

The Garden Club, formerly the Belleville Horticultural Society, had its own booth with 150 roses on display. Several other organizations also had booths and a trellised restaurant in one corner of the gym completed the scented setting.

Among Rose Festival award winners were: Mr. McLeod, sweepstakes winner, most points flower section, most points house plants and most outstanding house plant: G. Brinning of Cobourg, best named floating rose and sweepstakes first runner-up George and Gertrude Kennedy of Cobourg, best red rose and queen of the show; Tina O'Sullivan of 248 College St. W., best grandiflora rose; R. Badgley of 130 Henry St., best arrangement in the open division; Helen Taylor of 250 Bleecker St., best arrangement in the intermediate division; J. McCulloch of 250 College St. W., most points Peace family and Cecil Becker of 238 Parrott Dr., best bicolor rose in show.

There were also 52 awards given to entrants in the African Violet portion of the festival.

Queen of the show went to a Dipper Dan grown by Edith Stanton while Beulah Sills, president of the African Violet Club, was sweepstakes winner with most points.

Mrs. Stanton also had the best white violet and Mrs. Sills the best Geneva violet. Best arrangement went to Mrs. J. Laundry of RR 10, Picton, only non-Belleville entrant in the show.

Lillian McCoy constituted the best dish garden and purple violet. Eileen Easton had best miniature and rhapsody violets. Ruby Tieghsut had best pink and Tommy Lee violets and Marion Lambourne best unnamed violet.

Everything's Coming Up Roses

Jim McLeod holds one of his prize winning roses, a Woburn Abbey Irish variety, on silver tray he won as top point getter in the Belleville Garden Club's Rose Festival '73. Secretary for the Moira Conservation Authority, Mr. McLeod has won the sweepstakes trophy four years in a row. The secret? Dusting, bone meal in the soil and plenty of water, he says.

Garden in the Gym

spectators enjoy flower exhibits and relax in an impromptu restaurant at Saturday's opening day of the Belleville Garden Club's annual Rose Festival, held in Centennial Secondary School gymnasium. The two-day show attracted 870 rose entries and several hundred African Violets grown in gardens throughout the Quinte area. More than 1,000 attended the festival.

Fragile Fuchsias Made it to Show

Transporting fuchsias is a bit like taking a cake out of the oven. Breathe too hard and all those hours of preparation are likely to collapse before your eyes.

Thus it was no small accomplishment to see John Follen's display of potted fuchsias being gently wafted by breezes in Centennial Secondary School Saturday and Sunday.

The flowers themselves hang upside down from curved stems, dangling over the edges of large flower pots. Those in containers Mr. Follen had suspended from a basketball net support dropped a foot, obscuring their pots in green and a variety of brilliant colors.

Mr. Follen, a teacher at Loyalist College, had to take the flowers to the school from his home at 214 Victoria Ave. He said a stroke of luck made it all possible.

"I found some five-gallon drums that the pots fitted into perfectly," he explained Saturday. "The flowers were draped over the edges where they weren't touching anything. If they sit on something, they'll break very easily."

His good fortune resulted in one of the most attractive displays at the Belleville Garden Club's annual Rose Festival. Fuchsias, however, were in somewhat of a minority as 870 roses and hundreds more African Violets dominated spectators' attention.

Mr. Follen had a minority status as well.

"There's only a couple of other people in this area I know of who grow fuchsias," he said, "and I'm not sure who they are."

He cultivates about 30 varieties in his back yard garden, tending them every morning before going to work. They require special attention, preferring sunshine only in the morning and cool locations protected from the wind.

Most fuchsias found in North America were developed in California. Over 2,000 varieties exist in the world.

For many years, they were one of the most popular types of flower grown in England. But a case of mistaken identity nearly curtailed their existence.

"During World War I, people were growing their own tomatoes," said Mr. Follen. "Then they started to die. It was discovered the cause was white flies, the same kind that attack fuchsias. People thought it was the fuchsias that were causing all the flies so they blamed them for the tomato problems."

Special sprays have since been developed to fight white flies. Mr. Follen said the extra care needed to grow fuchsias — including continual spraying — is well rewarded each time the flowers bloom.

Dairy Bar Robbed, Campers Charged

PICTON — Crowds who packed Lake Ontario beaches and forced nearby retail owners to turn people away over the Canada Day weekend apparently decided to enjoy their three days of life in the sun.

Provincial Police reported few incidents in and around Outlet Provincial Park despite a complete lack of campsites by Friday night.

Even private camping facilities were filled to capacity as thousands enjoyed the first long weekend of summer.

Most offences involved liquor, Picton OPP said. Several minor thefts were also reported.

Only serious incident took place early Monday morning when a Ministry of Resources truck on night patrol passed a car parked near Hawker's Dairy Bar, located near the entrance to outlet park.

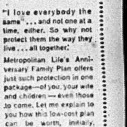
The truck's driver noticed a youth behind the wheel of the car, soon joined by two other youths running from the ice cream shop.

The car sped away but the ministry driver noted the license number. Police were called in and three persons, all campers at the park, were charged with break, enter and theft.

The three are Patrick Munnings, 21, of Cherry Valley, Paul Currie, 18, of Scarborough, and Timothy Leblond, 21, also of Scarborough.

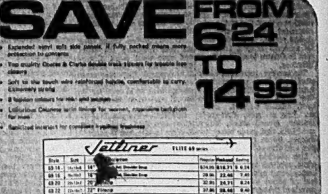
Missing from Hawker's was a quantity of foodstuffs.

Car Rolls Into Lake



WELLINGTON — A tow truck was called in this morning to free a half-submerged car pinned on rocks on the shore of Lake Ontario.

The car rolled down a 12-foot embankment into the water at 9 p.m. Sunday when a young Wellington boy, moving it backward in the driveway to provide more room for a family barbecue, lost control.



The boy, 12-year-old Joseph Courneyea of 314 Water St., jumped out halfway down the hill. The car crossed a roadway before plunging into the lake.

Joseph told police he placed the gear lever in neutral to start the car moving. When he tried to put it into park, it would not go, he said.

Joseph is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Courneyea.

Madoc Seniors Picnic

In celebrating "Senior Citizens' Week, members of the Madoc and District Senior Citizens' Club No. 473 were invited to attend Divine Service at St. John the Baptist Anglican Church. The Service was conduced by Reverend Thompson.

The Club was invited by the Moira River Conservation Authority to the Annual Senior Citizens' Picnic at the O'Hara Mill picnic grounds Wednesday that week.

A picnic lunch was served at noon by the Anglican women of Madoc. Over 60 seniors from Belleville, Foxboro, Carrollton, Corbyville, Tweed, Madoc and the surrounding area attended.

A program of music, songs and dances was presented by the various clubs, with Guy Hughes, president of the authority, as chairman.

The guests took tours through the O'Hara House, the Schoolhouse and the Shingle Mill.

Following the picnic, the local club held a short business period in the United Church basement. Plans were made for a bus trip to Kingston June 27. Members should bring their own lunches. A bus will leave from the United Church at 9 a.m.

Alcoholism 'Progressive'

"Alcoholism is an illness of the whole person. An alcoholic deteriorates physically, morally, mentally, and socially," said Ben Garrett, head of the department of addiction studies at the Waterfront Civic Hospital.

Mr. Garrett addressed 'Spring Ladies Night' in the Kiwanis Centre.

Peter Ramsay, who has brought great honor to the area and chosen to receive a Citizenship Medal for Ontario, was also present.

Mr. Garrett gave the shocking statistic that in one out of every 15 homes there is a person addicted to alcohol.

Although Mr. Garrett personally believes that for some people their first drink is an alcoholic drink, he said that one reason alcoholism is so common is that there is no way of testing to find out who would become an alcoholic and who would not.

It is a progressive illness, often taking a good 20 years to develop. From his own personal observation, Mr. Garrett says research has disclosed no common factor among the addicted.

Having had five years experience working in alcoholism recovery houses, he has observed that the chronic alcoholic needs to be given hope first of all— to realize that they must have something other than a medical cure. Once the hope is established, the alcoholic must want the change if he's sure there is hope of change. The third important step is for them to be able to talk their problem over in the light of the life they might have if they could overcome their problem. He reported that the alcoholic's average stay in a recovery house is 75 days.

Quinte Cuisine

Mrs. Martha Golka has cooked for a family of seven children. Her favorite recipe for cabbage rolls which she has cooked now for 31 years was handed down from her mother. Her children are: Mrs. Carol Guest, Mrs. Sandra Haines, Debra Golka, Robert, J. R., Donald and Wayne Golka. Mrs. Golka's hobbies are reading and knitting.

2 lbs. ground round steak
2 cups cooked rice
1 tbsp. cumin powder
1 tsp. chile powder
1 tsp. cinnamon
shake of garlic powder, salt to taste
Method: Mix all together. Remove core from cabbage. Pour boiling water over cabbage, cover and let stand for 5 minutes. Drain. Remove leaf at a time. Place 2 tbsp. meat mixture on each cabbage leaf. Place in a large casserole or a small roast pan. Pour can of tomato juice or tomatoes over rolls and bake at 300 degrees oven. Serve with a tossed salad.

Slick Trick

If the side of a curtain refuses to hang straight, weight it by inserting an unused key in the corner of the hem. This also works for light or medium weight draperies, and several keys can be used to straighten uneven folds.

Canadian Food Prices Compared

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

Prices of both sirloin tip roasts and ground chuck rose about 10 cents a pound in the last month in several Canadian cities while prices on pork and frozen cod dropped by about the same amount.

The prices of 17 common food items have been checked in three cross-Canada Surveys by The Canadian Press, conducted four weeks apart.

There are no spectacular changes, but many items continue the upward climb, a few cents at a time. One of the most consistent rises this month was in egg prices, up in nine cities by amounts ranging from one cent in Oshawa to eight cents in Winnipeg.

The surveys, conducted where possible in large supermarkets, included the following foods: One pound each of sirloin tip beef, all-beef wieners, entrecut loin of pork, first-grade chicken, ground chuck, frozen cod fillets, first-grade butter, tomatoes, frozen green peas, apples and drip coffee.

Also checked were a dozen white, medium eggs, a quart of homogenized milk, one 24-ounce loaf of sliced white bread, 10 pounds of first-grade potatoes, a 2-pound can of first-grade halved pears, and five pounds of white granulated sugar.

The surveys are not intended to compare prices from city to city. Brands may vary, and some items were unavailable in some cities on the dates checked. Sometimes the quantities in a can or package cannot be matched in all cities. In such cases, the amounts usually offered for sale were checked.

In the first survey, the lowest price for each item was noted. In subsequent surveys, the brand was checked for comparison.

Some of the findings:

MONTREAL — Five prices went up and four down from last month, but only one was down from its price two months ago. That was sugar, which dropped four cents to 72 from 76. Sirloin tip went up 10 cents to $1.83. Frozen cod fillets are $1.07 a pound, down seven cents from May but up 27 cents from April.

A Dominion Store official said the wholesale price on sirloin tip has risen, partly because of an attempt to encourage people to buy cheaper cuts, which sell slowly.

TORONTO—Ten prices went up, four remained the same, and none went down. Ground chuck went up nine cents to $1.68 a pound. Eggs rose seven cents to 71 cents a dozen. Tomatoes went up 10 cents for the second consecutive month to 79 cents a pound.

QUEBEC — Ten pounds of potatoes cost $1.09, soaring from 98 cents in May and 77 cents in April. Seven prices rose, six dropped and four stayed the same. Ground chuck rose 18 cents a pound to $1.07. Cod dropped to 92 cents from $1.19 a month ago, but not back to its 86-cent April price.

HALIFAX—Pork came down seven cents a pound to $1.12, and potatoes dropped 10 cents for 10 pounds to $1.19. Tomatoes came down six cents to 73 cents a pound. Otherwise, Halifax broke about even, with six items rising and eight staying the same. In terms of a percentage of total cost, the largest rise was four cents on frozen peas that went back up to their April price of 28 cents after a drop to 22 cents in May.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld.—Ground chuck here dropped from $1.18 a pound to 95 cents. Frozen cod fillets dropped six cents to 68 cents. Sirloin tip and loin pork prices were unavailable on the survey date. Wieners, canned pears, sugar and butter prices were all unchanged.

OTTAWA—Chicken dropped 15 cents a pound to 54 cents. Potatoes went up eight cents to $1.09 for a 10-pound bag from an April price of 99 cents. Ground chuck, eggs, tomatoes and coffee all rose.

LONDON, Ont.—The price of sugar dropped five cents to 74 cents a pound. Frozen cod fillets dropped to 92 cents from 99. Frozen peas went up seven cents to 34 from 27. Beef stayed about the same, $1.74 for a pound of sirloin tip, up only two cents, and 79 cents a pound for ground chuck, the same price as last month.

WINNIPEG—The price of pork roast dropped six cents to $1.58 a pound. Chicken dropped to 59 cents from 64 cents. Seven items went up: sirloin tip, ground chuck, frozen cod, eggs by eight cents a dozen, milk, potatoes, tomatoes and apples.

REGINA—There were some fairly large changes here. Ground chuck came down six cents a pound to $1.06. Potatoes came down 19 cents to $1.59 for 10 pounds. Tomatoes went up 10 cents to 49 cents a pound. Apples went up 16 cents for 4 cents a pound. Frozen peas went up six cents to 32 cents a pound.

EDMONTON—Potatoes and tomatoes both rose in price as they did in a number of other centres. Potato prices went up 16 cents to $1.65 for 10 pounds; tomatoes rose 10 cents to 49 cents a pound. Ground chuck dropped 10 cents to $1.05 a pound. Six items remained the same, including staples such as sugar and butter.

She's Serious About Kites

EDMONTON (CP) — The room is alive with colors and surprises, cluttered with painted rocks and paintings lined four or five deep against the walls.

On the floor near the door is large, colorful painting of youngsters flying a huge kite. It is a cheerful, happy picture that Richards says something is missing.

There is another one she's pleased with. It shows a flat, broad patchwork ground which somehow resembles a runway, some transparent wisps of white clouds, a pinkish sky, and high above all this one pale orange kite.

Ms. Richards is serious about kites. They're fun, she says but they also have meaning.

She likes nothing better than to be out in a decent wind with her fishing rod in one hand—she uses it to launch the kite—and the kite string in the other. She says it is "her a feeling of elation, as if I'm right up there myself."

Her initial interest in kites arose from her children who she calls "ritual objects."

The Edmonton artist, who prefers the Ms. prefix because she feels it is irrelevant whether a person is a Miss or Mrs., became interested in kites about a year ago. It occurred to her that the kite was a ritual object, so she went to the library, borrowed some books on kites and immersed herself in the subject.

She discovered that kites are seen as religious objects in some cultures—"Some thought they were the soul on a string."

She learned about using a kite to symbolize all the misfortunes this might occur in a person's lifetime. In China, a kite would be released on behalf of a child in the belief this would spare the child evil and misfortune for the remainder of his life.

"I can't tell you how exciting kites are.

"People think of kites as being little things for kids. They're really for adults—adult playthings."

When Ms. Richards gets on the topic of Indonesian or Malian kite fighters, she becomes even more enthusiastic.

In a village in India, for example, "the challenge is when a kite goes up in the spring."

"Everybody in the village, men, women and children, rushes to the scene with their kites." The kite strings have crushed glass on them and the object is to cross strings and try to cut the other person's kite down, she explained.

"If you can get that kite, it's yours."

Ms. Richards, who has not seen an actual kite fight, is determined to introduce the sport here.

Ms. Richards admitted when she became involved with kites she thought people might think her a little strange. "Mind you, most people know the things I do are a little offbeat."

The idea to launch her kites with a fishing rod came from a man in New York.

"It makes you taller," she explained.

"There has to be a pretty decent wind. You hold the kite until the wind catches it and then reel it out.

"You don't need to run with it unless it is a small kite or it's a heavy kite with a poor wind. I don't run with it very often."

Ms. Richards recommends kite flying. "It's such a nice thing and can't harm anyone.

She began making kites last year. There are about 25 homemade kites of various colors, shapes and sizes in her basement.

She is also continuing work on her series of paintings incorporating kites. "I hope to have a show of my kites and kite paintings," she said.

SERIOUS ABOUT KITES — Jean Richards, an Edmonton artist, has a thing about kites. She has made about 25 since last year and is working on a series of paintings incorporating kites. Here she flies the first kite she ever made.

Ann Landers

Girl Has 'Bed' Problem Can't Keep Out of It!

Dear Ann Landers: I am 20, in my third year of college and have come to the point where I must admit to myself that in many ways fall in love with men who hurt me most. I don't consider myself promiscuous. I just find it difficult to feel secure in a relationship without sex.

Since the age of 15 I have had 10 affairs. They have become less and less satisfying. Almost always, my lovers grow tired of me and I end up begging them to take me back. Some try to avoid me. Others have conned me into having sex with no strings attached.

I must admit I don't have a single friend who is not using me. I keep resolving that next time it will be different . . . that I won't say yes to sex until I have established a solid friendship.But the fear of loneliness and rejection keeps fooling me up. I am too embarrassed to discuss this face to face with a counsellor. Thank you for any help you can give. Ann. — Desperate In Oceanside

Dear D.: The way you set yourself up for punishment, your stated fears of loneliness and rejection, the inability to believe that a person could like you for yourself and not for your body—this all adds up to a girl who needs therapy. You say you are too embarrassed to discuss the matter face to face. Why? Do you believe the therapist will think less of you than the men you fall into bed with on a first date? I urge you to get counselling before you find yourself at the bottom of a depression you can't crawl out of.

Dear Ann Landers: Is it possible that a couple who have been married for 19 years can run out of conversation? My husband never was what you'd call a ball of fire but he was at least alive.

I saw this coming five years ago and tried to interest him in duplicate bridge, folk-dancing, encounter group therapy and new friends. He asked me to please let him alone. He said this was a fear I've seen creep up him as busy as he cares to be. When he wants a little diversion he goes to the garage and tinkers with his car.

I'm afraid I'm turning into a nag. Ann, but there must be more to life than this stick-in-the-mud existence. My mother says I should count my blessings and accept things as they are. (We came from the old country). Can you think of something I ought to try to wake him up?—Mrs. Blah

Dear Mrs.: If you knew how many husbands suddenly became too darned lively after 17 years 'of' marriage, you'd be thankful that all yours wants to do for "diversion" is tinker with his car. You can't force new interests on people who don't want them. Do your thinking during the afternoon and get off his back.

Dear Ann Landers: I am visiting here from South Alabama and finding it difficult to understand what is considered correct in social situations. I plan to apply for U.S. citizenship after I have completed my education, but I wonder if perhaps you can settle something in my mind.

At a dinner-party last night several women tried to get medical advice from a guest who happened to be a physician. They asked questions such as, "Which is better, the Pill, a diaphragm, or should a man get a vasectomy?" These questions were asked at the table between the salad and the soup. Are such questions considered good manners in the United States? B.B.

Dear B.B.: Such questions are not considered "good manners" anyplace—except in the office of a professional.

'Something Good in All'; European Traveller Learns

By DORIS CLARK

Have you ever thought that there is an exciting story in every single person one meets, no matter how uninteresting the outside package might be on first impression? Think on some of the very fine friends you now have whom you underrated at first.

I want to share a letter which the daughter of one fine friend wrote back to her parents when she was travelling around in various countries in Europe. She has discovered the truth that there is some good in every person if you dig a little for it.

"I hitched to Amsterdam with a girl I had met on the boat going from Dover to Zeebrugge and my new friend Ed met us at the station, recommending this particular hotel. It was late at night and he seemed sincere so we followed along.

"Up these rickety old steps into this smokey dimly lit room with bunk beds crowded together. It was my vision of an opium den or perhaps hell. Is totally new! I just had never seen any place like it — a hangout of the Alternate Culture (that is, freaks). Lots of weired looking people milling about, all strangely dressed but somehow looking identical — and all smoking the same trite far-out phrases. I was way out of my element!

"He said that it was his adaptation of an old Russian folk song and that MAMA meant love. It was a very touching thing to do . . . and I had just written Gerard off as an untouchable little greaseball. So, Amsterdam was a fine experience."

(Doris knows Canadian resources and can guide you to help you need. Write to her, in car ed this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Queen Seen By Seniors

Two full bus loads of Senior Citizens from Club No. 2, Deseronto, had a full day in Kingston June 27, when some 2,500 seniors congregated at MacDonald's Park, near King Street.

The motorcade and Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, and Prince Philip were seen by all in an open vehicle, moving at a slow speed.

It is understood that 30 buses from Lindsay, Ottawa, Belleville, Stirling, Madoc, Bowmanville, Deseronto and Peterborough were in attendance. There was entertainment at both Confederation and MacDonald's Park during the afternoon.

There were 90 members present from Tweed, and much reminiscing was done between old friends from different towns, while awaiting the BIG MOMENT when the Queen would appear.

Fashion Designers Bring 'Elegance'

NEW YORK (AP) — The theme was elegance when young designers gathered to talk fashion.

Short on bold ideas but long on adaptability, nostalgia or smooth-looking commercial concepts, they discussed their fashion philosophy Wednesday and showed fall clothes at a luncheon sponsored by the Wool Bureau, Inc., an organization for promotion and research in wool.

Some asked why young designers were doing such old-looking clothes.

"We think that glamour is important. Our contemporaries would like to have some of that back again. We love it. I don't see why we can't do it," said designer Pinky Wolman of Pretty Boy Floyd, who showed a slicked-up flannel tuxedo with top hat.

Jonathan Hitchcock of Hitchcock, Ltd., showed an above-the-ankle skirt and pulled-down sweater. Several said they had done some longer skirts for fall.

There were several versions of the big Seventh Avenue trends: the wrap coat, the elegant day dress and the tweed pants suit.

"Elegance is the way to define fashion," he said. "Everyone's glad to welcome it back."

Singers Gather

EDMONTON (CP) — An estimated 1,000 singers from around the world are to gather Aug. 13-20 for the third Canadian International choral festival. European and Canadian conductors will lead the nine different workshops.

After Island Weekend, Queen Flies to Regina

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The Queen flies to Regina today to mark the Centennial of the RCMP after spending a gentle July 1 weekend strengthening ties with Islanders on their 100th birthday.

During the day here, centrepiece in a 1½-week expedition through four provinces, she and Prince Philip relaxed with quiet crowds around the Island and made their only contact with French Canadians.

Throughout, the Queen has repeatedly sallied speeches with French passages reminding Canadians that their strength lies in the kind of unity which recognizes the independent rights of various groups.

Monday, she underlined that point with a visit to Mount Carmel Parish, 30 miles west of here, for a cold lobster lunch and a tour of a reconstructed Acadian village.

The royal couple toured a Roman Catholic church and house—complete with prints of the 1755 expulsion of Acadians from the Island by the British.

They entered the village through lines of mock British and French troops, the 78th Fraser Highlanders and Compagnie France de la Marine. The former is one of the British regiments that fought at the Plains of Abraham in the defeating French rule in North America.

The Queen and Prince Philip saw a display of French folk singing and dancing.

Security during the 1½-hour stay was the tightest it's been on the Island.

Their stay ended with a performance by Montreal singer Angèle Arsenault in honor of the gaiety of the Island Acadians.

She, like most of the Acadians among the crowd of 400, would not comment on the Monarchy.

Mr. and Mrs. Arsene Calant, married for 60 years, described the Queen as a "very nice lady" and the Monarchy with a shrug.

Others from the province's 110,000 population greeted the Queen in Summerside earlier in the day and here in the evening and day before.

Obviously pleased with the visit, 1,100 young athletes in Summerside and about 1,000 others applauded happily as the Queen arrived to open the province's Summer Games.

Outside the town of 10,000 about 600 civilians and at least as many military men stacked the Queen with a display of armed forces airplanes, a 21 gun salute and a concert by the Singout Summerside Singers.

In the evening, the two attended state dinner at the Confederation Centre—opened during the couple's 1964 visit—prior to a play.

Farm Feed Prices Increase Sharply

TORONTO (CP) — Prices Canadian farmers paid for feed and grain increased by 18.5 per cent in the first three months of this year, nearly five times the 3.8-per-cent increase in retail food prices for the same period, economic analysts have revealed.

Studies by the National Farmers' Union, Statistics Canada and the Agricultural Economics Research Council showed soybean meal to feed animals soared to $300 a ton from $110.

The farmers' total cost of doing business, including prices of feed, labor and services, went up 6.1 per cent in the first three months, economists said, and added that it is not the farmers who are making large profits from high food prices.

"Prices have gone crazy," said Walter Miller, vice-president of the National Farmers' Union.

He said 90 per cent of the soybeans were sold at harvest time for $3.38 a bushel and now silent farmers are paying $12 a bushel for soybean feed.

Gordon MacEachern, president of the Agricultural Economics Research Council, said: "It shows how little a prices review board can do."

He said as farm incomes rise suppliers are raising their prices to take all the advantage they can. Farm selling prices now are trapped above a new, higher cost floor and "reviewing these costs won't lower them."

The price of seed grains, now in strong demand, went up 31.9 per cent in the first three months, Mr. Miller said. The farmers who grew that seed sold it to mills at last year's prices and the mills are taking the profit, he added.

The cost of service industry sales went up three times as much as food prices, the studies showed. Food prices increased 3.8 per cent while the cost of services—like repairs, skilled labor, veterinary services, legal services, interest on mortgages and loan, property taxes and transportation—increased by 11 per cent.

The studies showed that prices for farm machinery rose by only 1.4 per cent in the same period. Much of the increase included cost of improved service introduced in laws in the Prairie provinces this year. Laws now stipulate three-year warranties on farm machinery and 24-hour repair service in all farming districts.

At Least 148 Die In Holiday Accidents

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A Kitchener couple and their two-year-old son, asphyxiated by carbon monoxide fumes from a barbecue burning in their trailer were among at least 148 persons who lost their lives across Canada during the Dominion Day holiday weekend.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press showed 83 died in traffic, 30 drowned, five lost their lives in fires, one person was electrocuted, another was crushed by a farm tractor, five were asphyxiated, one died in a skiing accident, a man fell to his death from the roof of his house and another lost his life when the light aircraft he was piloting crashed.

Ninety-one persons lost their lives in traffic-related accidents last year during the Dominion Day weekend and the Canada Safety Council had predicted 85 to 95 would die in traffic this year.

Only Saskatchewan remained fatality free.

Quebec led the death count with 39—33 road deaths, 24 drownings, one fire victim and a four-year-old child crushed by a tractor.

Ontario had the second highest count at 39—21 of these were traffic deaths including one pedestrian who was struck by a freight train. Twelve more were drowned, three were asphyxiated, one lost his life in a fire, one died in the skiing incident and another fell off his roof.

Over Million Won On Sweeps Tickets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A winner of the $128,500 prize in the sweepstakes on the Irish Derby Saturday says the only thing he ever won before was a $50 pound pie.

Ford Kennedy, 55, of Victoria said he won the pig in a raffle in Saskatchewan in 1946 and sold it.

Mr. Kennedy, a toll attendant with British Columbia Ferries, was one of six Canadians who bought tickets at Warner's Hall, winner of the Derby at The Curragh, near Dublin.

Each ticket got $128,500.

The others are Jacob Gogal, Lachine, Que.; Charles A. Leane, Granby, Que.; M. Lefebvre, Montreal; Francois Desrochers, Ste. Foy, Que.; and Mrs. J. D. Robinson, RR 1, Stratford, Ont.

Holders of tickets on the second horse, Ragapan, worth $31,000, were Mr. and Mrs. Warner's Hall, winner of the Derby at The Curragh, near Dublin.

"She could have broken the track record," said driver Ray Rose after Bonnie Hawthorne breezed to victory in 2:12. "but I backed her off in the final turn.

"There's only so many races in a horse," commented the Stirling driver after his four-year-old mare took a two lengths win from a field of four horses in the preferred number one race at the Quinte Exhibition Raceway Monday.

Rose will have to be satisfied with pacing Bonnie Hawthorne to a new lifetime mark, and a time two-fifths off the track record set by Early Lakes John at 2:05.8 some nine years ago. She went to the wire in 2:12.4 by Kawertha Downs Thursday.

"It got so bad that I could hear the horses behind me," said Rose of the 10th race finish, "she drove like a champion for me. She did everything I asked of her."

The other factor influencing Rose's handling of the pacer was a injury to one. Bonnie Hawthorne no longer belongs to him. She was sold to a Montreal country gentleman shortly through a contract whose wish is also to remain anonymous.

"That's why I don't want to push her," said Rose before the race. "I'm going to drive to win, but I don't want to hurt her. Would you, if there was that much at stake?"

Talking price, Rose said in the three months he's owned the mare, he's more than quadrupled the $2,500 he paid for her. "I'll have to get the money before I deliver the mare, but after that I'm not sure where I'll be going."

Rose heard talk Bonnie Hawthorne will make her Canadian Start in Hull, Quebec, before going on to New York for the Roosevelt Raceway.

Before he bought her, three or four previous owners had little luck with the mare between the wheels of a sulky. Rose, training her four hours a day, coaxed eight wins, 7 place, and three third place finishes in 15 starts from her chestnut frame.

"With kindness and patience, she began to win. She doesn't need the whip. She'll give you everything she's got just by talking to her.

"If my wife wasn't sick, I wouldn't sell her for $100,000," lamented Rose. "But another difficulty pregnancy will be the owner - driver.

Since harness racing is only a hobby to the service station operator, "I don't have the time to take her to the tracks."

Even though Bonnie Hawthorne has been shaving seconds away each time she performs on the oval, Rose said he still doesn't know her true speed. "She can do a lot better than she's been doing — I think she's capable of the two minute mile this summer."

"That's why she's too good a horse for me to hang on to. They won't take her here, and besides, there's not enough money in the purses. Though, if I had a half-dozen like here, I could retire."

In the first race, King Lester pounded the dirt half-mile, in dramatically-cheap 0:56.2 from his previous best mark of 2:18.4 set in Belleville in 1973. The four-year-old gelding put sulky ahead of field to enter the five horse winner's circle of lifetime record breakers.

Preston Starr put wings to feet to crack open a 2:14.0 previous time with a 2:11.6 finish in the fourth. Harwil Princess bent the corners to win in 2:10.6, better by 1:-02.4 than her previous mark set as a five-year-old last year.

In the seventh, trotter Sandy Caper won his first of the year with 2:10.4 figures, setting aside a previous record of 2:13.6.

In the ninth exactor wagering pacing mile, Al Vance took the wire for his second win of the steaming afternoon, Billy Guy tipped along in fine fashion to peel 0:14.6 seconds from his previous time of 2:13.4. Vance's own Peoples tripped the wire in 2:11.0 — the brown mare's best time this year.

Record win payoff of the day came on a $2 wager on Shamrock Hill Ace in the first. The 11-year-old paid $33.20 to win while combining with Diamond Dream for a $110.80 exactor payoff.

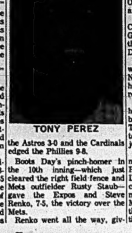
Reds Coming to Life

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Manager Sparky Anderson and slugger Tony Perez agreed on one big point following Monday night's 4-3 Cincinnati Red victory over Los Angeles Dodgers:

The Big Red Machine is back.



Perez belted a two-run homer in the tiebreaking off Jim Brewer, Dodgers' relief ace, to give the defending National League champion Reds their dramatic victory, one which Anderson and Perez both believe might be the spark the club needs.

"We're back in the league," said a happy Anderson, whose club registered three victories in the four-game series against Los Angeles and climbed within eight games of the first-place Dodgers in the National League West.

"We're back in there," agreed Perez.

In other National League games, Montreal Expos edged New York Mets 2-1 in 10 innings, St. Louis Cardinals topped the Philadelphia Phillies 7-4, San Francisco Giants outscored Atlanta Braves 9-8 and San Diego Padres beat Houston Astros 8-5.

In Sunday's games, the Pirates beat the Expos 6-2 and 8-4, the Mets and Cubs split 1-1 games, the Giants beat the Braves 14-6 in the first game of a doubleheader, then lost the second 8-7, the Phillies downed the Cardinals 1-0, the Astros the Astros 3-0 and the Cardinals edged the Padres 4-3.

Boots Day's pinch-homer in the 10th inning—which just missed the right field fence—gave Mets outfielder Rusty Staub—save the Expos' game. Steve Renko, 7-5, the victory over the Mets.

Renko went all the way, giving up six singles, three of them in the fourth inning when the Mets got their run.

Ted Simmons belted a three-run homer and drove in five runs—his second five-RBI game in five days—for the Cards. Simmons, who hit .304 and .303 the last two seasons, had been as low as .194 earlier this season, but is now up to .285 with a club-leading 41 runs batted in.

Cards starter Reggie Cleveland, a Swift Current, Sask., native had a four-hitter and a 7-0 lead going into the ninth, when the Phils got all their runs and Orlando Pena had to come in and nail him down.

In the slugfest at Atlanta, Chris Speier, Bobby Bonds and Gary Matthews hit homers for the Giants, Hank Aaron and Dave Johnson for the Braves.

Aaron's homer off Jim Barr was his 20th of the season and No. 694 of his career, pulling him 20 short of Babe Ruth's career mark of 714.

Clarence Gaston's three-run homer in the ninth inning boosted the Padres to victory. The Astros had issued an intentional walk to Gilbert just prior to Gaston's blast.

Today's games include a twinnight doubleheader between the Pirates and Cardinals at St. Louis, the Phillies are at Chicago for a day game, while the Mets and Expos have the Mets at Montreal, the Astros at Atlanta, the Giants at Cincinnati and the Padres at Los Angeles.

Charles Green of Ventura, Calif., finished with 216 after a 74 Sunday.

Four players finished at 217, including Duke Doucet of Victoria, Tex., Bill Wright Jr. of Edmonton, Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., and Bill Tape of Kitchener, Ont.

Low amateur was Don Graham, who finished 6th at 218 and who led the amateurs all the way. He shared 12th place with four others, all pros, at 20. Graham had rounds of 72, 73, and 73. He tied with him were Don Rioux of Aylmer, Ont., Herb Henderson of Ashburn, Ont., and Gary Pitchford and Al Balding, both of Toronto.

SET ENDURANCE MARK

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — The team of Ludwig Heimrath of Toronto and Craig Hill of Missisauga, Ont., driving a Porsche Carrera, set an endurance record for Mosport Sunday, covering 1,000 laps—back 207 times in six hours to win the Sundown 6 hour. Teams driving Porsches took eight of the top nine positions. In the champion ship class series, Fred Lambert of Cambridge, Ont., finished first in a Datsun 510.

Secretariat Gets Mail

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretariat is already cashing in on his performance as his owner takes care of his fan mail and his agent works on a line of merchandise bearing his name and likeness.

William Morris Agency, which handles many show business personalities, has been obtained to merchandise the Triple Crown winner who also won the $125,000 Arlington Invitational Saturday at Chicago's Arlington Park.

Helen Tweedy, operator of Meadow Stable and the agency it was hired "because we want to have some control over the quality" of the merchandise.

As for the mail, Mrs. Tweedy said, "he gets as many as 200 letters a day and we've mailed 1,000 free pictures of him so far.

The effect that Secretariat had on the public was clearly evident Saturday as a crowd of 41,223, largest at Arlington Park in at least 20 years, cheered his every move.

The applause reached a roar as he raced through the stretch to a nine-length victory over My Gallant, with Our Native third and Blue Chip Dan last.

Without being driven or run the 1¼ miles in 1:47, one-fifth of a second off the track mark.

The $75,000 first money raised Secretariat's earnings to $970,342 and left him a millionaire if he wins the $50,000 Whitney.

Casper Celebrates With A Little Dance

CHICAGO (AP) — The thrill of winning a tournament refuelled Billy Casper, who did a little dance Sunday on the 72nd hole after dropping a six-foot par putt to defeat the Western Open title.

It was Casper's first tournament victory since taking the Kaiser International in 1971.

Casper and Willie Aguirre, in turn-of-the century golfer, are the only players to win the Western Open four times. Casper captured it previously in 1965, 1966, and 1967.

"I call it the Casper stomp," he said in describing his footwork on the last hole that brought laughs from some 22,000 fans.

The last two holes were critical for him. On the 71st he saved par with a 15-foot putt after coming out of a bunker. On the 72nd he needed a six-foot putt for a par, a finishing 69, and a 10-under par 272 over the trampled Midlothian course. He finished the 54-hole tournament with 205, two under par for the three days.

The tournament ended in contention vastly different from the first two days. Friday's rounds were played in 90-degree heat while conditions Saturday were almost perfect.

Bradshaw, who had rounds of 71 and 72 on the first two days, said he is accustomed to playing in adverse conditions and the weather hurt many rivals more than it affected him.

"Everything I hit went right, even when I hit it wrong," said the 26-year-old Bradshaw, who turned professional last year. "When you do that, you can't stop it."

Bradshaw had nine birdies on the final day, including three on the first three holes. He also went one over par on two holes and drew a double-bogey on another.

Bowerman's final-day performance left him two shots behind Casper and another young standout, Gar Hamilton of Toronto, who put together a final-round 70 for a 212 total.

Tour veteran Moe Norman of Stratford, Ont., placed fourth with 214.

Host pro Len Harvey dropped to a 76 on the last round after earlier tours of 72 and 69 and

Troubles in Bullpen

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Texas Manager Whitey Herzog told David Clyde to smile but the Rangers' bullpen made him weep.

Clyde, the 18-year-old who once was the first choice baseball's free-agent draft last month, then went to the mound for his second major league appearance. He beat Minnesota, last week.

This time, he went six innings before a blister forced him to the sidelines. The White Sox managed three runs—two of them unearned thanks to Clyde's own throwing error—on four hits while Clyde walked two and fanned six.

Clyde turned a 4-3 lead over to the bullpen but Bill Melton greeted Don Stanhouse, in the fourth Texas pitcher, with a game-tying single in the eighth inning and Ed Herrmann doubled home the winner in the ninth.

Elsewhere in the American League, Milwaukee Brewers moved into first place in the West Division by four points over Kansas City Royals with a triumph over Kansas City Royals while the A's were losing to California Angels 4-2. Boston Red Sox nipped New York Yankees 1-0, Baltimore Brewers shaded Baltimore Orioles 5-3 and Detroit Tigers edged Cleveland Indians 4-3.

In Sunday's games, the Yankees pounded Boston Red Sox 11-3, the Brewers downed the Red Sox 9-5, then lost the second game of their doubleheader 4-3, the A's downed Chicago White Sox 6-4 and 3-0, the Tigers defeated the Orioles 5-3 and 5-3, the Twins edged the Indians 2-1 and the Rangers dropped the Royals 8-3.

On Saturday, the Yankees stopped the Indians 7-3, the A's downed the White Sox 7-2, the Tigers whipped the Orioles 4-1, the Twins downed the Angels 3-2, the Brewers edged the Red Sox 4-3, the Orioles defeated the Rangers 8-3 and 4-2. The Brewers and Red Sox were rained out at Boston.

Consecutive doubles by Steve Braun and Larry Hisle touched off a three-run fourth inning that befuddled the Twins best the Royals.

Boston's John Curtis cooled off the Yankees on eight singles and Dwight Evans drilled an opposite-field home run in the fifth inning to give the Red Sox their victory.

The Yankees maintained their four-game lead over Baltimore in the East Division but had their 13-game home winning streak snapped.

George Scott blasted a tiebreaking two-run homer off reliever Grant Jackson with two out in the eighth inning during the Brewers past the Orioles.

Mickey Stanley hit a two-run homer but a passed ball charged to Cleveland catcher John Ellis let in the rush that defeated the Tigers to beat the Indians.

Ken Berry's three-run homer off Vida Blue in the second inning and run-scoring single in the eighth sparked the Brewers over the A's.

A pair of tie-night double-headers feature today's schedule. The Brewers play the Orioles in Baltimore and the Red Sox meet the Rangers at Arlington. Tex.

The Red Sox play a day game at New York, while single night games have the Tigers at Cleveland, the Twins at Kansas City and the Angels at Oakland.

FOYT ENDS DROUGHT

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — A. J. Foyt won his first 500-mile championship auto race since 1967 here Sunday. He got at the expense of luckless Roger McCluskey, who has been the runner-up seven times as long as Foyt. McCluskey, 40-year-old veteran from Tucson, Ariz., was leading Foyt comfortably with just over two laps to go in the Schaefer 500 at Pocono International Raceway when he ran out of gas. Foyt had stopped for fuel 10 laps earlier but McCluskey had decided to stretch his 40-gallon supply to the limit.

Knechtel for Moro

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos announced today they have acquired defensive lineman Dave Knechtel from Toronto Argonauts in exchange for the Canadian football League playing rights to Tony Moro.

Moro, a Canadian, was acquired by the Eskimos in a blockbuster trade with Argos earlier this year but they returned his rights when Moro refused to report.

Knechtel, 27, a 255-pound Canadian who stands six-foot three, graduated from Waterloo Lutheran and has played with Argos since 1968. He was named rookie of the year in the Eastern Football Conference in 1968.

The Eskimos said the acquisition of Knechtel, expected to arrive Wednesday, ended a month search for a Canadian defensive lineman.

In his eight years, he has as a defensive tackle, defensive end and offensive centre.

31,000 Watch Summer Games

OSHAWA (CP) — It marked disappointment for most, but the first Ontario Summer Games ended on the upbeat Monday for more than 200 athletes, coaches and managers whose non-stop is the Canada Summer Games at Burnaby-New Westminster, B.C., in early August.

An estimated crowd of 31,000 turned out for the three-day Ontario program here in which the elite of the province's young athletes were culled from the nearly 1,500 vying for berths on the provincial team.

Nine of the 16 events were held here on the holiday weekend. Baseball events were held in Thorold, canoeing in London, shooting in Winona and waterskiing in Wallaceburg.

Diving competition was held earlier at Sudbury and rowing trials will be held next week in St. Catharines. The Ontario Lawn Bowling Association selected its team for the Canada Games without a competition.

Two national records were set at the Ontario Games, one in track and one in swimming.

Peter Bechis, 15, of Ottawa, topped 13.27 metres in the triple jump to shave .01 metres off the midget standard set by Ottawa's Jim Buchanan in 1971. He finished third in the event.

In swimming, 16-year-old Rena Klevering of Kitchener stepped all seconds of the former 58-metre freestyle mark when she churned through the Camp Samac pool in 28.3 seconds to win her heat.

She also won the final, whether record breaker was renamed to the Ontario team.

The track-and-field program of 29 men and 16 women to compete along with them in the swimming and diving events will have 10 men, 10 women and three coaches.

Among the 13 boys and girls 15-17 victor over Hamilton in lacrosse was Kitchener's Kitchener's women's softball entry, which supported pitchers Sue Thornton and Karen Kaufman with a 13-8 win against Mitverton in the final.

Peter Burwash and Jane O'Hara, both of Toronto, will head the province's eight-strong tennis team after respective wins in the men's and women's singles finals.

The women's field hockey team was selected from a tournament in which Senior Ontario took the field medal with a 4-1 victory over a Summer Games club.

Twelve of the Ontario team come from the Toronto area. They will be joined by Brenda Thomas of Waterloo; Pam Bronseau, Trenton and Karen Carman, Ajax.

Toronto Region edged Hamilton-Niagara 2-1 Monday to win the soccer gold medal.

Allan Churchard, coach of the Ontario team, said 38 of the 82 players who participated in the tournament here have been invited to take part in weekend training sessions from which 17 will be selected for the Canada Games team.

Hamilton's water polo entry took top honors, smothering Ottawa 12-3 in their windup game.

Toronto cyclists led the way here. Allen Brockbank won the ring the 25-mile time trial Saturday and Hugh Walton the 69-mile road event Sunday.

At London, a 13-member canoe team was named, including double winner Dianna Forbes of Sudbury. Miss Forbes, a student at Conestoga College in Kitchener, won the women's kayaking events. Also in kayaking Polovich, also of Sudbury, in the kayak pairs.

At Moosbeach the water ski team selections included two sets of sister combinations-Carra and Dean Pickell of Mississauga and Mike and Diana Cleland of Toronto-and sisters Jennifer and Monica Glanart of Ottawa.

Art, Grundy of Windsor led the shooters at Winona in 298 of a possible 300 points in centre-fire fullbore competition.

Pat Powell, Ontario 1973 champion Windsor won eight straight games to retain the provincial crown and added title and the right to go to Burnaby.

AMGOS NAB HIGH PICK

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Krause, an offensive tackle and third-round draft choice by the National Football League Minnesota Vikings, has signed with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, the Argonauts announced Monday.

Krause, who weighs 250, played for Central Michigan University for the last three years. He was drafted by Kansas City Chiefs in 1972 but said he joined Toronto because they offered him more money.

Swede Savage Dead

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Swede Savage, the race car driver who twice survived critical injuries, died Monday, one month and three days after being burned in a crash during the Indianapolis 500.

Savage, 26, of Santa Ana, Calif., was the third person to die of injuries at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway this year.

Doctors at Methodist Hospital said death was caused by lung and kidney complications.

Savage was competing in his second 500 when his Eagle-Offenhauser went into a spin on the 58th lap, swerved, smashed into the inside retaining wall and exploded.

"He had been getting better the last few days," said Gordon Johncock, the Indy 500 driver veteran.

"He had been improving a little bit and joking. With the improvement, I think he could show when I heard it this morning."

Driver Art Pollard and pit crew member Armando Teran also were killed at the Speedway in May.

Thirty-six drivers and 26 other persons have been killed in accidents at the Speedway since it re-opened as a dirt track in 1909.

Foreman, Manager Split Up

OAKLAND (AP) — George Foreman, world heavyweight boxing champion, and his 3½ year time manager, Dick Sadler, have ended their association, but both say there are no hard feelings between them, the Oakland Tribune reported Sunday.

Foreman revealed that his contract with Sadler had expired and will not be renewed. Instead, the former Job Corps Development Corp. will handle his boxing affairs.

"A fighter has got to have some independence," he said.

Earlier in the weekend Sadler said Foreman will defend his world heavyweight title against Joe Frazier in Japan Sept. 10 in Tokyo even though the World Boxing Association has refused to sanction the bout.

William Heiman, chairman of the WBAS championship committee, said he and WBA President Bobby Lee of Honolulu decided the contest "would not be in the best interests of boxing at this time".

Bruins Sign Four Juniors

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League announced Monday the signings of right-winger Walker Johnson, defenceman Virgil Gates, goaltender Jim Pettie and centre Yvon Boullion—their last four Junior eligible draft choices.

Johnson played last season with Oshawa Generals in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. Gates is from the Western Canada Junior Hockey League's Swift Current Broncos.

Pettie played for St. Catherines Black Hawks in the OHA and Boullion for Cornwall Royals of the Quebec Junior Hockey League.

23-1 Longshot Wins Going Away

TORONTO (CP) — Just four days ago, Royal Chocolate was just another horse in the Stanford Farms stable at Woodbine racetrack but now the colt could be the favorite for the July 13 Manitoba Derby in Winnipeg.

The sudden change of fortune is due to Royal Chocolate's victory Saturday in the Queen's Plate at Woodbine where a record crowd of 40,357 included Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

Even though Royal Chocolate was a division of the Plate Trial Stakes June 22, the crowd gave him little consideration and sent him off as a 23-1 long shot in the premier event for Canadian-foaled three-year-olds.

Owner Jack Stafford was a little incredulous himself.

"I never thought we'd win that race, never," he said after he'd collected 50 sovereigns from the jockey club. "I knew we would win only when we were five lengths ahead with only an eighth to go."

At the finish, Royal Chocolate, ridden by Colangelo aboard, was 5½ lengths up on Sinister Purpose, which finished second, and My Archie Baid, which was third.

Royal Chocolate paid a handsome $48.10, $14.50 and $9 to $2 for those who backed the winner. It ran as an entry with Good Port, which finished 13th in the 17-horse field.

Sinister Purpose paid $5.60 and $3.40 while My Archie Baid paid $5.50.

The $321,136 betting pool was the largest ever wagered, exceeding last year's $471,870 record.

Total purse was a record $124,150 of which Royal Chocolate received $84,830. My Archie Baid $13,415 and Albert the Second $8,415.

Stafford and trainer Gil Rowntree will saddle the Turf Club hopes Kodes in a quarter-final.

The other quarter-final is between Britain's Roger Taylor seeded third, and blonde Bjorn Borg, the 17-year-old Swedish whiz kid.

The women completed their quarter-finals Monday.

Australia's Evonne Goolagong, the 1971 winner and No. 3 seed this year, breezed past Britain's Virginia Wade 6-3, 6-3.

Another Australian, top-seed Margaret Court, dropped a set to Olga Morozova of Russia, before winning 4-6, 6-4, 6-1. Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., also dropped a set in beating Rosie Casals of San Francisco 6-2, 4-6, 6-2.

Billie Jean King, the title-holder and No. 2 seed from Long Beach, Calif., managed to best Kerry McBride but the seventh-seeded Australian gave her lots of trouble before bowing 7-5, 8-6.

The women's singles semi-finals will be played Wednesday, with the final Friday. Men's semi-finals will be Thursday and the final Saturday.

Making His Move

Mayer Upsets Favored Nastase

WIMBLEDON (AP) — Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., was to play his Wimbledon quarter-final match against Alex Metreveli today carrying a burden on his sturdy shoulders: he's been made a 3-1 favorite to win the title.

And it's all due to Alex Mayer.

Mayer, of Wayne, N.J., pulled off the biggest upset of the All-England Tennis tournament Saturday, ousting top-seeded Ilie Nastase of Romania. Nastase had been the favorite, and his defeat left the field wide open in the men's singles.

Connors, ranked third in the United States, has reached the quarter-finals both times he's played Wimbledon. Last year, he was beaten by Nastase. This year, with the fiery Romanian out of the way, the fifth-seeded Connors has his big chance.

He's breezed through the first four rounds, losing only one set, and with his double-handed backhand working to perfection he appears extremely sharp.

Connors gets his ranking this year because of the defection of most of the top stars, including Stan Smith, defending champion John Newcombe, Arthur Ashe and Ken Rosewall, who decided to boycott the tournament in support of Nikki Pilic, the Yugoslav banned by the International Lawn Tennis Association at the request of his national association.

In today's quarter-finals, Mayer was to meet Juergen Fassbender of West Germany, No. 8 seed.

Mayer is unseeded and one of only two non-seeds to reach the final eight. The other is the 19-year-old Indian, Vijay Amritraj, who plays Kodes in a quarter-final.

The other quarter-final is between Britain's Roger Taylor seeded third, and blonde Bjorn Borg, the 17-year-old Swedish whiz kid.

The women completed their quarter-finals Monday.

Australia's Evonne Goolagong, the 1971 winner and No. 3 seed this year, breezed past Britain's Virginia Wade 6-3, 6-3.

Farm Systems Pay For Rowing Clubs

TORONTO (CP) — Paddlers and oarsmen might get through the water in different ways, but the leading clubs in each sport can at least agree on the way to develop successful crews.

The St. Catharines Rowing Club and the Mississauga Canoe Club agree that the reason for their success is the farm systems they have built up in the schools in their respective areas.

Both clubs dominated their divisions in the annual Dominion Day Regatta in Toronto Sunday—St. Catharines winning the rowing title for the 19th consecutive year while Mississauga picked up their ninth consecutive canoeing title.

Joe LeBlanc, captain of the St. Catharines club, credits the club's success to the strong traditional title at the Canadian Championships in Hull, Que., or the Labor Day weekend.

Bob Smith hit a two-run homer in the first inning of the first game to give Richmond Hill the edge they needed in winning pitcher Wally Dyck recorded his fifth win of the tournament.

In the second game, Bruce Staughton hit a bases-loaded triple and Marc Pezzin homered as Richmond Hill counted five runs in the first inning and three in the third. Bob Domik got the win, his fourth of the tournament.

The losing pitcher for Toronto in both games was Mike Landers. Landers recorded four wins for Toronto earlier in the tournament, including a 4-1 victory over Burlington in the semi-final in which he struck out 11 batters, and was named most valuable player in the tournament.

Richmond Hill won three games earlier Monday to gain the final. They defeated Kitchener 4-1, Donville 9-3 and Burlington beat Niagara Falls 3-2.

Domik And Dyck Team Up

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Richmond Hill got all the runs they needed in two big first innings to defeat Toronto 2-1 and 9-1 to win the double knock-out Ontario Fastball elimination tournament Monday.

Richmond Hill had lost an earlier game and needed two consecutive wins over Toronto to win the championship and the right to go to the national title at the Canadian Championships in Hull, Que., on the Labor Day weekend.

Bob Smith hit a two-run homer in the first inning of the first game to give Richmond Hill the edge they needed in winning pitcher Wally Dyck recorded his fifth win of the tournament.

In the second game, Bruce Staughton hit a bases-loaded triple and Marc Pezzin homered as Richmond Hill counted five runs in the first inning and three in the third. Bob Domik got the win, his fourth of the tournament.

The losing pitcher for Toronto in both games was Mike Landers. Landers recorded four wins for Toronto earlier in the tournament, including a 4-1 victory over Burlington in the semi-final in which he struck out 11 and belted a three-run homer run in the four wins, one in 12 innings, Landers struck out 82 batters, and was named most valuable player in the tournament.

Richmond Hill won three games earlier Monday to gain the final. They defeated Kitchener 4-1, Donville 9-3 and Burlington beat Niagara Falls 3-2.

Rollins Construction Tops in Tourney

Amidst the confusion and hassles of the Belleville Softball Tournament Rollins Construction remained the only semblance of something definite.

Rollins wound up playing two games in a matter of two hours Sunday night, including the championship game, but a combination of great pitching depth and timely hitting gave the local Commercial League powers and , champ- ionship game.

A re-hitter by Larry Griffin highlighted the championship game won by Rollins 4-0 over Howard , a s d Robert Printing. The newly acquired Griffith allowed only one base runner in the game, that being on a walk to Moe Hunter in the second inning. He struck out 10 in the seven inning final.

Wayne McTaggart's two run single in the first gave Griffin more runs than he needed to stop The Printers and hurler Bob Ebbler. Singles by McTaggart, Glenn Carleton and Elden Gray bunched two more runs for the winners in the sixth frame.

The confusion arose in the Monday morning game when it was postponed twice in the afternoon due to miscommunicating about tyres and times. Tournament organizers had at one point planned to play this game Sunday night at 5 p.m. and then hold the finals next Saturday night but Rollins played the two games consecutively to end the tourney as scheduled.

Rollins made it into the finals by smashing Devolins 8-1 with five big runs in the first inning spelling an early exit by the Motormen.

Ken Denille threw a five hitter for the win while Ron Mackie lasted an inning for Devolin before giving way to Don Hickey. Ralph Plante's homer in the fifth added salt to the Devolin injury. Lyle Thompson scored the only run for the losers tripling in the third and racing home on Mary Stacey's single.

Rollins' most thrilling game came in a 2-1 11 - inning squeaker over Berard's Construction of Burlington, Vermont in their opening game.

Dale Duval scored the winning run for Rollins in the 11th. opening with a single and racing to third on a wild pitch and an error and then crossing the plate on Wayne McTaggart's fly ball to left field.

McTaggart was instrumental in keeping Rollins chances alive when he tripled home Duval in the bottom of the ninth to again tie the game after Burlington took the lead for the second time.

Carl Boomhower's triple in the fourth erased a 1-0 visitor lead. Ted Wells went 19 innings for Rollins fanning eight but the decision went to reliever Larry Griffin who took over in the final inning. Jim Smith went the distance for Burlington.

In the consolation final Cobourg Merchants stopped last year's A champion Oshawa Falcon TV 4 - 1.

Jim Chase buried the win, a five hitter, and Steve Ling. Carl Stacey and Mike McIver provided two hits each for the winners.

Don Calder took the loss for Oshawa.

Cobourg lost their opening game 3-1 to Dewolin but made the finals by stopping Optimists, New York, 4-2. Oshawa edged Burlington Vermont, 3-1 in the consolation semi-finals on a one hit 11 strikeout performance by Don Calder. The Falcons were relegated to B action by losing to Trenton Augex's 2-1 in the first round.

Howard and Roberts made the A finals with a 1-0 victory over Oddenburg, scoring in the top of the eighth to give Bob Ebbler a two hit, 11 strikeout win. The Printers bombarded the Elfin Juniors 6-3 in second round action.

TIGERS LIKE EX-CON

DETROIT (AP) — A convict last paroled from Southern Michigan prison at Jackson has been signed to a minor league contract, Detroit Tigers announced Monday. Ron LaFlore, a 21-year-old outfielder from Detroit, has been assigned to their Clinton, Iowa, farm club of the Midwest League. LaFlore, who served three years on a robbery charge, was given a tryout recently at Tiger Stadium after Detroit manager Billy Martin scouted him at prison in May.

Fuller Rolls His Own

Bill Fuller bowled his way to the top of the 4th Annual Bill Fuller Trophy Tournament at the Belleville Lawnbowling Club Monday to win the trophy named in his honor. The Trenton bowler rolled his three games with teammate Pearl Carr to a 37 plus four margin of victory.

Bill Fuller Wins His Own Trophy

As of Monday, Bill Fuller has his name on a Belleville Lawnbowling Club trophy twice.

That wouldn't be considered unusual by some people, but in Fuller's case, it wasn't a matter of winning the gold prize for the second time.

Teaming with Pearl Carr for the three games, Fuller came up with a 37 plus four score to win the 4th annual Bill Fuller Trophy Tournament.

Fuller won his own trophy. It was donated by son-in-law Captain Al Boyce of CFB Trenton and daughter Carma.

"I want my daddy to have his flowers now, rather than after he's dead," Carma's mother, Kay Fuller, quoted her as saying. She had strongly objected to the practice of naming memorial trophies said Mrs. Fuller.

However, Fuller still had a lot of kick in him. The Fuller-Carr twosome drubbed the Kingston team of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hoden 19 - 3. In the second game, Belleville's Alf and Doris Cooper fell 17 - 7.

In the final contest, the Fuller team downed the defending champions Ned and Marion Symons of Kingston.

Of the 36 teams bowling to the jack, 11 were from Belleville while four entries came from Kingston, three from Campbellford and one from Brighton and Trenton.

Al Lader First In Formula B

By DOUGLAS J. TAYLOR

MOSPORT — The Player's Ontario fourth in the 1973 Player's Challenge series, held here Monday saw a lineup of 27 Formula B cars on the starting grid.

From the start it was Al Lader in car number 75 who took the lead, and though pressed for a time by number 7, Bill Brack, he soon stretched his lead enough to ensure his first place finish. Brack finished second with Craig Hill coming third.

Of the 27 cars that started only 24 were left running when Lader drove his Brabham BT-40 across the finish mark.

Gary Magwood, of Toronto, who has been doing well in the series dropped out for mechanical reasons.

In the Motorcycle Grand Prix of Canada held Sunday, the Concerned Bee entry came down on Yvon Duhamel of Montreal, in the 750cc class.

Duhamel, mounted on his Kawasaki, followed Kurt Liebman who finished second, for the first two laps, and then taking the lead moved away from the rest of the field to remain unchallenged to the finish.

The 500cc event brought Jim Allen of Angus, Ontario across the finish line first with Steve Baker second and Paul Higgins third.

Allen also claimed first place in the 125cc event and second in the 250cc behind Theodore Hentier the first place finisher.

The Sidecar Grand Prix it was Murray Brown and passenger Allan King from Toronto in first place with their 900cc Kawasaki powered machine.

Second place went to John and Arthur Dailey of Scarborough, who chased the winners all the way with their 750 Norton.

The most dramatic of the weekend's events was by far the six-hour B. F. Goodrich Sundown endurance race.

Scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Saturday, the official start was delayed until 7.25 p.m.

Then a further delay came when the race was red flagged due to the crash of car number 11 which lost control and flipped onto its roof after hitting an oil patch at corner four, leaving considerable debris and blocking the track.

After a restart at 9.20 p.m., car number 74 Porsche 911s driven by Ludwig Heimrath and Craig Hill soon put a strong hold on the lead and finish followed by the Bytrax Brother's Porsche Carrera for a second place. Third, fourth and fifth positions were also Porsche powered.

The winning car set an average speed of 84.84 mph and a new distance record for the Sundown race completing 307 laps totalling 508.63 miles.

Only 22 of the 41 cars that started the race remained in the finish. Included in those that dropped out was the 427 cubic inch Sleed Corvette which suffered mechanical failure.

Saturday afternoon saw another in the continuing Bubova championship series for 2.5 Litre sedans and Formula Ford cars with Paul Lambke of Cambridge Ontario driving a Datsun 510, chalking up first place finish. George Cammeche finished second with Klaus Bartel third.

The Formula Ford feature was taken by Bertil Roos from Montreal, racing for the first time in Canada. Danny Burritt and Bob Beyea placed second and third respectively.

A Child In Shining Armor

If children were shining armor they might have greater protection in today's death-dealing traffic.

But the only armor we have is what we teach our children today in the form of rules of traffic safety that we hope they remember for tomorrow.

Parents must assume the prime responsibility for control of the child from the most tender infant years.

Parents must assume the prime responsibility for control of the child from the most tender infant years.

Parental control must begin with a child's first step outside the home. Only a child thoroughly drilled in traffic safety can be expected to cope with the traffic problems he will encounter.

A study of these accidents over several years by the Ontario Safety Leaguers and from the time the basic pedestrian rules that children should follow:

1. Go with the green, not in between.
2. Look both ways before you cross the street and walk (don't run) when you cross the curb.
3. Keep out from between parked cars.
4. Ride your bike safely and obey all signs and signals. (Small children must ride on the sidewalks and scooters on the sidewalks.)

Beautiful-legged Grable Dies at 56 of Lung Cancer

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actress Betty Grable, the Second World War pin-up girl with the beautiful legs, died Monday night of lung cancer. She was 56.

She was treated at St. John's Hospital last May and was readmitted last Friday. She also died been in hospital in May, 1972, forcing cancellation of her appearance No. No. to Nanette in Melbourne, Australia.

Miss Grable had posed in a white bathing suit, glancing over her shoulder with a coy smile, early in the Second World War. Almost three million copies of the pin-up picture which showed her shapely legs to their best advantage were distributed, mostly in U.S. military depots.

The photograph was made by 20th Century-Fox studio while she was under contract there.

Through the years, the blonde singing and dancing star maintained her trim measurements: 37-24-35.

Her 42 movies during the 1930s and 1940s grossed more than $100 million. She set a record of 12 consecutive years in the top 10 of box office stars.

The treasury department in 1946-47 listed her as the highest-salaried woman in the U.S. She earned more than $3 million during her career.

Her movies included Million Dollar Legs, How to Marry a Millionaire and Follow the Fleet. In 1956, she made her last film, How to Be Very, Very Popular. Later, she toured with different acts and starred in a Las Vegas nightclub production.

A self-effacing person, Miss Grable once said:

"My voice is just a voice—I don't breathe with my diaphragm as singers are supposed to do.

"When it comes to dancing, . . . I'm just average—maybe a little below. . . . I'm anything but a great actress."

Born Dec. 18, 1916, in St. Louis, Mo., she was the daughter of Conn and Lillian Grable. Her father was a stockbroker.

In 1937, she was married to actor Jackie Coogan. She divorced him two years later.

She married band leader Harry James in 1942 after appearing with him in the movie Springtime in the Rockies. They had two daughters, Vicki and Jessica. James and Miss Grable were divorced in 1965.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Nixon Optimistic About Food Prices

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon launched fiscal year 1974 with a radio report Sunday offering the United States an optimistic view of the food-price situation. He said prices are being held and that increased farm production will provide relief against high food prices.

He predicted that when the crops come in this fall, he may be able to lift export controls on soybeans and other agricultural products.

The controls were imposed last week after farmers complained they were caught between accelerating rising feed grain costs and frozen retail prices. Canada took similar action. The wheat crop is expected "to be the biggest ever," Nixon said.

The current price freeze will be kept "as short as possible."

Government officials are consulting industry and consumer representatives to design a realistic Phase 4 of the economic stabilization program "that will provide a basis for returning to the free markets."

Policeman Rescues Six from Convicts

NEW WASHINGTON, Ohio (AP) — A towering highway patrolman nimbly climbed into 6 besieged upstairs bedroom Monday to rescue a mother and her five children from two escaped convicts.

The one-man invasion by Capt. J. J. Fullenkamp, a six-foot-six 260-pounder who is the father of nine children, culminated when he overpowered one of the convicts, who was armed with a rifle and a pistol.

It ended a 59-mile chase that had begun with a prison escape and in which a deputy sheriff was killed when his car collided with a truck.

The arrested men were identified as Robert T. Hershberger, 31, of Akron, Ohio, and Richard W. Osborn, 31, of Newark, Ohio.

Police said two convicts had shaken pursuing police and walked into the Thomas Niedermier home. Mrs. Niedermier and five of her children were held captive but a sixth child escaped unnotice and notified police.

Fullenkamp, crouched behind a tree at the Niedermier home to try to talk the holed-up convicts into surrender, noticed five children peering out an upstairs bedroom, apparently unguarded.

He climbed up a television antenna tower, crawled through the bedroom window and dropped down to the ground without injury.

Then Fullenkamp charged into the front bedroom where the escaped convicts held Mrs. Niedermier. One convict whirled with a rifle. Fullenkamp slapped the gun from his hands. The convict picked out a handgun. Fullenkamp's right hand knocked that firearm against a wall.

Fullenkamp then overpowered one of the convicts and the second did not offer resistance, police said. About that time other police stormed in.

GOLDA MEIR

Another Sirhan Sent to Jail

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Sharif Sirhan, 40, eldest brother of Sirhan Sirhan, convicted assassin of Senator Robert Kennedy, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment Monday for writing a letter threatening to kill Israeli Premier Golda Meir.

In the letter addressed to William Rogers, United States secretary of state, in mid-February Sirhan said Mrs. Meir would die by March 1 during a visit to the U.S.

The letter was traced to him by fingerprints, the court was told.

Superior court Judge Lawrence Lucas also sentenced Sirhan to three years' probation.

Sirhan told the judge: "I do not believe in violence but I am ready to sacrifice myself to terminate the killing and bloodshed (in the Middle East). Violence only creates more violence."

Sirhan remains free on $10,000 bail pending an appeal.

Sirhan Sirhan is serving a life sentence for the shooting of Kennedy in Los Angeles in June, 1968.

Steam Train

OTTAWA (CP) — Steam engine 1847 came out of retirement Sunday.

She hulled and chugged her way to Carleton Place, Ont., 31.8 rail miles from Ottawa and, after replenishing her water supply, ambled back again.

She'll do the same every weekend for the Labor Day, pulling five vintage passenger and wayfreight cars with a capacity for about 300 rail-fans.

No. 1847 was built in 1912 by the Montreal Locomotive Works and spent most of her career in Northern Ontario, working for the CPR out of such places as North Bay, Sudbury, Schreiber and Mattice. She was overtaken by the diesel age in 1960, after grubbing around the freight yards at Havelock, Ont.

Now she runs under the name of the Credit Valley Line. She and was restored by the Ontario Rail Association, which plans to run her on a private tourist line northwest of Toronto. CP Rail engineers, brakemen and firemen were in command Sunday.

For this summer at least, the Credit Valley train has been hired by the National Capital Commission to run the Sunday excursions.

Records

HAMILTON (CP) — This city will find itself in the Guiness Book of Records as a result of two events Saturday.

Don (Crazy) Warrender karate-chopped through 3,740 bricks in four hours and 18 minutes. The previous mark was set in Seattle, Wash., in 1971 when Bill Corbett demolished 3,360 bricks in 13 hours.

Four boy scouts, ranging in age from 11 to 13, set the other mark by shining 811 pairs of shoes in 70 hours and one minute to better the mark set last year in England by four boy scouts who buffed 797 pairs in 18 hours.

Returns Home

TORONTO (CP) — The father of a Canadian girl killed with a friend by Zambian troops in May returned home today convinced he had been told a "pack of lies" by Zambian officials.

Oscar Dreiber, a retired Rockwood, Ont., high school teacher, said in an interview he and his wife, Sylake, flew to Rhodesia after the incident a weeks ago and gained extensive information that contradicted the official Zambian version.

...dy Found

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Toronto detectives have been called in to assist provincial police investigating the death of Karen Woodcock, 23-year-old mother of seven, whose battered body was found in a ditch early Sunday.

The body, lying under trees, was found by a farmer on a township road near here close to Keene, where Mrs. Woodcock lived.

All her children are under the age of 14.

Police are withholding details.

CP News Roundup

Many Draft Notices Illegal

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Many young men who fled to Canada to escape being inducted to the draft may be innocent of any crime but don't know it, says a Hartford lawyer who has both defended and prosecuted draft-evasion cases.

Paul Sherbacow, a former assistant United States attorney, said in an interview that "based on past case experience, a substantial number of these men would not face any real threat of successful conviction.

"My guess is that nationally less than 10 per cent of the Justice Department cases would be concluded by a conviction."

Sherbacow said many men who fled the country to avoid the draft were victims of procedural mistakes.

"The law in the area of conscientious objection changed so radically over the past five years that local selective service boards couldn't keep up with it," he said.

Karl Fleischmann, a law partner of Sherbacow's who also has handled draft cases, said that "the consequence of the failure of a draft board to follow lawful procedures is that an induction order which it issued may nevertheless be invalid."

Young men who are in Canada and do not want to return, Fleischmann said, could authorize their parents to receive a copy of their file from their local board.

"The parents would then be in a position to seek legal advice on their son's status," he said.

Envoy Active

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Huang Chen, China's top envoy in Washington, will fly here for talks Friday with President Nixon amid speculation that Henry Kissinger also will fly again to Peking.

In announcing Chen's planned visit, press secretary Ronald Ziegler said Monday that "this should not suggest there's a matter of urgency to discuss." He described the session as part of "ongoing contacts" between Chen and Kissinger, Nixon's foreign policy adviser.

Some speculation about an early Kissinger return t o Peking has noted it could coincide closely with a return to the Chinese capital from Europe by Cambodia's exiled Prince Sihanouk.

To Face Trial

BEIRUT (AP) — Iraq's security chief, Nasrm Kazzar, and his accomplices in the abortive attempt to overthrow the Baathist regime will be tried soon before a special tribunal, Baghdad radio announced today.

A three-man investigation committee has been ordered to look into the circumstances of the attempt, which led to the killing of the defence minister, Lt.-Gen. Hammad Shihab, and the wounding of Interior Minister Saadun Ghaydan, the radio said.

But the tribunal's verdicts will be unappealable except death sentences, the radio said.

The 35,000-man Iraqi army remained on alert, with tanks and armored cars stationed in key positions in Baghdad.

Miss Canada

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A tall, slender, 20-year-old receptionist from Port Colborne, Ont., was crowned Miss Dominion of Canada Sunday.

Debby Ducharme, five feet, eight inches tall, with brown hair and hazel eyes, was selected from 20 contestants.

Miss Ducharme, who said her only trip to date outside of the country was a visit to her grandmother in Florida, will travel to Jamaica and 300,000 miles, making 600 appearances during her reign.

Her first task of international competition will be the Miss Universe pageant July 8 in Greece. She will also represent Canada in the Miss World competition in London and the Miss International event in Japan.

Die in Trailer

MOUNT FOREST, Ont. (CP) — Three bodies, two of them persons were found dead Monday morning in a house trailer parked on a secluded field near this community, 36 miles north of Guelph.

Grey Bruce County coroner Dr. Keith Mellor said Raymond Joseph Schmidt, 28, his wife Lindell Marie, 25, and their son Darren, 2, all formerly of Mount Forest, died of carbon monoxide poisoning caused by a barbecue which was still burning in the trail where the bodies were discovered.

They were found by Michael Kelly of Mount Forest, owner of the trailer.

Networks Behind Schedule

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With the writers' strike against the film producers settled, television networks in the United States are scrambling to meet the deadline for the opening of the fall season.

Chances are TV viewers will be watching more of what they will be getting all summer; reruns.

The 16-week strike by the Writers Guild of America against the movie studios was settled last week but the networks still face problems.

Negotiations resume in New York this week for a settlement of the writers' strike against the networks themselves.

Only live-tape shows are involved in the dispute with the networks.

Hardest hit of the networks is NBC, which has long relied on the major studios, particularly Universal, to supply its series. Shooting generally starts in April or May on filmed shows for the fall season.

Only three of the NBC series were being made by companies which had agreements with the Guild: Sanford and Son and two new shows, Lotsa Luck with Dom DeLuise and Diana star ring Diana Rigg.

Many NBC shows may not be ready in time for its planned Sept. 24 starting date, a spokesman said. If a delay occurs, the network will go ahead with what is ready, eliminating the traditional "premiere week" for unveiling new shows.

ABC is still maintaining its schedule Sept. 8 start for the new season, but it will be a struggle to meet the deadline.

CBS sticks to its goal of a Sept. 11 season start. Most of its series are supplied by producers that had signed with the writers, such as All in the Family, The Mary Tyler Moore Show, the Waltons and Cannon.

Showbiz Shorts

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Police said Monday they still have not received a statement from entertainer Frank Sinatra in response to a civil complaint against him.

Frank Weinstock, a Salt Lake City insurance salesman, signed the complaint, alleging that Sinatra and two friends made verbal advances to Weinstock's wife in a Palm Springs restaurant, then assaulted Weinstock.

Police said they are investigating the incident, alleged to have taken place May 5. Detectives said that after receiving statements from Sinatra and the others, they will decide whether to file criminal charges.

NAPLES, Italy (Reuter) — An appeal court acquitted Italian film director Pier Paolo Pasolini Monday of charges of obscenity and offending the state religion in his film, The Canterbury Tales.

Also acquitted were producer Alberto Grimaldi and the owner of a theatre south of here where the film was first shown.

They were also acquitted of a charge of defamation of the Capuchin Order of Friars.

The film shows several bawdy stories based on the tales by Chaucer, some of which deal with priests.

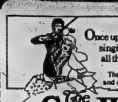
The appeal court also upheld an earlier decision of a lower court in Benevento that the film is a work of art and therefore cannot be ruled obscene.

CLAIRFIELD, Tenn. (AP) — Caroline Kennedy is spending part of the summer in east Tennessee helping film a documentary about the history of coal mining and miners in the area.

Recording Probe Is Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Internal investigations by major record firms have been urged by the head of their trade group in the wake of reports of payola, organized-crime connections and use of drugs by performers in recording sessions.

A federal grand jury and the district attorneys in Manhattan and Los Angeles are reported to be looking into the music business.



"I am confident that these charges do not accurately reflect the behavior of the vast majority of companies and individuals in our industry," said Stanley Gortikov, president of the Recording Industry Association of America, in a statement Monday.

"Nevertheless, over the past few weeks, I have been urging the chief executives of many of our member companies to conduct thorough in-house investigations ..."

A federal official connected with the grand jury has indicated that underworld figures have forced singers and groups to hire them as agents, but he did not reveal any names.

Another source indicated that one record company may have used organized-crime personnel to promote its records to black-oriented radio stations through payoffs and favors.

The Deseronto Red Cross Group held their closing meeting until the fall at the Seneyer Lake cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Walker last week. A Pot Luck Luncheon was enjoyed by all. The next meeting was set for the second Wednesday in September.

The afternoon group of St. Mark's Anglican Church Women will be holding their annual pot luck luncheon on Tuesday June 26 at the Tigers' Island cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tucker. All Anglican Church Women of the Parish are invited to join with them.

The Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian Church of the Redeemer held their annual pot luck supper for the congregation at the church on Thursday, June 14. The Minister, Rev. Robert Jones of Picton attended with all of his family including the new baby not previously seen by many of the parishioners. Following supper, the Klaver family who are moving from Deseronto were presented with a basket of gifts. The entire Klaver family was present with the exception of one married daughter. The evening concluded with Mrs. Blake Moore leading in the singing of some of the old songs which was enjoyed by the more than 30 congregational families attending.

Saltfleet, June 16, a bus load of adults and children from the Presbyterian Church of the Redeemer went on their annual outing. It was to the Valley Game Farm Zoo just south of Grimsby. Unfortunately it rained all the way there and for some time afterwards. It was impossible to take the Nature Trails but all enjoyed seeing the large number of baby animals and special displays for children when the weather cleared. Many hope to return when the weather is better.

The Catholic Women's League of Deseronto will be holding a bake sale Saturday starting at 10 a.m. in downtown Deseronto.

Mr. and Mrs. A. O'Reily of Mississauga and family spent Father's Day with Mr. and Mrs. J. McVicker of Deseronto. Mr. O'Reily had just returned from a business trip to Missouri.

To Your Good Health

Too Many Cysts Can't Be Removed

By GEORGE C. THORTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I am 38 and have cysts in my breasts. Sometimes they are very painful. My gynecologist said there were too many to take out, and to leave them alone.

My mother keeps telling me to go to a different doctor, so I did, and he said the same thing. Now I don't know what to do.— Mrs. F.H.

You've had two doctors tell you the same thing, so I would say it was time for your mother to decide that you have what they are talking about.

If it is true that each cyst is so picture, and the degree of discomfort fluctuates along with your menstrual cycle, it is along with the hormone fluctuations of your menstrual cycle.

If all is true that sometimes cysts can be removed. (However, that does not guarantee that more will not form.)

If these are all too many, they cannot be removed without removing the whole breast. In case of that the condition becomes too unbearable, but doctors are reluctant to do that unless it is absolutely necessary.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: Would you comment on tinnitus—what causes it and can it be treated and cured?

What effect can it have on a person so far as circulation and possible brain damage is concerned?—E.N.B.

Tinnitus is a technical term for ringing sounds or other ear noises. It does not have any effect on circulation, nor does it cause brain damage.

However, one of several causes is hardening of the arteries, which, of course, can damage the brain.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I have poor circulation in my legs and it is very painful at times. Have been advised to see a vascular surgeon for surgery. Is this successful?—F.K.

Assuming you were advised by a physician who had examined you, I certainly suggest that you do as you were advised.

But if you were merely told by a friend that surgery is the answer to poor circulation in the legs, I advise you to have some thorough diagnostic work done first.

My point is this: Narrowing of the big arteries serving the legs can impair circulation seriously—and vascular surgery (that is, surgery on the blood vessels) can be gratifyingly successful in the right cases. For example, I am familiar with instances in which the patient could not walk across a room before the surgery but was able to walk a mile or more afterward.

On the other hand, there are other cases of faulty circulation which cannot be overcome by this method. Therefore determining the trouble is a must before you decide what to do.

Contract Bridge

By B. Jay Becker

(Top Record-Holder in Masters' Individual Championship Play)

Rationale

South dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 NT	Pass

Opening lead—king of hearts.

Assume you're in two spades and the play starts with three rounds of hearts. You ruff, noting that all you can afford to lose are three trump tricks.

If you make the mistake of leading the jack of trumps you go down, losing first to the king and later to the A-Q-8. But if you lead a low spade instead of the jack, you come home—winner, losing three trump tricks instead of four.

The question is how on earth you can tell, without seeing the East-West cards, that the three is a better play than the jack.

If you give the matter some thought, you eventually conclude that leading the three is the better play. You start by reasoning that the trumps are divided either 3-2 or 4-1.

If they are 3-2, it makes no difference whether you lead the jack or the three. In either case you lose the trick and back comes a diamond or a club, which you win. You then lead another trump and, with both defenders following suit, you later lose a third trump trick and make the contract.

Now let's say the trumps are divided 4-1 and see the difference it makes in choosing between the jack and three.

If the declarer is the one holding or queen, the jack play does not matter, while the play of the three wins it.

If the singleton is not the ace, king or queen, the three play loses the contract, but the jack play also loses it. In other words, you can't make the hand if the singleton trump is a low one.

That is an excellent reason for leading the three, since it enables you to make the contract, whenever it can be made.

Tomorrow: Super defense.

One letter stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE — LOCAL IMPROVEMENT NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE THAT:

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville intends to construct as a local improvement the following watermain, and intends to specially assess a part of the cost upon the land abutting the work and the balance against the Corporation at large as follows:

STREET	FROM	TO	ESTIMATED COST	CORPORATION'S SHARE	OWNERS' SHARE	ESTIMATED COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE	ESTIMATED ANNUAL COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE
Railway Terrace	Bettes Street	Starling Street	$16,795.08	$6,190.86	$7,673.58	$14.570279	$1.7545320

EXAMPLE: Lot with 50 ft. frontage would be assessed as follows:
50 ft. x $14.570279 = $728.51
If paid over a period of 15 years at 8½% per annum, the cost would be:
50 ft. x $1.7545529 = $87.727645

2. The special assessment is to be paid in 15 equal annual instalments.
3. Application will be made by the Corporation to the Ontario Municipal Board for its approval of the undertaking of the said work, and any owner may within 21 days after the first publication of the Notice, file with the Clerk of the municipality his objection to the said work being undertaken.
4. The said board may approve the said work being undertaken, but before doing so may appoint a time and place when objections to the said work will be considered.

DATE OF FIRST PUBLICATION — Tuesday, June 19, 1973
DATE OF SECOND PUBLICATION — Tuesday, July 3, 1973

Tokyo Police Record One of Most Enviable

TOKYO (Reuter) — It is the proud boast of the Tokyo Metropolitan police board that there has never been a police corruption case in this city. The policeman on the beat has a reputation for incorruptibility.

Earlier this year, however, several police in charge of issuing drivers' licences were dismissed and arrested for allegedly receiving money from learners to dispense with road tests.

The national police agency repeatedly issues directives against damaging the honor of the force.

Policemen are warned not to drink too much even when off duty. They face instant dismissal if caught driving after a drink.

They are also told to try and avoid involvement in fights with drunks.

Visitors rate Japan one of the world's safest countries, and crime is not a serious urban problem. Tokyo streets are safe at any time of the night.

The police agency says this is due to a good relationship with the people, which a spokesman said is one of the most co-operative in the world.

Without that co-operation it would be impossible to maintain public security in an overcrowded nation of 106 million people, no matter how much power the police were given.

Police are armed with pistols and truncheons but say 99 per cent of all arrests are effected without using either weapon.

The great majority of the nation's 200,000 policemen finish their careers without ever firing a single bullet outside a practice range.

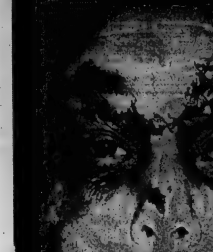
The police are subject to rigid discipline on the use of weapons. They are helped by the fact that strict laws keep guns out of public hands—there are even prohibitions on realistic-looking toy guns.

A senior official has to give a public explanation every time one of his men fires a bullet, even if it is in permitted self-defence.

The police are constantly working to improve public relations. The man on the beat is required to widen his channels with the community with regular house-to-house visits. Policewomen call on lonely old people.

There are three police-aerial supporters' groups. One handles traffic safety, a second provides social activities for single policemen and a third maintains a watch on neighborhood activities.

In this way strangers are easily detected and crimes more easily solved.



The crime solution rate in this country is one of the world's highest at around 57 per cent last year. For murders, the rate is 97 per cent and for major larceny over 80 per cent.

In some booming satellite housing areas, police overcome a manpower shortage with a "mobile police box," a van that moves from area to area on a regular basis accepting complaints and inquiries.

In rural districts police open their stations on Sundays, often stocking books and giving reading and writing lessons.

A spokesman said the only problem police sometimes faced was collecting information from the public on crimes, particularly those committed by organized gangsters, because police assurances of protection.

Even after regular crackdowns on their activities the gangs continue to grow and in recent months several gangsters have died in daylight public shoot - outs.

Frenchman Recalls Fighting for Cong

PARIS (Reuter) — France's war in Indochina, the savage campaign from 1946 to 1954 which preceded American involvement, ended more than a decade later for some of the men who waged it.

For Jean Chabert, a teenager here at the end of World War French resistance, the last act took place on May 7, 1954 France's final defeat as Dien Bien Phu when he stood dishonored against the wall of a bleak military prison, beaten, kicked and insulted by his former comrades-in-arms.

For Chabert was one of the 300 Frenchmen who went over to the Communists in Indochina for ideological reasons or simply through adventure. He fought against his own countrymen and seeded planned by all sides.

The extraordinary story of these men, long kept silent by the French Army which preferred to honor its 90,000 Indochina dead than to have become known through a give book.

The book, Ho Chi Minh's White Soldiers by author-journalist Jacques Dalloz, is the exhaustive 530-page study of the subject, full of tales of courage, treason and sudden death among the hills of the Vietnam highlands and the mosquito-infested river deltas.

The story also tells of 1,400 Foreign Legion deserters of the campaign—Spanish Republicans, pressed into by Communist soldiers, and German SS veterans of Stalingrad —awaiting an once to sever the elusive taste of victory.

The adventure of Jean Chabert who now lives in a dreary town in a dreary part of France, where his name means nothing to his neighbors, is one of the most typical and the most tragic.

Chabert only told his story gradually to Jacques Doyon for he knows that there are still bitter men in France and in whom he sailed to Indochina, in theory to fight Communism, and who have scores to settle.

Born to a family of laborers and factory hands strongly attached to pre-war ideals of fraternity and solidarity, Chabert joined the resistance when hardly 17, fighting the Germans as a member of a Communist-led band of partisans.

When France was liberated, he signed up like many others to fight on with the regular army until the final defeat of Germany and Japan.

But when the young paratrooper was sent to the Far East, he was not the freshly defeated Japanese whom he faced but the newly organized Viet Minh. Ho Chi Minh's Communist-national liberation movement of Vietnam.

There were no helicopters to ferry the French troops to and from battle, and a staunch and destroy operation, then a big-day forced march into the hostile jungle where the weak were left along the way and wounded died of gangrene before they were taken to hospital.

It was a vicious war where both sides used surprise and treachery as decisive weapons.

There were rarely any survivors when a unit of either camp fell into an ambush such as the one in which Jean Chabert was captured. His captors had no trouble persuading him that it was fighting for the wrong cause."

Along with several other Frenchmen and a band of desperate deserters from the French Foreign Legion, Chabert served in a special unit which roamed the Red River delta entering French posts in regular uniform only to turn their guns on the unsuspecting defenders from within.

On pension this journey from 1954, practically thrown out of Hanoi as a relic of the past.

But before he was released, he was subjected to the contrived yard of a Marseille military prison to a session of brutality by Communist Vietnamese veterans still in service.

Niger Preparing for Influx of Scientists

NIAMEY, Niger (Reuter) — The landlocked West African republic of Niger is preparing for a big influx of scientists arriving to observe a total eclipse of the sun here June 30.

Conditions in the northeast of Niger, which has a population of only four million but an area more than twice that of France, are said to be almost ideal for observing the seven - minute eclipse.

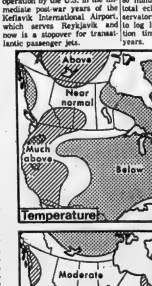
Scientists believe this year's eclipse will be one of the most interesting this century with near-perfect observation conditions are unlikely to recur before the year 2186.

So the government of this vast but poor country is preparing reception areas in the desolate Air Highlands of the south Sahara which receive more than 6,000 feet and have only one main centre of population, the caravan town of Agades.

The best area of observation is a 125-mile north-south strip from the Atlantic coast of Mauritania across West Africa to Chad in the centre of the continent.

Conditions in the Air Highlands are especially good because of their height and because cloud cover is unlikely—rain has fallen in the area this year.

A special committee set up by the government has organized four observation posts at El-Miki, Krik-Krik, Timia and Iferouane.



The committee has built 2,000 dwellings in the traditional style of the area and tanks will also be available for visiting scientists and journalists.

But the arid climate, which virtually ensures that there will be no clouds to spoil the view during the eclipse, also created a crucial water shortage, and the government has ordered all three special cavalry units to provide the visitors with drinking water.

Three landing strips in the area have been improved to accommodate the airliner Concorde will streak overhead at more than twice the speed of sound.

The Concorde, flying from Las Palmas in the Canary Islands to Chad at an altitude of 60,000 feet, will carry an international group of scientists and chase the shadow cast by the moon across the surface of the earth.

By doing so, the airborne scientists will get an uninterrupted 90 minutes' observation of the total eclipse—time which observatories have only been able to log 129 minutes of observation time during the last 50 years.

Cool and Dry

Below normal temperatures are expected to cover most of Ontario during July according to the 30-day outlook of the United States Weather Bureau. Above normal temperatures are expected in parts of the prairies and the East Coast while the rest of Canada will have near normal conditions. Near normal precipitation is expected to cover most of the country. The outlook is not a specific forecast and changes may occur. (CP Newsmap)

Iceland Air Patrols: Declining NATO Role

KEFLAVIK, Iceland (Reuter) — From this gale-swept volcanic peninsula on the south-west tip of Iceland, United States air patrols continue to maintain round-the-clock surveillance on the movements of Soviet submarines in the north Atlantic.

Some 3,200 men of the U.S. Navy and Air Force man the Keflavik base, composing the Iceland defence force established under the 1951 agreement signed by the governments at the height of the cold war between East and West.

But today—as tension between the Western and Communist countries seems to ease—there is growing feeling among many Icelandic that the bases like Keflavik have a declining role in the security alliance of North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

In the first years of its existence, the U.S. base was a key link in a chain set up by NATO to control what was seen in the West as the Communist threat. Planes based at Keflavik could monitor movement out of the Soviet fleet's northern headquarters in Murmansk.

In recent years, with the development of sophisticated sonar detection devices, patrol aircraft from Keflavik have concentrated on plotting the movements of Soviet submarines as they moved out of Murmansk towards southern Europe, North America and the Caribbean.

However, some Western defence experts feel that even this is no longer such a vital task in an age when both East and West have clearly recognized that neither could hope to emerge victorious from any nuclear conflict.

Inside Iceland itself, there has always been a section of opinion on both the extreme left and the extreme right opposing the existence of the base, and the present liberal-leftist coalition government has pledged to have the U.S. forces out by 1975.

Right-wing nationalists feel that the presence of a large number of Americans so close to the capital of Reykjavik only 30 miles away would have a corrosive effect on Icelandic culture and national identity.

The Icelandic left fought the base on the ground that it would make the country of 208,000 people a prime target in any war between East and West. Today the People's Alliance party, which is largely Communist but has a strong nationalist tinge, uses both arguments.

U.S. officials have been conscious of the negative feeling a large American presence could arouse in a small nation and U.S. military personnel are rarely seen in Reykjavik. They live largely on the base which has extensive recreational facilities.

The purpose of the base, according to the 1951 agreement was "to contribute peace and security in the North Atlantic Treaty Area sharing regard to the fact that the people of Iceland cannot themselves be equately secure to bear own defences."

Iceland has no armed forces, despite its strategic position half way between northern Europe and North America, and this led to its occupation by British and later U.S. forces during the Second World War to prevent the island's falling into German hands.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill noted at the time: "Whoever possesses Iceland holds a pistol firmly pointed at England, America and Canada."

The base developed from the operation by the U.S. in the immediate post-war years of the Keflavik International Airport, which serves Reykjavik and now is a stopover for transatlantic passenger jets.

Price-earnings Ratio Can Make Stocks Tick

TORONTO (CP) — When an investor considers buying a new stock, one of the tools he uses to determine whether it is cheap enough is the price-earnings ratio, computed by dividing the current market price by net earnings per share.

For example, a stock priced at $33.25, whose estimated per share earnings are $2.50, would have a price-earnings ratio of 13.3.

It sounds like a matter of simple arithmetic. But, a recent Babson's report warns that a potential investor should take a close look at the components of the ratio.

The earnings per share figure should be before extraordinary items, that is, items which do not usually appear every year. A sale of equipment might, for example, bring a gain in earnings for the year but contribute nothing to the earning power of basic operations.

The investor should look for any increase in the number of shares issued for that year which would, in effect, lower the per-share earnings growth rate from that of actual net income. Stock options should also be considered as potential total shares.

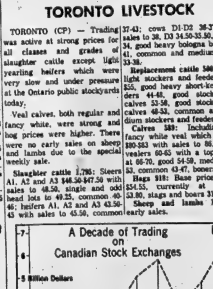
Takes Chance

HAMILTON (CP) — When Sir Edwin (Ted) Leather, who grew up in Hamilton, was offered the post as governor of Bermuda, he considered carefully the shooting death of his predecessor but then decided it was a perfectly acceptable risk.

Sir Edwin, here for a two-week vacation to visit his parents and friends, spoke about his new post in an interview Saturday at Hostler's Tavern, a bar Club where he was staying.

He is to be sworn in as the Queen's representative in Bermuda July 16.



"All over the world, you run the risk of lunatics in public life," he said. "Late there is paradisial compared to places like Northern Ireland."

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP) — Trading was active at steady prices in all classes and grades of slaughter cattle except light yearling heifers which were very slow and under pressure at the Ontario public stockyards today.

Veal calves, both regular and fancy white, were strong and top prices were higher. There were no early sales on sheep and lambs due to the special weekly sale.

Slaughter cattle 1,700: Steers A1, A2 and A3 $48.50-$47.50 with cows to 48.50, single and odd head lots to 49.25, common 46; heifers A1, A2 and A3 43.50 with sales to 45.50, common

Value Climbs

The annual value of trading in listed issues on the three major Canadian stock exchanges almost tripled in the last 10 years.

Toronto leads the way, jumping from over $2 billion in 1963 to $6-billion in 72. Montreal climbed from $764 million to over $2 billion. Vancouver increased to $784 million in 1972 from $125 million in 1963. (CP Newsmap)

Babe Better

LONDON (AP) — A mother wept with relief Monday because her baby cried.

It was the first outward sign of improvement in seven-week-old Babe Wilson, who was taken from her carriage a week ago and abandoned for days in the park.

When Kristen was found Saturday, doctors said the baby was suffering from pneumonia, exposure and dehydration. They gave her little hope to later more than a whisper.

But Wednesday General Hospital, treating Kristen in its special baby care unit, said Mom gave the baby her cry again.

That was a slight improvement, the hospital said, but a spokesman stressed that the infant remained gravely ill.

Police said Mom and Kristen had lain alone in the suburban apartment for "for about three days or a few hours more."

Hees Outlines 5-point Trade Incentive Program

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Former Conservative trade minister George Hees outlined today a five-point incentives program he said the government should adopt to stimulate new jobs.

Speaking at the National Defence College, Mr. Hees said the government should offer more incentives to lower labor costs, increase productivity, expand research and development, increase export trade and provide for more domestic processing of primary products.

He said budget measures introduced by Finance Minister John Turner reducing corporate income taxes would not necessarily create more jobs because the recipients of the tax cut can spend the saving as they wish.

Mr. Hees said business has been going to other countries that can produce goods more cheaply because of low labor costs.

He urged the government to offer an employment incentive to all business to be paid in proportion to the number of jobs created.

Nuclear Plant Expansion Won't Harm Iverhuron

INVERHURON, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Hydro officials have assured residents and cottagers in this Lake Huron community about 40 miles southwest of Owen Sound that expansion of the Bruce nuclear power development will not harm their community.

Inverhuron is at the south end of Inverhuron Park. The owners of 400 permanent homes and cottages in the area have been apprehensive since June 7 when the provincial government announced it will turn part of the park over to Hydro to act as a buffer zone between the nuclear power station and the community.

Don White, Hydro's community relations officer for the Bruce project, said a meeting of about 200 persons here Saturday that Hydro does not need more land than the 959-acre park, except for some properties on the eastern edge.

"Hydro will not expropriate if an owner is unwilling to sell," he said.

While said cottagers still will have free access to the park and that it would not be ruined by the doubling of the size of the nuclear power project.

Soviet Jet Crash Kills 9

AMMAN (Reuter) — The death toll in the Amman crash of a Soviet jet airliner climbed to nine Sunday when another crew member died of injuries.

Amman's military hospital identified the latest victim as Grant Karkurian, believed to be an Armenian flight-deck crew member aboard the Aeroflot TU-134.

The plane, with 77 passengers and a crew of seven aboard, overshot the runway at takeoff Saturday and hit a house.

Karkurian and the Soviet copilot, Seymonen Sredan, were the only fatalities aboard the plane. The seven others—four of them children—were killed on the ground.

Eight people remained in the hospital Sunday and sources said all were in good condition with the exception of Joseph Racine of the United States.

Canada Leaving

Nobody Offers To Fill Gap

SAIGON (CP) — In less than a month the 290-member Canadian truce-observer contingent vacates South Vietnam but so far no replacement has materialized.

There is no strong sign that any country is ready to take over the job that Canada is abandoning because of its frustrations and lack of effectiveness in observing the South Vietnamese truce.

A South Vietnamese source says the government has found one or two countries willing to become the fourth member of the International Commission of Control and Supervision, to serve with Hungary, Poland and Indonesia.

He said the other three parties in the Vietnam war—the United States, the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government and North Vietnam—must consider these offers.

But sources who keep an interested eye on the search for a possible replacement say they know of no country with the qualifications for the job which has indicated willingness to take over the post the Canadians will vacate July 31.

Canadians say they are having a hard time convincing some officials—both in government and within the ICCS—that they really are leaving and will not change their minds.

The Saigon press remains despite such flat statements as "We are leaving July 31," and "We are leaving July 31," unconvinced with emphasis by Vernon Turner, deputy Canadian delegation leader, in a local interview Tuesday.

The Canadians have not made the search for a replacement easy because of their continuing "open-mouth policy" of saying what they think. It is well known that Canada considers that the Polish and Hungarian delegations are frustrating the work of the commission and are acting on behalf of the PRG.

The attitude of the two Communist countries has put Canada in the position of appearing to take the side of the South Vietnamese in many cases, although Canada stoutly maintains that it is neutral in all its actions.

No doubts the detention of two Canadian officers by the Viet Cong near Cam Tam, 35 miles from Saigon, may also make any possible successor stop and think.

Hurricane Brushes Bermuda

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — Alice, the season's first hurricane, brushed past Bermuda early today, did no major damage and dumped at least two inches of rain that ended a three-month drought in the British island colony.

No casualties were reported, but the storm confined tourists to their hotels and cruise ships.

A few trees were blown down, and a few electric lines were downed. These were being cleared quickly today amid rain squalls that continued to pelt the island.

By 7 a.m. EDT the eye of the storm was reported 40 miles to the northwest, heading north to northeast, with no other land near.

The National Hurricane Centre in Miami said Alice picked up strength as it approached the British colony and its maximum sustained winds rose to an estimated 80 miles an hour, with gusts to 115.

East-West Contacts Sought

Sharp Is Pushing Free Movement

HELSINKI (CP) — Canada is making a new initiative in an effort to make sure the European security conference addequately considers an issue considered by Ottawa to be all-important—that of greater human contacts and freer movement of peoples between East and West.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced the move today in a speech to representatives of the 35 countries attending the current conference sessions here.

The question of freer movement "is, in many ways, the touchstone of the success of the conference," Sharp said.

"If we can achieve gradual but meaningful progress in removing barriers to the movement of persons and information, we will be well on the way to achieving our goals—increasing the mutual understanding and confidence necessary for any enduring security and co-operation."

For these reasons, said Sharp, he will be asking the executive secretary of the conference to give consideration to Canadian submission on this question for consideration at the second stage of the conference.

The second stage, expected to begin in Geneva two months from now, will see committee experts grappling with the chairman of producing a final series of decisions agreeable to the 35 East-West countries participating in the security conference.

The Canadian move served as a Western counterpart to Communist initiatives made prior to the current talks and in the Eastern interpretation of issues involving security and co-operation.

But the Canadians were careful to make allowance for the projected duties of the conference's second stage.

The view in many Western quarters is that only out of the tough and detailed bargaining of the second stage can come final conference declarations about the major issues connected with European security and co-operation.

Sharp told the conference that "without improvement in human contacts and relations of all kinds the work that we shall do here and in Geneva will have limited practical effect and little meaning for our peoples."

Further indicating the contents of the Canadian submission, he said that "more normal relations and expanded co-operation should involve not only governments and official bodies" but should also extend to the level of person-to-person contacts."

Citing the question of divided families, the Canadian minister conceded that specific cases must be dealt with on a bilateral basis—that is, state to state.

But he added that "the enunciation of principles and the adoption of concrete measures on divided families and similar problems would, we believe, substantially improve international relations."

Sharp reaffirmed the need for Canadian involvement in the current conference and European affairs.

He spoke of "the interdependence of Europe and North America . . . an important fact of international life for Canada in particular."

Year's Work Wiped Out

Riding Shuffle Dropped By All-party Agreement

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons moved Tuesday in effect to wipe out a year's work on revising population-based representation in Parliament—work that has already cost the taxpayers more than $1.3 million.

By all-party agreement, the Commons gave formal first reading to a bill that would suspend the almost-completed work of adjusting electoral boundaries.

The bill, expected to be passed into law quickly this month, in effect repudiates the existing formula for redistribution of Commons representation every 10 years.

The proposed legislation gives MPs about 16 months to come up with a new formula and amendment of the constitutional British North America Act. Failing that, the current process of redistribution would go ahead as planned.

But by the time MPs have finished wrangling over a new formula, within a deadline set in the bill as the end of 1974, the results will almost certainly be——The next federal election will be held under the present system, whereby Commons representation is heavily weighted in favor of thinly-populated rural areas and against the cities.

—Membership of the Commons will be enlarged from the present 264 to perhaps 300 or more.

—Present constitutional formulas to prevent a sharp decline in representation from slow growth and no-growth provinces will be strengthened.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert), whose home province of Saskatchewan was to have been reduced to 12 MPs from 13, proclaimed four months ago that he would fight such a loss all the way.

Meanwhile, the office of Representation Commissioner Nelson Castonguay was dismayed by the Commons move.

His office had just about wound up its work on realignment of constituencies as required by law after the 1971 decennial census.

Its once-a-decade work to redraw Commons constituency boundaries began about over a year ago and has cost $1,300,000 in that time.

Two Canadians Said 'Safe and Well'

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Canadians believed being held by the Viet Cong are "safe and well" and the government hopes they can be freed soon, the Commons was told Tuesday.

Pierre De Bane, parliamentary secretary to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, said the two men were on unofficial business but should have been protected by diplomatic immunity.

Capt. Ian Patten of Etobicoke, Ont., a Toronto suburb, and Capt. Fletcher Thornton of Ottawa were last seen Friday after heading down a rubber plantation road with a Vietnamese driver and a translator.

Mr. De Bane said the men are in an area that appears controlled by the Viet Cong, the Provisional Revolutionary Government of South Vietnam (PRG), and "they are responsible" for the safety of the two Canadians. The PRG has denied holding the men.

He said Canada does not accept the PRG contention that the men are not entitled to diplomatic immunity because their business was unofficial.

He described their action as "a legitimate activity" and said they should be entitled to immunity at all times.

Defence Minister James Richardson told reporters outside the Commons the two officers were engaged in "a routine field trip," associated with the ICCS presence in Vietnam. Other commission members had carried out similar missions.

'Certainly Given Full Protection'

SAIGON (AP) — The Viet Cong said today that if two missing Canadian officers went into Communist-controlled territory "they certainly were given full protection and safety."

The Viet Cong delegation to the two-party Joint Military Commission in Saigon stopped short of acknowledging that the two Canadian officers, missing since last Thursday northeast of Saigon, were being detained by Viet Cong troops.

"It is necessary to reiterate that according to the information of the Canadian delegation in the previous meeting with the Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) delegation, these two Canadians did not go on any mission entrusted to them by the ICCS," it said.

"Maj.-Gen. Tuan reaffirms that this case of the two Canadians has no relation with the responsibility of the PRG in implementing the agreement," the Viet Cong statement continued.

"However, if they really went into the controlled area of the PRG, they certainly were given full protection and safety.

"The PRG delegation is ready in the spirit of goodwill and humanity to give all necessary assistance for seeking information on these two persons. The only thing we need is full protection for PRG envoys when they go through the area under the control of the Saigon side as well as the places they will reach."

ALBERT LENTINI

Help Fund Lottery Folding

The Quinte Help Fund is closing its office and retiring from the lottery scene after a year's activity.

The lottery "went well" said spokesman Albert Lentini, but hasn't grown to the extent essential to keep it going.

"We're pleased with the results," added Mr. Lentini. "Everyone involved got a ten cent coupon, provided sense of fulfilment. It generated excitement, got many people involved and benefitted the community."

The lottery, in its year of operation, took in about $40,000 and paid out $26,200 in prize money. Chief charitable cause was providing eyeglasses for needy people. Quinte Help Fund bought about 100 pairs of glasses in the last year. Organizers also bought braces for children, issued food vouchers, paid for fuel, supplied a taxis for those without transportation to charities and other local organizations.

It also sponsors a soccer team which it will continue to support out of the proceeds of the last, June, lottery.

"We are keeping the help fund as a company, but phasing out the lottery," said Mr. Lentini. "We can revive it in the future if it's needed, but right now everybody wants to take a rest."

Three Cars Collide

TWEED (Special — A three-car collision on Highway 7 at the Queensboro Road junction Tuesday afternoon sent two women to hospital, one of the later being transferred to Kingston General Hospital in critical condition with head injuries.

Mrs. Betty Larter, 55, of Ottawa, was a passenger in the car driven by her husband, Delmar Larter, 58. The second woman, Mrs. Lillian McMahon, 51, of RR 1, Eldorado, suffered chest and arm lacerations and was admitted to Belleville General Hospital.

The Larter car was eastbound on the highway when it was struck from behind by a car driven by Gerald Lee, 22, of Scarborough. The Larter vehicle went into the westbound lane, where it came into collision with a car driven by Mrs. McMahon.

The Larter and McMahon cars were reported by police to be write-offs. The Lee car received $1,000 damage. Mrs. Larter, Mr. Lee and Arnold McMahon, a passenger in the car driven by his wife, were treated at BGH and released.

Overtime Loan Becomes Theft

Marvin Wood of Picton, who a year ago borrowed $443 worth of equipment from Complete Rent-Alls that was not recovered for six weeks, pleaded guilty in Provincial Court Tuesday to a charge of theft.

Judge J. L. Clendenning remanded him in custody until next Tuesday for sentence.

Mr. Wood, 24, rented a paint compressor and acetylene unit on June 30 of last year. His agreement with the Belleville company stipulated that the equipment be returned within two days.

When he did not show up, however, city police began an investigation that led them to a Picton garage. After entering with a search warrant, they discovered the equipment intact, although the compressor had been painted with spots and wheels were removed from the tank cart.

Assistant Crown Attorney Ellen Delnie said one witness would have testified he saw Mr. Wood sell the equipment to the owner of the garage. Police secured a cheque for $200 from the owner for Mr. Wood, but the defendant denied selling the goods.

His lawyer, Peter Girard, said this Wood had a drinking problem and was intoxicated at the time. The compliment disappeared. A pre-sentence report was ordered for Judge Clendenning.

Another charge of theft and two charges of failing to appear in court were withdrawn.

Proctor House Restoration $15,000 Away from Completion

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

BRIGHTON — Local Initiative Project (LIP) funds have run out for the reconstruction of Proctor House, which stands $15,000 away from completion.

The manor, standing high above the village here as if guarding the surrounding countryside to its majesty, was to be placed before the bailiwick before Air force captain Ray Kaduck and company successfully bid for a reprieve of the home.

Just over a year ago Mr. Kaduck and a body named Save Our Heritage Organization (SOHO) applied and received permission from the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority to work on recovering the house. Through an initial LIP grant of $27,000 and a subsequent one of $28,000, SOHO has restored the home structurally sound though interior decorating is still to be completed.

On Friday afternoon the last hammer was swung on the house that has stood amid controversy since crews began working. A year after it was to be completely demolished, Lake Ontario conservation authority wanted to take over the building as office space and not one penny is a cost to the municipality.

The latest word is the house, surrounded by more than 80 acres of rolling estate, will be used for a museum once a $5,000 heating system is installed and $10,000 is spent on resurfacing walls and floor and touching up stairways.

Mr. Kaduck and his group have not approached federal LIP sponsors for additional funds but will be seeking ways and means this summer of at least decorating an area of the house designated as a caretaker's appartment. Mr. Kaduck, chairman of SOHO, said the caretaker's duties would be to protect the building from vandals and to care for the grounds until the remainder of the interior is restored.

SOHO will begin immediately searching for charitable organizations which could help with the cost of the heating system, the last major step in the project started nearly two years ago.

"We'll be looking for a much smaller grant next winter to complete the home, then I'll be ready to probably bow out," said Mr. Kaduck.

"It has been a great experience for me to go through the restoration steps but I am no historian and it will need that type of person to put the touches on the home's interior finishing touches on the home's interior."

Mr. Kaduck has been keeping an eye on local auctions for period pieces to decorate the home while area citizens have offered era furnishings upon building completion.

SOHO, which will supervise the museum in a business sense, is at present negotiating a 20-year, renewable lease with the conservation authority for legal ownership of the house.

Early signing of the contract is anticipated, though once signed, SOHO will have to take over tax payments, another of the expenses attached to the project.

Mr. Kaduck has no doubts about the building's future with the toughest part of roof covered. From exterior the home stands proudly on the hill, its bricks re-mortared, trim painted a gleaming white and two huge main wooden doors recovered when once thought beyond hope.

"We're almost down to the point of choosing the type of wallpaper," he said.

Trenton Test Site For Housing Plan

TRENTON — Ontario's new plan to eliminate speculation from the housing assistance programs will be tested in a subdivision here.

Yesterday the Ontario Housing Corporation invited builders to submit price and design proposals for construction of 103 detached houses in the Burtdale subdivision to be sold under the Home Ownership Made Easy (HOME) plan. Builders have until July 31 to make submissions.

The plan to guard against speculation was announced some time ago. It means that homeowners who wish to buy their lots after five years of a 50-year lease will pay the full current market value of the land at the time they decide to buy rather than at the time they entered into the lease.

Thus, any increase in land value will be returned to the provincial government, which initially bought the land under the HOME plan.

Names of the builders to whom lots are allocated will be made public and persons interested in buying a HOME plan house will deal directly with the builders.

OHC price limits for one-storey detached houses here range from $18,450 for three bedrooms to $18,200 for five bedrooms.

Outstanding Bravery

Master Corporal Rod Vercherie, right, of Frankford, receives the Star of Courage following his work in rescue operations at St. Jean, Vianney, Que. last year. When fatalities endangered the lives of Cpl. Vercherie and Sergeant of a helicopter, made a basic-to-know search for survivors before returning to base. Examining the medal is 424 Squadron Commander Lt.-Col. A. G. Tegart. At a ceremony at Government House, Ottawa, June 22, Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener formally presented the Star, second highest military decoration for bravery in Canada.

Ore Train Trip Gains Popularity

The ore train railfan trip from Picton to Marmora and return hosted by the Picton Model Railroaders last year has proved to be an instant success.

The trip — scheduled for Sept. 16 this year is limited to 150 passengers in two coaches and already more than 20 tickets have been purchased by United States residents and orders are coming in from Oshawa, Ottawa, Kingston, Belleville and Trenton.

William Thorley, president of the sponsoring Picton Club said tickets are on a strictly first-come, first-served basis. Last year many railfan persons were disappointed in not being able to secure tickets.

The Picton - Marmora trip recently merited a five page feature article with pictures in the Canadian Rail magazine.

Although railfan trips are common, the Picton - Marmora run is unique in that it is the only known trip where passenger coaches are added to a scheduled freight run without further changes being made to the run.

The passenger coaches are added between the caboose and the ore cars.

Riders on the trip last year included railfans, railroad historians, model railroaders and people who travelled just for the experience of riding the rails through Prince Edward county and north into Hastings.

At the time "mixed" trains, made up of freight cars and one or two passenger cars, ran regularly between Trenton and North Hastings but this type of passenger service was discontinued many years ago.

Camps, Sports Appeal Children Outgrowing The City's Playgrounds

Lake Ontario's high water forced shutdown of one city playground as Belleville's summer recreation program opened another season Monday.

The South George St. playground is closed this year as Bay of Quinte waters continue to flood the area.

Neighborhood youngsters are being sent instead to Queen Alexandra public school playground.

But high water is the only mark of change affecting the city's network of playgrounds.

Once the sole source of civic recreation, they now are only one unit in a wide range of leisure time programming involving young people over the next six weeks.

"What's happening is that social conditions are changing," says Clifford Beich, deputy director of the city's recreation department.

And, with that change, youngsters these days can be involved in everything from camping to sports.

Among other activities, young people may:

— Be involved in day camping, learning outdoor craft;

— Learn archery, basketball, gymnastics at any of four public schools involved in a community school program.

A big venture this summer reflects the current trend to the outdoors.

A camp is being operated by the recreation department at the H. R. Frink Conservation Area in Thurlow township east of Plainfield. The program is being run in cooperation with the Hastings County board of education and the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Here campers may learn canoeing, hiking, swimming and other techniques of outdoor living in a camp designed by Mr. Beich.

"I think young people today — if they have had any exposure to the outdoors at all — are beyond playgrounds," says Mr. Beich.

The camps are divided into five-day, Monday - to - Friday schedules during the six weeks, including 20 young people each week. The age group is 12 - 16 years and registrations are still being accepted by the department.

Meantime, back in the city, programs of physical education, arts and crafts are also being taught in community schools. The four operating this summer are Hillcrest, Queen Victoria, Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra.

Some 120 had registered at the schools Monday.

Meantime, registration at the city's 21 playgrounds was estimated at 650 — about the same as last year.

Circus Workers Face Charges

TRENTON — Three circus midway employees faced charges of possession of stolen money like shopping in Provincial Court here.

Michael Tibbert, 19, of Markham, James Simpson, 18, of Acton, and a juvenile from Oakville were arrested in Napanee Tuesday. In their possession was a quantity of money.

The three are members of a circus currently performing in Napanee.

Town police said three youths stole $153 from a cash register at a Golf Car Wash on Dundas St. East in Trenton and escaped in a circus-owned truck. police chased the youths, finally catching up with them in Napanee.

Two Worlds

Mollie Whiteside is a Canadian-born woman living in Dungannon, one of the hot spots of troubled Northern Ireland.

A freelance writer and prolific contributor to publications at home and abroad, she wrote recently of her childhood on a Saskatchewan farm where the family lived until drought and other problems of the "Hungry Thirties" dictated a return to her parents' native Ulster.

When they left the prairies they closed the door on, among other things, their faithful 1926 Chevy. There had been no gas for it for some time but, unlike neighbors who stripped engines and hitched autos to their best horses as "Bennett's buggies," they felt it deserved a better fate.

So after selling what they could, the farm was left "just sitting there," with the car in its garage. For one family it was the end of a chapter and the beginning of another.

Mrs. Whiteside writes of her Ulster life and times with the same pathos and humor she brings to recollections of her Canadian childhood. In a letter to a Belleville acquaintance she tells of the resilience of the people, of bombed stores back in business within hours, or two to three days at most.

"I often wish that people who criticize us and want to pull out the troops would come to visit us . . . the troops themselves have been won over by the people and the country. Many of them want to come back when they leave the army."

Mrs. Whiteside tells of offering candy to a corporal, a gesture she makes to army, police, military — trying to help, and apologizing for all the trouble they are having. The soldier laughed and said he was coming back. As a builder he had decided he could make a fortune there. Indeed, we recall a report in recent days that Ulster's chronic unemployment problem is being eased by people doing just that. Thus, there are silver linings for some and the hope of a more peaceful day for all the people of Ulster.

Taxes Pay For It —

Questions are being asked in and out of Parliament seeking justification for a $2 million plus program to send 240 Canadian students abroad for six months of self-development and study.

Right away of course the term "self development" is something of a joke . . . that is, if it were not so serious from the standpoint of the taxpayer.

It is the taxpayer who is providing the cash, rather than the students. There is no hint here of any old-fashioned initiative or self-help effort to raise the funds to get this thing on the road.

Our Ottawa correspondent, Richard Jackson, has made the point that pensioners, among others, are financing this scheme with their tax dollars. However there is one redeeming feature — earlier this month the same Secretary of State's department which is funding the students' trip made public a weeks-long visit to Ottawa for 1,000 senior citizens from across the country. The grant in this case was a mere $200,000, but then it was an operation of limited scope and duration by comparison. By all accounts the senior citizens, most of them on limited means, enjoyed themselves.

The thought persists though — and we are sure the senior citizens, if not the young people, would agree — we have come a long way from pioneer times.

Sunny Weekend

High water or not there was a big crowd at The Outlet at the weekend. Much more of a drawback was the pungent odor of dead fish — an old problem at Lake time of year but seemingly worse this time around. At least one family decided to drive over to Adolphustown where the situation in this regard is much less acute. A couple of American youngsters were among those enjoying the fine weather; they were from northern New York and one said he and his family were over for the first time. We get the impression from that there are not so many U.S. cars about this year; those we have seen are mostly from New York.

UK Officials Visit Salisbury

Rhodesia's Political Future Remains A Matter of Doubt

LONDON (CP) — The long-smouldering dispute over Rhodesia's illegal break with Britain may be reaching a turning point which British sources believe might be decisive for Rhodesia's political future.

A hasty weekend visit by top British officials to Salisbury has sparked widespread speculation that the eight-year controversy is entering a news phase.

Whatever the outcome, it is unlikely to be attended by the drama and fierce recriminations which characterized past attempts at reconciliation by the two countries.

British sources indicate that moves in Westminster and in Rhodesia during the next couple of weeks should outline the changing pattern of the conflict.

They say British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home may make a major speech this week outlining the possibility, if any, of reaching a basis for settlement which would end Rhodesia's 1965 unilateral declaration of independence from Britain.

Most observers appear to feel that chances of progress toward such a settlement are slim. In Rhodesia, reports indicate that Prime Minister Ian Smith may be preparing to break off all efforts at reconciliation with the country's majority black population unless British shows new willingness to compromise.

The British Foreign office has confirmed that Sir Denis Greenhill, head of the diplomatic service, had two meetings with Smith last weekend and also talked to Bishop Abel Muzorewa, leader of the African National Council (ANC), Rhodesia's main black nationalist movement.

British is known to be anxious at least to clarify Smith's intentions before the opening of the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Ottawa in August.

Smith and Muzorewa appointed officials to take part in discussions last year aimed at resolving the deadlock between the country's white minority government and the blacks. But these produced few tangible results.

The blacks rejected settlement proposals based on terms agreed by the British and Rhodesian governments early in 1972 and Westminster sought approval by the black majority is essential before any further decisions can be made.

Since the proposals were turned down, Smith's government has come under severe pressure from black guerrilla operations on Rhodesia's borders. Some observers believe this may have made him more favorably inclined to reaching a satisfactory settlement with the Africans and Britain.

But informed sources contend that, even if an agreement is reached, it is still highly unlikely that Britain would move across to the Smith government and risk alienating the vast majority of black African states on the continent.

Consequently, Smith may feel that by telling the whites of Rhodesia there is no hope of reaching agreement with Britain and by reminding them of the danger from guerrilla operations and the need for strong leadership, he can rally any other course.

A settlement would, of course, mean that economic sanctions against Rhodesia would be lifted, perhaps enabling the country to make arms purchases on world markets somewhat more easily and greatly improve its economic performance.

But against this, Smith would have to weigh Britain's insistence that any settlement carry a guarantee of eventual majority rule by the blacks.

And to the average white Rhodesian, virtually no gains, economic or otherwise, are worth surrendering control over the country's future.

Political Passions Retard African Lands' Progress

By JOHN HARRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The Organization of African Unity (OAU) which met recently in Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia where it was formed in 1963, was again forced to discuss issues of emotion rather than survival.

In a continent with a desperate need for the basics of nation-building, teachers, administrators, doctors, schools and health facilities, volatile issues constantly retard vital discussions at OAU meetings.

A few years ago, the OAU was partially split on the Nigerian-Biafran war, especially when a few members—notably the Ivory Coast—recognized the breakaway Biafran Republic.

South Africa's racism, along with that of Rhodesia, are always issues which heavily cloud over valuable time needed to discuss common social and economic problems.

At the last OAU meetings in mid-June, Libya's fiery and unpredictable President Qaddafi arrived to demand the OAU's all-out condemnation of Israel.

This move was both absurd and silly. Many emerging African states—Ghana for example—have received economic and technical assistance over the years from an emerging Israel.

With famine stalking all her Saharan neighbors, oil-rich Libya has more than enough money to help feed starving national populations in Mali, Senegal, Upper Volta and four other states. Instead of buying complex weapons to fight the Israelis over the sands.

Chances appear that this time there will be more substantial action.

Under the aegis of Provincial Secretary for Justice, A. R. B. (Bert) Lawrence, two studies are to be undertaken.

The first, and it is underway now, is a survey of lands along the lower lakes that are susceptible to flooding, or other damage, from high levels.

The second study, which will start when this has been completed, will then review these lands and assess what remedial works, if any, might be taken to protect them. And if they are not protectable what the cost might be of putting them into the public domain.

When both studies have been completed, and this will probably be a couple of years or so, then there will be crunch talks with Ottawa.

First of all there will have to be decision as to whether in view of the costs involved and it is agreed ever now that this will be at least many millions) and the potential results whether it would be worthwhile trying to save the lands, or a portion of them, on some basis of federal-provincial sharing.

Then when this is decided, and if the decision has been favorable, the approach to the taken will have to be settled.

And the principal decision there will be whether this should be in some form of loan program to owners, or whether it — or at least part of it—should be in a form of public works effort.

All the while, of course, time there should be some serious approach to the problem.

In the meantime though there has been a lull it is accepted that the crisis of the levels is still with us.

Authorities here are waiting, and quite pessimistically for this fall when the annual storms hit the lake areas.

The waters will still be high and it is feared there will be another bad time.

Mrs. Gandhi Urges More Trade With Canada

By JOHN HARRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Behind Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's booklish speech to the attentive Empire Club lagTo-ronto, which outlined the basic elements in Indian democracy, there was a message of how to maintain the unity of the world's largest, multi-party and multi-racial federal state.

Mrs. Gandhi told an Indo-natural goals in this order: democracy, socialism, secularism and non-alignment, the latter as a positive position in world affairs.

These are not—either in their priority or terminology—identical to our own. Nevertheless Prime Minister Trudeau's 1968 policy statement based on the concept of the harmonious environment is philosophically—and as far as real politics will permit—identical to Mrs. Ghandi's message.

How to avoid extremism of all kinds which could shatter or even spill the unitary state is the concern not only of Canada and India, but Nigeria which failed to do so between 1966 and 1970, Malaysia and even of the Commonwealth nations.

Except in Mrs. Ghandi's case, a brave, tough and undaunted woman who rules 550 million human beings, the preservation of the federal state is a supermanhuman task. Before she left for Canada, Mrs. Ghandi was forced to intervene directly in the state of affairs of Uttar Pradesh, her home state and India's largest entity with a population of 100 millions.

India's vast social problems in a country which is a sub-continent in its own right, are not easily cure. India is described as underdeveloped, one of the giants of the Third World where basic survival, enough food, as and to the population explosion, are crucial to the nation.

Mrs. Ghandi spoke of India's own accomplishments in food sufficiency, a growing industrial base, the role of the state in economic development. And these are all commendable and essential. But the thin line between self-sufficiency and a step into the historic abyss of starvation and want is still measurable by famine. And India this year has been hard hit by nature's role famine.

Canada has contributed $1 billion to India development and her four five-year plans to date, since the Colombo Plan commenced in early 1950. Mrs. Ghandi with understandable pride feels the time has come for less aid and more trade. As she herself said, of the small 10 per cent of Canadian exports which do not go to America or Europe, India received only about $142 million last year.

Two-way trade between the two large geographical Commonwealth federal nations is difficult to visualize. India has little to sell to us, while the kinds of cheap Canadian consumer goods which India's millions could buy—simple kitchen utensils, non-mechanical farm machinery, light bulbs, batteries—India prefers to make herself in tariff-protected, high-cost Indian industries.

India begins her fifth five-year plan since independence in 1948 under the cloud of famine and the need for more wheat in a world where famine is also rampant in North Africa and other parts of Asia.

Canadian-Indian relations will likely continue on the old aid basis, even though Mrs. Ghandi's message about survival as a viable state must have equal impact.

Problem of High Water in Lakes Controls Not the Answer

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

Twenty years ago when there last was a high water level crisis on the great lakes, little was done to try and guard against recurrences.

A select committee did study the situation and prepare a report. But this report was pretty well forgotten when the next high water cycle hit again this year.

The first, and it is underway now, is a survey of lands along the lower lakes that are susceptible to flooding, or other damage, from high levels.

The second study, which will start when this has been completed, will then review these lands and assess what remedial works, if any, might be taken to protect them. And if they are not protectable what the cost might be of putting them into the public domain.

When both studies have been completed, and this will probably be a couple of years or so, then there will be crunch talks with Ottawa.

Operations of the UCS

Editor,
The Intelligencer,
Sir: It has happened again.

In a closed meeting the board of directors of the UCS were served copies of endorsements from Mayor Jeffrey, Alderman Jean Smith, Don Williams and Dean of Faculty of Loyalist College, Paul King.

By not allowing the general public admittance, the democratic principle we admire has been trampled under and those with "influence" allowed to latch their views upon other members of the board.

Alderman Keegan's request for a full investigation into the operation of the UCS was petitioned and should have been heeded by City Councils.

My suggestion: Ask the city of Belleville if they wish to keep the UCS administrator on the payroll.

The answer will be loud and clear.

Canada and U.S. Said Close To Air Preclearance Accord

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Canada and the United States are on the verge of agreeing in principle to continue U.S. customs preclearance at Canadian airports for travellers to the U.S.

In a Washington dispatch today, the newspaper says that after weeks of stalemate, the two sides are talking about a permanent agreement that would improve existing preclearance facilities, increase the number of Canadian airports offering preclearance and open the possibility of Canadian customs preclearance at U.S. airports for travellers to Canada.

The stalemate began ceasing at the end of May when U.S. and Canadian officials met in Ottawa to continue their long and difficult negotiations over new air routes between the two countries, the report said.

An unidentified U.S. state department official said Tuesday both sides made concessions at that meeting, the paper said. He conceded that it is even possible the two sides will finally reach an agreement on a new pattern of air routes when they meet again, probably late this month.

Preclearance allows passengers to go through U.S. customs at airports at Toronto, Winnipeg, Montreal and Vancouver before they board planes for the U.S. At their first stop in the U.S., passengers can avoid the long lineups at U.S. customs, or, if they are continuing to another city, they can often remain in their aircraft and continue with little delay.

A long conflict over preclearance culminated in April when Transport Minister Jean Marchand called for an end to all U.S. customs preclearance in Canadian airports by July 29.

Mr. Marchand said preclearance has given U.S. carriers an unfair advantage over Canadian airlines because it enables them to advertise many more direct flights from Canada.

When he announced abolition of the preclearance agreement, Mr. Marchand said that reinstatement would come only if Ottawa wins new routes to the United States for Canadian airlines, especially from western cities.

Bill to Raise Funds For Games Advances

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill designed to raise more than $250 million for the 1976 Olympic Games at Montreal cleared another hurdle in the Commons Tuesday when it completed second reading, approval in principle.

The bill now goes to committee for study.

As outlined by Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, the bill, among other things, would permit the issuance of commemorative coins, stamps and other postal products.

The $5 and $10 coins, which would go on sale this fall, are geared to raise $130 million after minting costs. Stamps and other postal products are expected to raise another $130 million.

The bill also would permit a national lottery but this would be subject to provincial approval. Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba already have said they will not permit the lottery because it would infringe on their provincial sweepstakes.

A special Olympics account would be set up in the public accounts and all proceeds from the coins, stamps and lottery would be paid into this account. Funds then would go to Montreal after expenses are deducted.

The federal government has said repeatedly it will not cover any deficit incurred by the Games.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Queen has not been invited to visit Quebec "for the past few years, "Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday in the Commons.

North Dislikes Tourism Role

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposals in a government report on economic expansion would turn Northern Ontario into "a giant hot dog stand" for the people of southern Ontario, John Rodrigues (NDP—Nickel Belt) said Tuesday night.

He told the Commons the study, tabled in the Commons Friday, was "a nothing report."

The study suggested Northern Ontario should concentrate on tourism and the service industries. Mr. Rodrigues said the report was obviously written by people who had never set foot in Northern Ontario.

Mr. Trudeau told Social Credit Leader Real Caouette the Quebec government has not asked the federal government to invite the Queen to the province, as have other province in the last several years.

Anti-monarchist demonstrations and riots plagued the Queen's last visit to Quebec in 1964.

On her current trip she visited Prince Edward Island during that province's centennial celebrations following the provincial government's invitation extended through the federal government, said Mr. Trudeau.

As well, the Ontario government asked that she be invited in that province for the six-day visit she completed there last week.

The Queen is o visit Saskatchewan and Alberta this week as part of the RCMP centennial celebrations.

Toronto Symphony Conductor Is Dead

TORONTO (CP) — Czechoslovakian conductor Karel Ancerl, the man who believed the Toronto Symphony could become a great orchestra and worked to achieve that goal, died unexpectedly Tuesday morning at the age of 65.

The famed conductor who came to Toronto in 1968 had been in hospital for two weeks, for what were stated to be tests.

He had been seriously ill during the season, and missed several concerts because of hepatitis. He had been a diabetic for many years and also suffered from a liver ailment.

The symphony now must find a noted conductor to take over the 30 concerts he was to have led next season.

The symphony's European tour, scheduled for next spring, might also be cancelled as a result of the death.

Board to Study Exports of Gas

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Energy Board will reopen hearings today on an application by Dome Petroleum Ltd. which wants to export 130 million barrels of liquid ethane to the United States.

At the same time the board is to consider anew whether Canadian reserves are sufficient to allow increased exports of natural gas.

In November, 1971, the board rejected an application for additional natural gas exports on the grounds that reserves were not adequate.

To arrive at Canadian needs, the board uses a formula of 25 times Canadian needs four years in the future.

A key question at the hearings is whether ethane should be included in calculations of natural gas supplies. If the answer is yes, then the Dome application will depend on whether the board is satisfied there is a sufficient reserve of natural gas for home consumption to permit additional exports.

Ethane is extracted from natural gas and its derivatives are used for a variety of purposes, such as film, paint, flooring and from natural gas furniture.

Dome plans to build an ethylene plant at Fort Saskatchewan, about 20 miles northeast of Edmonton, along with a twin pipeline system running 2,000 miles from Edmonton through Windsor to Sarnia, Ont.

Total investment, says Dome, will be about $750 million. The exports of ethane and propane to be carried are valued at about $1 billion.

The board began hearing the original Dome application in January, 1972, but since then Dome has altered its proposals.

At the January hearings Dome argued strenuously that ethane is a separate substance, not a fraction of natural gas.

Questionnaires Planned On Effects of Tax Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will rely largely on questionnaires and interviews to monitor the effect of its planned tax cut for manufacturing and processing industries, Finance Minister John Turner said Tuesday night.

He told the Commons 1,000 companies will receive questionnaires and interviews will be held with spokesmen for the 200 largest plus representatives of 25 companies in each of the medium and small categories.

French Magazine Changing Becoming More Feminist

MONTREAL (CP) — Five months as editor of the French version of Chatelaine magazine and "now I have to say I'm a feminist, after thirty-seven years of saying I was not," Francine Monpetit said in an interview.

"My husband totally supported me in my work. I couldn't imagine what it was these women were excited about. Now with this work, I am reading letters from Quebec women about their reality."

Quebec women are not officially feminists and tend to cling to their ideas about the kind of marriage and relationships with their children they think they must have, she said.

So French Chatelaine is becoming more feminist.

"We are asking women to look at their lives and see if they could not have something better."

French Chatelaine, which has a readership of 800,000 in the province, is an offspring of English Chatelaine published in Toronto and once a month, Mrs. Monpetit and her colleagues in there for meetings "with the people who have the last word."

"The Chatelaine people have been fantastic. It's an exchange. We are very visual in Quebec. We have things to say about furniture, food, fashion, color."

While French Chatelaine has always taken translated material and much of the art work from the English version for budget reasons, "now English Chatelaine is going to take more from us, not just the specific Quebec problems but a lot more of our approach. The Latin touch exactly."

Mrs. Monpetit said Quebec women are also concerned about their low look and this makes beauty a big business in

Teacher Began In One Room

EDMONTON (CP) — When Beatrice McAvoy stepped into her first one-room schoolhouse 47 years ago, she was barely 17 years old and newly-graduated from the Calgary Normal school.

She says she was too young to be afraid of the job she had taken. Not only was she responsible for moulding more than 50 young minds, but she was also to be janitor, fireman and school engineer.

Her career, which ends this year, has seen the emphasis of education change over the years. She began at a time when teachers were expected to be able to teach any subject in any grade and is retiring at a time when specialization is the major emphasis.

She has changed with those times—from the days of the one-room schoolhouse to her position as home economics specialist. Miss McAvoy became supervisor of home economics for the Edmonton public school system in 1964.

Even she began teaching, she had to be 17 years old and have one year of normal school. Now, a minimum of three years university is needed.

Miss McAvoy, who holds a bachelor of arts degree, a bachelor of education and a master of education, said all her degrees were obtained during summer breaks and after school.

"I was going to take a year off in 1943, to go back to school.

"But the war was on and we had been given an extra month's holiday in September so they could help get the harvest in. I took a job in aircraft repair and didn't manage to take the year off."

She started her career teaching physical education—"a hard game"—but decided to switch as she became older.

"I could see myself at about 50, having to start teaching English and social studies, so I took an interest in home economics. I've always been good at sewing."

Miss McAvoy joined the public school system in 1930 and taught at 10 Edmonton schools. One of her students, Lou Hyndman, now is education minister. He took home economics for six weeks as part of a program where boys and girls switched their home economics and shop options.

"I would say the majority of the kids I had were good ones.

"You could get the occasional bad one, but on the whole they were good."

The students, like the education system, have changed.

"I'm sure they're a lot more mature at 17 nowadays than we were," she said. "They have more freedom in the classroom."

Marriages Blamed

TEL AVIV (AP) — Housing Minister Zeev Sharef maintained that a marriage boom was partly to blame for a shortage of government subsidized inexpensive housing. He said marriages increased from 16,000 in 1967 to 21,000 in 1971.

Successful Living

If This Mum Lost Weight She'd Be Helping Others

Dear Doris: I am 34, married and have three daughters. I weigh 185 pounds and am only five-foot-two. When things get hectic I find myself snacking from the fridge to calm my nerves.

Although I have started a reducing program, I am in need of all the moral support I can get, since losing weight is so much easier said than done. — Good Intentions

Dear Good: You need somebody to talk to you like a Dutch uncle. I'll be your Dutch aunt!

For one thing, you import not just your own future but that of your little girl, somebody dailly; you put a terrific strain on your heart, not only through the weight you carry around but also through the cholesterol which we are told nestles in your arteries from the extra fat.

At your present rate you will continue putting on weight and making life harder for everybody. The long range effect of nibbling is to create more anxiety.

Get a full-length mirror; and take a good look at yourself every morning. Find a picture of a slender, beautiful movie actress — and put it up where you can see it all the time. In the kitchen put labels with a large printed "NO" right on top of your favorite snacks.

Keep a supply of low-calorie edible - food handy: carrot sticks, celery, apples. When you are hungry drink a tall glass of water. Eat smaller meals: never take a second helping.

I am sending you my Simple Reducing Diet also the Low - Calorie Menus and Recipes for the 40 cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope which you enclosed. Expect to lose no more than two or three pounds a week; realize that by doing it slowly you are developing better permanent eating habits. Promise yourself a new dress when you have lost 25 pounds.

When you achieve this much write to me again, reporting what you have managed to do so that your achievement will help others.

This is an order — so get busy!

Dear Doris: There is talk now of legalizing certain drugs partly on the grounds that they are no more harmful than overdrinking alcohol, etc. But when young people experiment with drugs the farthest thought from their minds is their future children. Perhaps they might be interested to know the effects on their babies they may hope to have some day.

I would like to quote from Constance Scow Pre-Natal Care by Steward-Burton: "Alcohol in moderation is not specifically forbidden, but remember your calories . . . a heavy smoker is apt to have a smaller baby, and the hazards of a premature birth are increased . . .

"Drugs of the psychotropic type must definitely be avoided during your pregnancy. While the effects of these are as yet incompletely known, the drugs are harmful to you physical and mental health, and to you baby. Babies born to mothers taking heroin are addicted at birth, and may die from unrecognized withdrawal symptoms.

"Other drugs of the LSD type can produce previously compensated psychoses in the mother, who may then remain permanently psychotic. Marijuana is definitely harmful, for it disturbs the mental and perceptual processes."

So before you start a bad habit, think of that future baby you may cause to die or be mentally or physically deformed. I'm sure most hooked users, will not be able to resist the temptation, but pregnancy, so stop before you start. — Child Lover

Dear Child Lover: You are saying that drug users — who usually do it for kicks — never not even dream of what they are letting themselves and their unborn children in for. Peculiar, isn't it?

How difficult it is to learn from someone else's experience; or from the statement of an expert! Perhaps Stewart-ed readers.

Doris has studied human behavior and can shed light on your dilemma. Write to her, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped - self-addressed envelope for personal reply.

Ann Landers

Punch Spiked; Bride's Mother Furious

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter was married in a beautiful, intimate home ceremony. There were only 40 people present. 30 relatives from our side and 10 from the groom's side. Something occurred which spoiled the day for me, and now I'd like to know if I behaved properly.

My husband and I belong to a religious sect that does not permit the use of alcohol. Our daughter knew this when she asked to have the wedding at home. It was agreed that we would serve fruit punch. She let us know that her future in-laws were not very pleased.

Immediately after the ceremony I saw the father of the groom pour a bottle of gin or vodka into the punch bowl. I was shocked but said nothing because I didn't want to create a scene. I knew my husband would be furious.

I left the punta let on but I strongly suspect some of them were "spiked" since there was more than fruit punch in that bowl. Later that evening I told my husband what had happened. He was boiling mad—he said I should have dumped out the punch at once and served soda pop. What is your opinion? Am I—Guilty Or Not?

Dear G.O.N.: I say your restraint was admirable. Had you done as your husband suggested it might have ruined the day for your daughter and her husband. This way, it only ruined yours. Incidentally, the groom's father sounds like a cad. I hope he lives in another town.

Dear Ann Landers: I applied for and got a job I have been wanting for a long time. The personnel director asked me when I applied if I knew of someone who might qualify for another job in the company. I recommended a dear friend.

This friend went down and took the tests and phoned me that evening to say she was sure she had done very well. Last Tuesday I received word that the position I wanted was mine. My friend did not receive a call. The following day the personnel director informed her by telephone that she did not get the job. My friend immediately called me and said she was awfully disappointed—and asked, "How are you taking your letdown?" I told her I had been fired. Her response was—"oh!" Fifteen minutes later she called back to say I was some lousy friend for taking the job I had recommended her to apply for. I told her she was mistaken.

Her attitude depressed me so that I contacted the personnel director and asked to please call my friend and explain, which she did. The girl was still sure I deserved the job—so I then asked the personnel director if she would do me a special favor and drop my friend a note, making it clear that we had applied for totally different jobs. That lovely woman wrote her a detailed letter and sent me a copy. My friend returned her letter to me, and written across it in red crayon was, "I don't believe either of you." What can I do now, Ann?—Sick At Heart

Dear Heart: Well, you could kill yourself, but I don't think it would be worth it. I can't understand why someone would consider such an obstinate, stubborn, unforgiving person a "dear friend." With a little luck you might not hear from her again.

Medicated Vapor Spray Pulled off the Market

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government and the maker of Pertussin medicated vaporizer announced it signed to be sprayed into the product off the market while officials study the death of an Ohio child.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) said it also is studying the formulation of 22 other aerosol products for possible hazards, including breath fresheners and any other product sold in aerosol form details trichloroethane, used as a mouth of lungs.

An FDA spokesman said the suspect ingredient in Pertussin solvent for the ingredients and to reduce the pressure of propellant gases. The chemical has been shown to induce heart irregularities.

The FDA recommended that anyone with a can of Pertussin medicated vaporizer spray return it or destroy it.

Pertussin medicated vaporizer is marketed by Chesebrough-Ponds Inc., and labelled for temporary relief of nasal congestion.

The FDA said 18 deaths have been linked to the Pertussin medicated spray. Seventeen were due to what the FDA called misuse, but a five-year-old Cleveland girl was found dead in her bed April 18 after her room had been sprayed.

The girl's death "occurred under conditions of use that FDA does not at this time consider to be abuse or gross misuse," the agency announcement said.

The label on a can of the vaporizer reads, "Simply press . . . and Pertussin medicated vapor comes right to the point. The directions say to "spray 4-8 times for the average cough. Repeat as often as desired. . . . Spray pillows and sheets very lightly (3-24 inches)."

Slick Trick

* As soon as a bottle of perfume is opened, prevent evaporation, which both wastes the perfume and changes its scent. Fill a small bottle for immediate use, and seal the large bottle with paraffin. Keep the bottles away from windows as light also changes perfume's condition.

Judy Sisson, Urban-Rural Exchange Co-ordinator

Youth Change Places

Judy Sisson heads a youth movement.

Through careful matching of rural and urban families and their teen-aged children, she moves city youth to the country and country youth to the city for a two-week exchange visit.

Through the co-operation of the Extension and Home Economics Branches of the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food, a child may live on the farm for a week, then return to the city for the next week with her farm friend.

This program which starts it's third summer exchange July 4 is purposed to promote a better understanding between city and rural pea, le.

Youth Exchangers also better understand their own environment in which they live. They realize similarities and differences, advantages and disadvantages and why's and how's of each situation in city or country.

And it's another way of making new friends.

Judy, co-ordinator of the Urban-Exchange Program in Napanee, said many families and children continue their correspondence throughout the years following urban-exchange visits.

Programs begin, July 4, July 18, August 1 and August 15.

Exchangers are "matched" with rural exchangees of similar age, sex and interests.

Judy says she spends most of her time arranging interviews by phone with exchange students (her area covers Lennox-Addington and Hastings County); and driving exchanges to their locations then home.

The only charge for urban-rural student exchange visits is $2. This covers transportation.

Another duty of urban-rural program co-ordinator is to match exchange students, visit host farms, and arrange orientation sessions that include showing students films on farm safety, suggesting proper clothing to bring and describing the rural family.

Unfortunate part, not every applicant can be accepted. It is the "matching" process of personalities which decides acceptance of exchange applicants.

Summer 1973 objective is 1,000 urban youth placed on farms for one week and 200 rural youth hosted in the city.

In past, some rural families have taken two children.

"They really want urban children to learn more about their farms," said Judy.

Exchangers and host families are insured by Ministry of Agriculture and Food for accident and liability.

Rural students too busy in summer months at their farm may decide at their convenience when to return to the city for their visit.

Slide Shows by Women's Institutes Illustrate Their New Activities

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Home movie buffs would have had a heyday at the Tuesday night session of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada (FWIC) convention here.

Women's Institute members from each of the provinces presented ten-minute programs depicting a new activity carried out by a local group.

They had been told to use any method they wished and although some employed skits, verse or speech, most chose slide shows.

Projects depicted ranged from the restoration and maintenance of an old mill in Pictou County, N.S., to the construction of numerous bluebird houses in Saskatchewan, aimed at preserving bird life.

One Women's Institute group in southwestern Quebec turned its attention to apples, a plentiful commodity in their district, and compiled a cook book of recipes using them.

Tuesday was the day for reviewing the work of FWIC, a rural-based organization interested in betterment of communities.

Earlier, reports from the national convenors of FWIC's five standing committees documented work in the area of handicrafts, safety programs, donations to social welfare agencies, and studies of such things as smoking, drug abuse, venereal disease, and consumer education.

One of the convenors, Jennie McInnes of the organization's committee on agriculture and Canadian industries, discussed the public objection to high food prices, suggesting that some of the people who complain might have their priorities mixted.

"This is a population with a thirst for luxury, but a desire for cheap food," she told delegates.

Food prices have risen considerably but "the increases have not found their way back to the producing farmer."

Later, in an interview, Mrs. McInnes said people complain about the price of meat and milk, products essential to "keeping the body in a good, healthy condition," yet the price of soft drinks and cigarettes continues to increase without drawing public outcry.

Voting at the five-day convention, which continues through Friday, elected Mrs. John McLean of Eureka, N.S., president.

First, Second, Third and Fourth vice-presidents are Mrs. Austin Zoeller of New Hamburg, Ont.; Mrs. Joseph Bielah of Warspite, Alta.; Mrs. Neal of Nackawic, N.B.; and Mrs. Frank Ross of Charlottetown. The convention has drawn about 750 delegates.

Engagement

Mrs. John Walsh of Shannonville is pleased to announce the engagement of her daughter, Theresa Agnes to John Peter Kennelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vince Kennelly, Marysville. The marriage will take place July 14, 1973 at 4 p.m. in St. Charles Borromeo Church, Read.

MR. AND MRS. WAYNE WEAGANT

Weagant — Macklem

Rev. Laurie Sutherland married Judith Anne Macklem and Wayne Douglas Weagant June 22 in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fraser, Belleville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Leo Weagant, Oshawa.

Given in marriage by her stepfather, the bride wore a daisy trimmed floor length gown with Elizabethan sleeves. Her sheer train and full length veil, both trimmed with daisies, fell from a daisy headdress. She carried roses.

Mrs. Cathy Haffman, as her sister's matron of honor, chose a high-waisted, flowered nylon sheer crepe over mauve polyester crepe gown. She carried a multicolored nosegay of daisies, 'mums and roses.

Bridesmaid Sue Shurtleff and junior bridesmaid, Angela Cannon, niece of the bridegroom, were dressed the same as the matron of honor.

Dayna Galloway, niece of bridegroom, as the flowergirl wore a flocked pink nylon sheer organza gown and carried a basket of daisies, mums and baby's breath.

Best man was Gary Weagant, brother of the bridegroom.

Richard LaRue and Todd Cannon, nephew of the bridegroom ushered guests.

A reception followed at Upper Madrid Room, Sun Valley Motor Inn.

Following a wedding trip to northern points, Mr. and Mrs. Weagant will reside at 55 Nonquon Road, Apt. No. 602, Oshawa, Ontario.

Drink Your Fruit

A glass of orange juice isn't the only way to drink your daily allotment of fruit. Try Iced Cherry Soup for a special dinner or banana milkshakes for the kids.

Iced Cherry Soup is a surprising, delightful start for a spring - summer dinner. It has a refreshing taste, a pleasing appearance as well as a smooth texture. Ontario black sweet cherries, one every one's favorite dessert, will become a new experience when served as a soup. The recipe is short; it's the combination that makes it so ice cold. Just remember to always add the cherry mixture to the cream, while stirring, to prevent possible curdling.

Iced Cherry Soup

- 2 tins (14 ounces each) pitted Ontario Black Sweet Cherries
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 cinnamon stick
- 2 ice cubes
- 1 cup dry Ontario Burgundy wine
- ¼ cup whipping cream

Bring cherries, sugar and cinnamon stick to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 15 minutes. Remove cinnamon stick. Add ice cubes and wine. Chill well. Just before serving, slowly add mixture to cream, stirring constantly. Serve in chilled clear glass bowls, or in shrimp cocktail dishes.

Makes 4½ cups or 6 (6-ounce serving) soup.

Banana Snack Shake

Winter— A Shock!

Rosemary Downs and Debbie Charlette, two visitors from Australia told Rethersville Women's Institute members and their 4H Girls Homemaking Club that their first Canadian winter was "a bit of a shock" to them.

The girls were describing their homes in Bundaberg, Queensland at the institute's June meet held in Albury Community Centre.

"Accessories" for the Bedroom", - 4H Girls project was explained by Mrs. Lora McDonald. For this project, the girls had to make either a bedspread or three smaller items, such as waste baskets, cushions or dresser scarves.

Polio Threat Being Ignored

OTTAWA (CP) — "It's remarkable what short memories people have. Polio was a killer—and it could be, again. There's no excuse for not seeking protection through the immunization program."

So said Dr. John W. Davies, chief of epidemiology for the federal health department.

He was commenting on reports from the United States Monday that only two out of three children in the one-to-four age group in that country have adequate protection against poliomyelitis—a disease that less than 15 years ago was crippling hundreds of children.

U.S. figures showed only 63 per cent of American children ago one-to-four were adequately protected compared with 74 per cent a few years ago.

But a cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows that the downward trend in sealing protection is apparent in parts of Canada as well.

In British Columbia, for example, a survey by the provincial health department showed only 63.9 per cent of children entering Grade 1 had polio immunization that was up to date. This was down from 80.1 per cent in 1965.

New Brunswick health officials estimated about 70 per cent of children ago one had received the initial immunization against polio—also called infantile paralysis because of the crippling effects on children who contract the disease.

They said there has been a drop in immunization because parents no longer were worried about the threat of polio—and also because of "complacency."

Saskatchewan health officials also reported concern over public apathy in light of the relatively few cases of polio. There cases occurred in the province last year.

Quebec, Ontario and Alberta had no estimates for numbers of babies being immunized, and the remaining four provinces estimated about 10 to 30 per cent of one-year-olds were protected.

Polio vaccine usually is given to babies about the third month, with three doses having been given by age six or seven months, Dr. Davies said. A booster is required at age 15 to 18 months, then again when the child enters school.

One of the reasons for the lack of concern over polio is the great drop in the numbers of cases, Dr. Davies said. There have been only one-to-four cases a year in the last few years, down from 909 cases in 1960.

There were 83 deaths from polio in 1969.

"But the polio virus germ still is present," he added in an interview. "We've almost eradicated the disease—but the germs are still there.

"There's no excuse, for parents not seeking protection."

The vaccine is free and the provinces run clinics where the immunization will be done as well, he said. Family doctors also will give the vaccine.

Polio vaccine was discovered by Dr. Jonas Salk of the U.S. in 1953 and introduced in immunization programs in Canada in 1955.

The oral vaccine, discovered by Dr. Albert Sabin of the U.S. in 1955, was first licensed for use in Canada in March 1962—by which time about 70 per cent of Canadians under age 40 had received immunization with the Salk vaccine.

Phone Call Dates Vital to Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) — The dates in 1972 when telephone calls and meetings took place between key figures have become of paramount importance at hearings of the legislature select committee into the awarding of the contract for Ontario Hydro's new headquarters building here.

In an effort to pinpoint some of these dates, John Cronyn and E. J. Smith, both of London, Ont., were recalled to testify Tuesday.

Mr. Smith is president of Ellis-Don, one of three construction firms which failed in their bid to obtain the Hydro contract, awarded last Nov. 1 to Canada Square Corp. Ltd. of Toronto.

The committee also said it plans to call as witnesses James D. Fleck, chief executive officer to Premier Davis, and Joe Baracicke, a Toronto real estate man.

Mr. Cronyn testified earlier that he spoke to Mr. Fleck sometime during last week of November or the first week of December about the Hydro contract.

Mr. Cronyn said he told Mr. Fleck about Mr. Smith's opinion that the competitive bidding method Hydro awarded the contract and said that "apparently Hydro had done a sloppy job."

Richard Shibley, committee legal counsel, said he talked with Mr. Fleck, who probably will testify today, and Mr. Fleck recalled the date of the meeting with Mr. Cronyn as the first two weeks of November.

Mr. Cronyn has testified that about Dec. 12 or 14 he made his famous" telephone call to Mr. Smith.

In that call he told Mr. Smith The Globe and Mail was investigating the Hydro deal and might be calling him. He said he advised Mr. Smith to talk to the newspaper if he was dissatisfied, but, to avoid "conjecture and hearsay."

Mr. Cronyn testified that a letter dated July 14, 1972, he received from Mr. Smith made no impression on him and he destroyed it.

In Mr. Smith said in the letter's final paragraph that Joe Baracicke "suggested that I might jeopardize any future dealings with the government if I stirred anything up" on the Hydro job.

Mr. Baracicke is president of the Metro Toronto Progressive Conservative Businessmen's Association.

In his testimony Tuesday, Mr. Cronyn said that at no time did he attempt to use any influence to assist Mr. Smith in receiving consideration for his Hydro proposal.

He said he felt free to mention Mr. Smith's dissatisfaction to Mr. Fleck late in 1972 because by that time the Hydro contract had been let.

His concern was not for a contract that had been awarded but for the manner in which future contracts would be awarded, said Mr. Cronyn.

Friday the 13th of July could be your lucky day.

CP News Roundup

Gas Rate Increase Approved

TORONTO (CP) — J. C. McCarthy, president of Consumers' Gas Co., announced Tuesday that an interim increase of about two per cent in the company's gas rates has been granted by the Ontario Energy Board.

The board released its reasons for decision Tuesday, and an order making the interim increase retroactive to June 1, 1973, is expected to be issued next week.

Mr. McCarthy said the board indicated that the interim increase should be granted subject to refunds or adjustments pending the findings of the board at a hearing to resume Aug. 7.

Consumers' Gas is seeking permission for an increase in rates of 2.3 cents per thousand cubic feet to recover an increase in rates charged to the company by its supplier, TransCanada PipeLines Ltd.

Mr. McCarthy said the impact on a residential customer's bill will be an increase of about $3.25 a year.

Consumers' Gas applied in April for a hearing to confirm its rate but submitted amended rates after TransCanada PipeLines was allowed an increase.

A company spokesman said some consumers would have been billed already for their June service and from their metre reading will be billed retroactively. The retroactive increase would amount only "to a fraction of a cent."

Conciliation Officer Asked

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Airline Flight Attendants Association (CAFAA) Tuesday asked for a federal conciliation officer to help negotiate a new contract with Air Canada.

Talks between the government-controlled airline and the national union, representing 2,600 flight directors, pursers and stewardesses, broke off Friday, CAFAA business manager R. R. Smeal said Tuesday. The workers have been without a contract since May 31.

Mr. Smeal said about 20 per cent of CAFAA members are juniors, which Air Canada puts on 24-hour standby, usually for five days at a time.

Union members are paid for each hour they are flying, he said. The other 80 per cent of the membership usually work steady shifts. However, juniors are guaranteed only a minimum amount of flying time—a minimum wage.

Mr. Smeal said the union believes the company should pay its juniors for their standby time.

Children Smart

OTTAWA (CP)—"I make no apologies for trying to sell toys through the medium of TV," Mac Irwin of Irwin Toy Ltd. told the Commons broadcasting committee Tuesday night.

Mr. Irwin, 46, executive vice-president of the largest toy manufacturer in Canada and the largest advertiser with a $2.2 million budget, said children are more "discerning . . . a heck of a lot smarter than their parents when it comes to toy selection."

The committee is studying advertising aimed at children and will submit its findings to the House for consideration.

Demand High

LONDON (CP) — World demand for wheat in the next 12 months is expected to exceed supply by about 300 million bushels, the International Wheat Council reported Tuesday.

Canada's export deliveries are estimated at between 365 million and 415 million bushels for the 1973-74 crop year which the council described as "much below the level hoped for."

Over-taxed

OTTAWA (CP) — An overzealous computer deducted $24 million more than it should have for income taxes from unemployment insurance cheques, the Commons was told Tuesday by Reg Stackhouse (PC—Toronto Scarborough East).

He asked the government to take special steps to refund the money extracted between January and June but then leave the matter until 1973 income-tax returns are filed next spring. The insurance recipients were not to blame.

Heads Jaycees

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Robert Malong of Moncton, N.B., was elected national president of the Canadian Jaycees at the final session Tuesday of their four-day annual meeting. He defeated Gerry Meinzer of Toronto on the first ballot. Mr. Malone was vice-president of the Atlantic region.

Lack of Canadian Designers Irks Neptune Theatre Artist

HALIFAX (CP) — Not enough Canadian designers are being hired to work for leading theatres in this country, says Les Lawrence, a former Neptune Theatre designer who has returned to direct designs for a new Neptune play this summer.

The Toronto-born artist, who now is design supervisor with the CBC, notes that in the 20-year history of the Shakespeare productions in Stratford, Ont., few Canadians have had the opportunity to work on sets for the productions.

Most of them have been American or British, the 38-year-old Canadian noted in an interview. Therefore, there has been no opportunity for the development of a stable of Canadian designers.

"Canadians have more serious commitment than guest designers," the artist said. The recent Director Ontario meeting produced Arnold Edinborough's comment that "if there aren't any good Canadian designers, it's somebody's fault."

Mr. Lawrence was in charge of the English Canada representation at the International design exhibition in Prague several years ago and found it difficult to explain why most of the major productions done in Canada had been designed by non-Canadians."

He was a member of the founding company at Neptune 10 years ago and designed the theatre stage and helped build it. He did the set and stage designs for a number of plays in the first three seasons.

For the anniversary, the University of Toronto-educated artist has returned to design An Italian Straw Hat, which opens in July.

Mr. Lawrence's stay at U. of T. coincided with that of Leon Major, first artistic director with Neptune. After graduation he tried the dual role of actor-designer.

However, people would not accept the dual role so he leaned towards the design end of theatre. He said the secret of successful designing is to have a good working relationship with the director. If the two get along, then it's much easier.

He has studied design in Strasbourg, France, for a year under a Canada Council grant.

Mr. Lawrence said Canadian theatres should produce more Canadian plays and so "lure the Charlebois[illegible] val as an exclusively Canadian operation.

"There are myths about Canadian-authored plays at the box office. In fact, statistics show they do no worse than other plays."

Street Art: Tasselled Trucks Crowd Brazilian Roads

FORTALEZA, Brasil (AP) — The folk art here is on trucks.

Tens of thousands of trucks in this huge country are decorated with hand-painted designs in a profusion of colors.

Graffiti abound on bumpers and mudflaps. Seats, windshields, steering wheels and gearshifts have tassel and fringe. Religious medals, family pictures, souvenir trinkets and an occasional voodoo charm cover parts of the dashboards.

"I think it looks nice this way," Manuel Bitencourt Fonseca said, pointing to his truck.

The wooden slats on the flatbed of the six-ton rig were painted green, yellow and white. The white ones had carefully painted red and yellow flowery doodads on them. A green-and-white diamond design rimmed the front windshields. Two straw hats and a miniature bala skirt dangled from the rearview mirror.

The rear bumper proclaimed: "To Remember is Easy for Him Who Has a Memory! To Forget is Difficult for Him who Has a Heart!"

"I thought it up by myself," remarked Fonseca, a veteran of 11 years behind the wheel.

Other trucks parked nearby offered the following insights:

"Don't be Jealous of Me. Work."

"Your Eyes Will Tell Me the Truth."

"My Heart Flipped Over on the Curves of Your Body."

Foreign Legion Builds South Sea Isle Roads

PAPEETE, Tahiti (AP) — The Beau Geste generation wouldn't believe it. . . the French Foreign Legion in hammocks and sarongs, building roads in the South Seas without a camel in sight.

The legion just isn't the same old last resort for romantics and misfits spoiling for a fight. Here, the main task is helping build facilities to test the nuclear weapons to put their style of battle out of fashion.

The Tahiti contingent, officers here say, is one of the six remaining legion regiments. Only a unit in French Somaliland and another farther down the east coast of Africa in Madagascar are based outside of France.

And camels went out years ago.

"Yes, there are men who miss a good scrap," said Lt.-Col. Henri Riou, a 26-year veteran and the top legion officer here. "Today we are motorized, modernized. There is no, more folklore."

In Tahiti and in neighboring Polynesian islands, about 600 legionnaires work with 300 regular army men in a mixed construction unit. Their 5th Regiment standard, strung with ribbons from Indochina in 1880 and later North Africa skirmishes, hangs in the office of their commander—a career army engineer.

The legion left Indochina almost two decades ago, and independence in North Africa ended France's role there.

"We don't want war again, but if it's necessary, we'll be in the first row . . ." said Riou, second in command. "If someone said tomorrow we're going to Indochina, even as tourists, every man would volunteer."

He shrugged a Gallic shrug and added:

"But if there's no war, we've got other things to do."

The old movies don't show it, but the legion's mission has always been to build as well as fight. The legion cut roads all over France's now dwindling empire.

Legionnaires in Polynesia, besides building the bomb test installation, have put up an enormous sports stadium in Papeete along with other public works projects.

The mixed unit here erects and guards facilities used in the French nuclear tests on remote islands of Polynesia. They operate on at least 10 different islands.

As always since the legion was formed in 1831, only the officers can be Frenchmen. Legionnaires here have dozens of nationalities and background and, Rioux says, the changed role around the world hasn't hurt recruitment.

Some of the men ease right into relaxed island life, and dozens have retired early to settle down here with their girlfriends and wives.

"Men like to come here, but this isn't the most sought-after post," said Riou. "Most want to go to Djibouti (Somaliland). There they do patrols, too, and they satisfy the legionnaire's fo r passions — fighting and constructing."

Col. Alfred Baltzemjer, the army man who commands the mixed regiment, says he finds the legion admirably suited to its new role here.

"In Polynesia, at least, the legionnaire can still follow his dream. But, anyway, these men are professionals and they do what is required. We have no discipline problems here.

"To the legion, the word 'exceptional' is very, very important."

Lakehead Welcome Hilarious

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) —Indians, fur traders and an obullient mayor nearly swamped westward-bound Queen Elizabeth Tuesday with two hours and 15 minutes of steady action during a stop here on her way to Regina.

En route from Charlottetown to attend RCMP centennial celebrations in the Saskatchewan capital, the Queen was met at the airport by a cheering, flag-waving crowd of about 300, a brass band, a corps of Legionnaires and a strong, steady wind.

That wind blew the Queen's bold, green, printed, shantung dress nearly up into her face, but a close-fitting, matching, green, straw hat kept her hair in place.

The royal couple were driven along streets lined with people to a city hall ceremony where about 5,000 roared a greeting.

Mayor Walter Assef, a former vaudeville comedian, transformed the routine city hall ceremony into one of the most hilarious incidents on the 30-day, four-province tour.

The short, bald mayor did a little dance as he presented the Queen with a medallion, then turned to Prince Philip to welcome him.

"Prince Philip, Your Royal Highness," said the mayor, "we're so pleased you and your gracious wife could be here today."

Philip grimaced.

The Queen grinned.

The mayor went on: "I'd like to present you with a beautiful painting of a loon," he said to Philip.

But then, after looking around, he said: "Where is that loon?"

Later: "Here it is."

And then, after showing it to Philip, he turned — and commanded an aide to "show it to Her Majesty."

By this time the Queen and Prince were laughing and holding their sides in merriment.

Earlier, at the airport, Mayor Assef put his arm around the Queen-something unheard of in the rigid protocol that surrounds royal tours—when he greeted her along with Premier William Davis of Ontario.

Metis Plan To Baycott Royal Visit

REGINA (CP) — The Metis Society of Saiikatchewan, an organization of people of white and Indian ancestry, announced Tuesday it will baycott the royal visit to the province.

Jim Sinclair, society president, said he and his wife had been invited to attend a banquet to be held here in the Queen's honor and about 100 seats had been allotted the society for Wednesday's RCMP centennial celebrations. None of the invitations would be accepted, Mr. Sinclair said.

He said that to accept the invitations would be to condone oppression of natives by the RCMP. He said the RCMP had been organized 100 years ago as a military force to protect the railways and prevent natives' attempts to keep their land.

While the Metis society's protest is aimed primarily at the RCMP, Mr. Sinclair said the Crown also deserves criticism.

Three Killed

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A four-vehicle accident claimed the lives of three men Tuesday on Highway 17 about one mile west of this community, 20 miles west of North Bay.

Dead are Alcide Shank, 63, of Cache Bay, Ont., and Eugene Meunier, 66, also of Cache Bay; passengers in one car. Leonard Styles, 77, of Kinburn, Ont., a passenger in another car, also was killed.

NDP to Continue To Oppose Tax Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Determined New Democrats continued to fight government corporate tax cuts Tuesday night despite strong indications that the Liberal, Conservative and Social Credit parties would band together to push them through Parliament.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said he sees no evidence the business community needs the nine-point reduction. Lorne Nystrom (NDP—Yorkton-Melville) said the cuts will only help regions of the country that do not need help. John Rodriguez (NDP—Nickel Belt) called it "a corporate welfare benefit program."

The third-reading vote on the proposed amendments to the Income Tax Act was expected today. Retroactive to the beginning of this year, they would reduce to 40 per cent from 50 per cent the tax on profits in manufacturing and processing industries and would permit a faster write-off on capital investment in machinery.

The NDP sees the trimmed taxes as just another giveaway to the so-called corporate welfare bums while the three other parties generally view them as a chance for industry to put more money into creating jobs.

The last barrier apparently fell Tuesday night when Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said he is virtually certain his party will vote for the tax reduction.

"Chances are very slight that we would vote against it," he said outside the House.

He expects Finance Minister John Turner to establish an adequate procedure for parliamentary review of the legislation next year, the last obstacle to Conservative support.

"Based on statements the minister has made, we fully expect to get that. . . ."

The proposed legislation provides for an automatic review next year if 60 or more MPs sign a petition to this effect.

Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar) set his party's tone by saying no government in Canadian history has been "so thoroughly taken to the cleaners" by big business as this one.

A 63-year-old farmer, Mr. Gleave said corporations have milked the government of so much that they must be laughing up their sleeves.

Before Mr. Turner outlined his review machinery, George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) said the government is tossing a $260-million toy at companies which are mostly foreign-controlled, with no assurance it will be used properly.

He suggested it would be easy for a company to pay extra dividends to investors rather than use the money to create new jobs.

Gas Price Accord Will Be Pursued

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal government will continue to attempt to bring Alberta and Ontario together in their fight over natural gas prices, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday.

He said the Alberta-Ontario dispute is a question of determining prices and normally would be settled through negotiation.

Ontario has suggested it will go to court to test Alberta's desire to charge a higher price for natural gas sold outside the province. Ontario filed an intervention Friday with the Alberta energy resources conservation board challenging the board's jurisdiction to rule on gas being exported from the province.

Mr. Macdonald said he believed Alberta's two-price natural gas plan is constitutional because it actually is a one-price system with a rebate by the provincial government to Alberta consumers.

The minister did not comment on Ontario's challenge against the energy and pourers conservation board to rule on gas exports from Alberta.

Don Getty, provincial minister of intergovernmental affairs, who joined Mines and Minerals Minister Bill Dickie of Alberta in a meeting with Mr. Macdonald, said the federal minister suggested Ottawa would participate in a court case if necessary, but would not necessarily take a firm stand in the case.

CN Non-ops Unanimous In Supporting Strike

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

Belleville's largest railway local voted unanimously Tuesday to take strike action if necessary to back up demands in a contract settlements.

The 250 non - operating workers, members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, Local 128, held a closed meeting at Club Carra. The union's national contract with Canadian National Railways expired Dec. 31, 1972.

Ottawa non-ops also voted Tuesday to support union leaders. There are more than 250 members in the Ottawa local.

It would appear, however, that the workers are at least a month away from a strike that would almost certainly cause an immediate shutdown of railway operations. A conciliation board report is not expected to be handed in before July 30, after which the union must wait seven days before it can legally stop work.

Local chairman Jack Thomas said last night's meeting was one of a series to be held across Canada before July 10. That's the date by which union negotiators will know whether or not they have membership backing.

"We held unanimous vote," Mr. Thomas said, "To give the president of the union the right to call a strike or take whatever action is necessary to bring a favorable and acceptable settlement."

Contract talks between the union and the railway began last November. Government mediators were called in early this year but, again, no settlement could be reached.

From June 19 - 26, representatives from both the union and CN met before a conciliation board headed by chairman Mr. Justice Craig Munroe. The chairman had been expected to hand his report over to Labor Minister John Munroe by July 23, but instead asked for a one-week extension.

Non - operating workers make up nearly a quarter of CN's 900 - person Belleville staff. They include warehousemen, truck drivers, baggage and ticket men, clerical personnel and supply people.

Main issues in the negotiations have been wages and fringe benefits. Among other demands, the union wants sick leave payments to be implemented.

Flea Market at Fair One of Many Features

A flea market at Belleville Fair?

That might sound a bit hard to believe but it is just one of the innovations directors of the Belleville Exhibition have come up with in their continuing effort to offer fairgoers "something on everyone."

The flea market — provided an opportunity for marketing of odds and ends, antiques, crafts and bazaar items — is scheduled for August 11, the last day of the fair.

Building No. 2 will be the market location and if response is great, any overflow will be accommodated in the Bleecker building.

Another innovation for this year's four-day exhibition run from August 8 - 11 is a non competitive hobbies and creations division intended to fill the gap between competition for prize money and the straight commercial display. An award of $25 will be made for each display considered worthy and classed as an asset to the exhibition.

Items applicable for display include models, collections, creations and projects with a display should fill an area 16 feet square or larger.

These displays will be located in the Bleecker building and items once in position must remain on display. If sales are the primary interest this can be arranged through the Saturday flea market.

All displays in the non-competitive division are to be in position by 5 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 7 and remain in position until 11 p.m. August 16.

Persons interested in participation are invited to contact the division chairman, Ronald Hamilton, RR 5 Trenton, phone 392-5369.

Time Again for Fun 'n' Games

Anticipation is in the air as supervisor Debbie Carr takes registrations from small fry at Alemite playgrounds Monday. For the next six weeks city youngsters will be involved in supervised leisure time activities as civic recreation program gets in full swing.

Fairgoers Like Midway Best

What's the greatest single attraction at the Quinte Exhibition?

There is just no doubt about it, according to a public opinion poll survey taken during last year's event, the midway wins out hands down.

Out of approximately 1,000 people polled, no less than 469 plumped for the midway as being the big attraction although 535 were general in their response stating that everything at the fair appealed.

The survey was conducted by the Prince Edward Bluenoses Queen and her princesses with the majority of the people polled being in the 17- to 35-year age group.

Running close behind "everything" and the midway in exhibition appeal were the general exhibits with this category receiving 402 votes.

But the exhibition is apparently losing some of its appeal as an agricultural show.

Of the approximately 1,000 persons polled, only 75 listed the cattle show as their main attraction; 117 voted for the horse show and 118 for animals in general.

The Hell Drivers and the demolition derby rated along with the horse show, listing 113 and 105 enthusiasts respectively.

The dairy princess contest was of interest to only 2.3 per cent of the persons polled while the 4-H and Junior Fair had 2.3 per cent of the vote.

Not all persons polled answered all questions but 674 felt they had received value for their price of admission to the fairgrounds.

Of the 1,000 persons polled, 553 favored the one admission price at the gate which includes a free grandstand.

(The one admission price has been in effect at the exhibition for the past two years, although to get on the grandstand for special attractions, customers are expected to give proof of a gate ticket purchase or show their fair membership cards.

Fair manager Everett Gossell said the requirement of a gate ticket purchase rules out any "fence hoppers" from obtaining grandstand admission.

And while not all persons answered all questions there was a strong preference shown for a fairgrounds facility where food and alcoholic beverages could be obtained.

Poll results on this question showed 407 for and 213 against.

Dates for this year's Quinte Exhibition are August 8-11.

Master Lost Nine Matches

Chess master Walter Dobrick, who took on all comers at Quinte Mall over the weekend was beaten by nine local people.

The winners earned a trophy and a year's subscription to a chess magazine. Among the winners were two brothers, Dennis Benson of Cobourg and Kenneth Benson of Belleville, and a 10-year-old, Paul Amodeo of RR 1, Corbyville.

Other winners were Mr. Johnston of Trenton, Paul Lamain of Trenton, William Broderick Ian Wilkes, a non Michael McKenna of Belleville, and Pierre Hamstra of Corbyville.

Leola Easterbrook Nursing Director

Mrs. Leola Easterbrook has assumed one of the Quinte district's top administrative posts for women — director of public health nursing in Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

A native of Toronto, she joined the health unit serving both counties a year ago.

She succeeds Mrs. Jean Hyatt who had been nursing director since the unit was formed six years ago. Mrs. Hyatt retired at the end of June.

Tuesday was the first day for Mrs. Easterbrook at the desk from which she now directs the unit's staff of 25 nurses. Working out of offices in Belleville, Picton, Trenton and Bancroft, the nursing staff is involved in school health care, home visiting and immunization centres.

A graduate of University of Toronto, Mrs. Easterbrook holds a Bachelor of Science degree in nursing. She was engaged in public health work in North York and Leader taught a nursing program for seven years at Weston Collegiate before she joined the Hastings and Prince Edward health unit.

$6-million Contract Awarded to Northern

Northern Electric Co. Ltd. aims for the skies again with a $6-million contract from Hughes Aircraft Company at El Segundo, California, for four spacecraft electronic assemblies.

Three of the four spacecraft have been ordered by the American Satellite Corporation of New York and the fourth by Western Union Telegraph Co. All will be used for domestic communications within the United States.

A Northern spokesman said this was the second follow-on contract awarded to his company as a direct result of Telesat Canada's purchase of three synchronous orbit communication satellites from Hughes Aircraft. In closing the 1970 deal with the California based company, Telesat Canada asked for maximum Canadian content.

"It is clear that Hughes is very happy with our work," said Mr. W. T. Singrosa, president of Northern Electric's Transmission Division. "We have an order in-house placed last August for the electronics for three spacecrafts. With these additional units it brings our production total to ten."

He said it was expected Northern would have "the closest thing to a mass production assembly line possible in this business."

"Our schedule calls for producing the electronics for one complete spacecraft every two months," said Mr. Simpson. "In space terms, that's a dizzying pace."

With orders for component parts already being placed, current production requirements will keep Northern's satellite facility at the Lasarne, Quebec, busy running full capacity to the middle of 1975. The project employs about 100 people, most of them skilled assembly workers and highly specialized engineers.

Museum Will Have Musical Opening

It's going to be a musical occasion when the doors to Hastings County's new museum open for the first time Saturday.

On the front lawn of Glanmore House will be the Belleville Choral Society under the direction of Murray Irwin. Accompanied by S. Alec Gordon, they'll begin the festivities at 1.30 p.m.

Joining the singers are Belleville's Concert Brass. The 14-member horn ensemble has doubled in size since its inception two years ago under the tutelage of instructor Jack Green.

Inside, the music will be in keeping with a converted Victorian mansion. Strings from the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra, led by the orchestra's concert master Marian Stratton, will add a formal touch to the already ornate billiard room on Glanmore's main floor.

Representatives from all levels of government will help inaugurate the museum where volunteers are working around the clock in preparation for the big event. Chairman for the day is Dr. M. Careless of the Historical Sites Board.

K of C Elect New Executive

The Knights of Columbus Belleville Council has elected a new executive for 1973-74.

Heading the list of new officers is Ted Kelly as grand knight.

Other officers: Joe Generaux, deputy grand knight; Wilf Foley, chancellor; Andre Mercier, warden; John Hanley, recorder; Don Blaish, financial secretary; Jack Johnston, treasurer; Frank Domenico, advocate; Jack Keoman, Larry Dalpee, Gerald Gilbert, guards; Bill Lynch, Doug Windsor, Bob Pearce, trustees; Rev. Kenneth Suit, chaplain.

Labor Legislation To Be Explained At Quinte Mall

The Ontario ministry of labor will be coming to the people in the Quinte Mall on Thursday, Friday and Saturday this week.

A four-person team will set up a booth to answer questions on "on everything from minimum wages to the human rights bill" said spokesman Elizabeth Price.

The student project providing information on employment rights for the labor force (SPIEL) is designed to increase the general public's awareness of legislation, programs and services of the ministry of labor. In addition to giving information on the ministry, the students will make a survey on general questions related to work practices.

The team, based in Kingston, will establish temporary communication centres in shopping centres, exhibitions and other market places where people gather. This week's visit will be the first of the summer to Belleville, but the team hopes to return before the season is over.

The students are drawn from universities and community colleges and given a training course before going out to operate the information centres.

Ending It All?

Mike (black trunks) and Willard Towell aren't ending it all with this leap off the Footbridge Tuesday afternoon, but it looked like it for some of the passersby who saw the boys fall into little over three feet of Moira River water. The brothers found little dviger in the jump and the cool splashdown was a welcome relief from the 80-degree heat.

Intelligencer Sports

Brothers Duel Jim Gets Win

The Perrys were in Cleveland, making a bit of American League history; Wilbur Wood was in Texas, making a bit of a comeback, and Sparky Lyle was in New York, making another save.

Neither Gaylord Perry of Cleveland Indians nor brother Jim of Detroit Tigers were around at the finish. But Wood was, for a change. And Lyle . . . well, the finish is the only time you'll find him.

Jim didn't figure in Detroit's 5-4 victory—but Gaylord got the loss, his 11th in 19 decisions this season.

In the other American League games, Chicago White Sox shellacked Texas 15-1 in the first game of a doubleheader before the Rangers took the second game 2-1, New York Yankees beat Boston Red Sox 3-1, Kansas City Royals outslugged Minnesota Twins 7-6; Oakland Athletics shut out California Angels 3-0 and Baltimore Orioles bounced Milwaukee Brewers 9-7 in the first game of a scheduled two-night twinbill. The second game, halted by a midnight curfew with the Brewers leading 4-1 after seven innings, was to be completed today.

"I'd like to pitch against him again," Gaylord said of Jim after they'd become the first brother act to appear as opposing starting pitchers in the American League.

"Both of us will have to do a better job, though," he added.

Norm Cash hit his 11th and 12th home runs of the season, the second one spending a three-run seventh inning that carried the Tigers over the Indians.

After the second one, Jim Northrup singled, took second on a wild pitch and scored the tying run on a single by Rich Reese—who in turn moved to second on a passed ball and came around on Ed Brinkman's single.

About a month ago, Wood had appeared a shoo-in to become a 20-game winner for the White Sox. On May 26, he owned a 13-1 record. But No. 14 didn't come until June 8—and No. 15 seemed to take forever.

He finally got it against the Rangers, limiting them to four hits while his Chicago teammates battered Texas for 15 hits. The big problem, Chicago manager Chuck Tanner said, wasn't Wood's pitching. It was the team's hitting—or lack of it.

The Rangers salvaged a split in the second game as Jim Bibby tossed a three-hitter and Ken Suarez backed him with a two-run single in the seventh inning.

Lyle wasn't the big hero of New York's victory. That role was reserved for Ron Blomberg. He got only one hit in three at-bats as his batting average slipped to .208. But the one hit was a three-run homer off Marty Pattin.

It gave Sam McDowell the victory—and Lyle was manager Ralph Houk's hero after he handcuffed the Red Sox through the last three innings, gaining his 21st save.

NORM CASH
Carries Tigers

Tony Oliva kept hitting home runs for the Twins—but his three weren't enough. It was Paul Schaal's second of the night, a leadoff shotin the ninth inning, that carried the Royals past Minnesota.

Ken Holtzman rattled off his 13th victory of the year for the Athletics with a neat 11-strike, five-hitter. One hit was all he needed to whip the Angels and he got it from Joe Rudi, a two-run homer in the fifth inning off Nolan Ryan.

Johnny Briggs had a three-run homer and Don Money a two-run double for Milwaukee to counter Baltimore Grich's two homers for the Orioles. But all that came before the Birds' six-run eighth inning which obliterated a 7 - 3 Brewer lead.

Chris In Select Company

LONDON (AP) Chris Evert, the poker-faced 18-year-old from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., is the odd girl out here today. She's the only semi-finalist in the women's singles at the Wimbledon tennis tournament who hasn't yet won the title.

And she's drawn the opponent she considers the toughest of the four—Margaret Court of Australia.

Fourth-seeded Miss Evert met the tall Aussie once previously on grass and she remembered me," she confessed wryly.

But Miss Evert said philosophically: "If I just go out and say, 'I'm seeded fourth and she's seeded first, I'm not doing nothing to lose in going for everything."

Last year, Miss Evert was a tough fight over Bjorn Borg, the new sensation of women's tennis and the hardest to beat. This year, with the pressure off, she's more relaxed.

The other semi-finalists are defending champion Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., and Evonne Goolagong of Australia. Theirs will be a rematch of last year's final in which Mrs. King won 6-3, 6-3. Evonne had won the title in 1971, beating Mrs. Court.

Miss Goolagong has been the most consistent performer this year, reaching the semi-finals without dropping a set. Even Mrs. Court, who strode imperiously through the first three rounds, surprisingly was taken to three sets in her quarter-final against Olga Morozova of Russia.

So was Miss Evert, who dropped a quarter-final set to Rosie Casals of San Francisco. And Mrs. King has run into trouble twice. Lesley Hunt, the unseeded Australian, took a set from her in the fourth round before Mrs. King won 8-6, 6-2.

In the men's singles, Alex Mayer, a law student from Wayne, N.J., has emerged as the star of the competition.

Mayer, a bright and breezy 21 year-old, scored a stunning third-round victory over Ilie Nastase of Romania, one of the world's best players.

Then in Tuesday's quarter-finals, he rallied from two sets down for a 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 victory over eighth-seeded Juergen Fassbender of West Germany.

Mayer will be the only American—and the only non-seed—in the semi-finals of the men's singles. The other American in the quarter-finals, Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., lost 8-6, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4 to Alex Metreveli, the first Russian ever to reach the semi-finals in the men's singles.

The other semi-final will be between Roger Taylor of Britain, seeded third and winner in a tough fight over Bjorn Borg, seeded Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia.

Kodes also had a hard time in his quarter-final, before eliminating 19-year-old Vijay Amritraj of India 6-4, 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Joe Frazier Is Looking For Foreman

LONDON (AP) — World heavyweight champion George Foreman headed homeward Tuesday, indicating he might soon offer a crack at his crown to Joe Bugner.

Bugner was beaten by Joe Frazier over 12 punishing rounds here Monday night.

Foreman was loud in his praise of Bugner, Britain's European titleholder who was hailed as a hero in the local press for a brave and almost always a upright performance against the former champion.

Foreman, however, had nothing to disclose about prospects for a return fight with Frazier, now starting a comeback after losing the title to Foreman in a two-rounds in Jamaica last January.

Frazier, who dropped Bugner for a count of nine in the 10th round but lacked the old fire-power that should have finished off the 23-year-old Briton, said after Monday night's bout at Earl's Court arena:

"A return fight is out. I'm looking for Foreman."

Bobby Riggs Challenges

LONDON (AP) — Veteran tennis star Bobby Riggs has challenged the winner of the women's singles championship at Wimbledon to a winner-take-all match with a $100,000 prize put up by a television company, the Daily Express newspaper reported today.

Riggs, who recently beat No. 1 seed Margaret Court of Australia, was quoted as saying he had made the four semi-finalists "an offer they can't refuse."

The four are Mrs. Court, Billie Jean King, Evonne Goolagong and Chris Evert.

The Daily Express quoted Riggs, 55, as saying: "All the girls have agreed in principle to play the match."

The match, the paper reported, likely would be staged at Hilton Head, S.C., in September. But no date has been set.

Riggs was quoted as saying:

"I'm not good enough to play the men these days, but a person I can still handle the girls."

SIGNS CONTRACT

OTTAWA (CP) — Quarterback Rick Cassata Tuesday signed a one-year contract with Ottawa Rough Riders, the Eastern Football Conference club announced. Cassata, who led Riders on a tie for first place in the EFC last season, has been working out with the club but took part in no hitting drills while his 1973 contract remained unsigned.

Expos Shatter Mets' And Team Records

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I'll remember this game for the rest of my life," said Expos' third baseman Bob Bailey, who put on a show identical fans—and New York Mets—will not soon forget.

Bailey slammed two home runs—one of them a grand slam—and drove in seven runs, leading the Expos to a record-shattering 19-8 pasting of the Mets Tuesday night.

The 19 runs and 21 hits were the most ever by the Expos.

After his sixth-inning grand slam, the crowd of 12,279 at Jarry Park gave Bailey a standing ovation the next two times he came to bat—and he responded with a solo homer in the seventh and a single in the eighth.

Elsewhere in the National League, St. Louis Cardinals clobbered over the .500 mark for the first time this season by sweeping a two-night doubleheader from Pittsburgh Pirates 4-0 and 7-6; Atlanta Braves blanked Houston Astros 1-0; Philadelphia Phillies defeated Chicago Cubs 6-2; San Diego Padres topped Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1, and Cincinnati Reds beat San Francisco Giants 4-3.

The Mets were winning 5-4 until Bailey's two-run double in the fifth inning. They broke it open with seven runs in the sixth on a bases-loaded walk to Ron Woods, Bailey's grand slam and John Boccabella's two-run blast.

"I don't know what kind of pitch it was. I think it was a fastball around the eyes—and it went out."

The 30-year-old Bailey has been booed by some fans this year for bad season, that he batted .233. But he earned those boos to cheers Tuesday night.

"That's the standing ovation they gave me tonight," he said. "It's only a minority that get on my back last year," he said.

Rick Wise pitched a seven-hitter for the Expos, who won their first game, while rookie Ken Reitz hit a bases-loaded triple to cap a five-run fifth inning that powered the Cards to victory in the nightcap.

Rich Folkers, a relief specialist who was making only the third start of his major league career, was coasting with a 7-1 lead into the ninth, but needed help from Diego Segui when the Pirates rallied for five runs, four of them on a pinch-hit grand slam by Willie Stargell, his 24th homer of the year. Atlanta's Carl Morton gave up 10 hits but managed to shut out the Astros. Mike Lum drove in the game's only run with a second inning grounder.

Greg Gross' two-run homer in the first inning got the Cubs started on the way to victory. Rick Monday hit a pair of solo homers for Chicago.

Randy Jones pitched a four-hitter for his first major league victory and Nate Colbert slammed a bases-loaded double for the Padres.

No baseball game has ever been rained out at Cincinnati's riverfront Stadium, a record that was kept intact when Tuesday's game with the Giants finally got under way after a seven-delay of two hours, 25 minutes.

Bobby Tolan's tie-breaking homer helped the Reds to victory. Pete Rose scored his 1,064th career run—most ever by a Cincinnati player, while San Francisco's Bobby Bonds led off the game with a homer, the ninth time he has done it—an NL record.

Paul Has One-hitter

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A 10th-inning two-run home run by Bill Berg provided the winning margin as the Calgary Cannes handed Niagara Falls its fourth straight loss, a 7-5 decision, in Ontario Provincial League play Tuesday.

In other games, Oshawa edged Burlington 1-0 in eleven innings, Welland rallied to beat Kitchener 7-6 and London defeated Woodstock 8-3.

In Niagara Falls, Dick Balint recorded the win giving up seven hits. Losing pitcher Jake Neufeld allowed seven hits but his team committed five errors.

Paul Wannamaker gave up a single to the first batter he faced in Oshawa and then pitched no-hit ball the rest of the game as Oshawa used an unearned run in the 11th inning to get by Burlington.

Al Few was tagged for the loss, allowing six hits.

Reserve Shades Latta

It took Reserve till the seventh inning to defeat Latta 3-2 and clinch out of the South Hastings baseball League cellar Tuesday.

Going into the bottom of the seventh, with the score tied 2-2, Reserve pitcher Ken Barnhart connected with a John Pepper pitch to double. Dan Brant's single gave Barnhart the time needed to come home for the winning run.

Although Pepper lost some of his sting in the final inning, in the previous six, he gave up only three hits ... singles to Rod O'Connor and Barnhart, and a double to Glen Mercelis. He gave four batters free trips to first while leaving five at the plate swinging.

For Reserve, Barnhart gave up four hits. He walked seven and struck out the same number.

Doubles went to Barry Culbin and Dale Bamber, singles to catcher Wayne Harrison and Culbin.

Celebration

Foxboro Cheese Factory players must have been celebrating the arrival of their new team sweaters Monday. They marked the occasion by pounding out a 16-5 Thurlow Minor Baseball Association victory over Jerry's Motorcycle.

Edwin and Edward Huffman were the chief celebrants as they pitched the Cheese Factory to victory.

Cosy Grill Coasts

The Belleville Broadloom had a moment of glory in a Belleville and District Ladies Softball League game Tuesday night but it was a fleeting one.

The cellar dwelling Broadloom piled up nine runs in the third inning to match the Cosy Grill's run total the inning before, and it's ave them an 11-9 lead. That respite was a brief one however as the Grill pushed across 10 runs in their half of the third and coasted to a 21-13 victory.

Sharon Francis led the winners' 20 hit output with two homers, a double and a single. Verna Hill added a homer and two singles and Judy Pulis pulled a triple and three singles for the Grill who moved within one point of first place BVBP.

Sandra Claus fired the win outlasting the Broadloom's Chris Smith.

Roxanne Havinga homered and Brenda White tripled for the Broadloom.

Wally Hull's No-hitter Stops Post Office

AOCO's Wally Hull found the touch and Brooke Bond's Tom St. Jules finally lost the touch in Industrial Softball League action Tuesday night.

Hull faced only 23 men en route to a 3-0 no-hit win over the Post Office while Stewart Warner stopped St. Jules shutout string at seven games when they hammered Brooke Bond 19-6.

In another scheduled game the CN won a forfeit from Mead Johnson when the latter failed to field the required number of players.

It took Hull and AOCO only one hour to record their seventh win of the season as the Posties were stymied at every turn. Hull fanned only two and walked three but received errorless support from his teammates.

Ron Waite gave AOCO the only run they needed with a home run. He also connected for two singles as did Doug Boomhower.

George Johnson gave up nine hits on the Posties' rubber.

Brooke Bond lost their chance to stay even wih the CN atop the eastern division when Stewart Warner bounced to a 7-0 lead and the clung on for the win.

The Warnermen knocked St. Jules from the mound after nine innings reaching him for 12 hits and eight runs. Paul Sharp fired the last two innings giving up two runs.

Jim Henn and Bill Lynch homered for the winners with Bob Hunter punching a triple and Jim Nichol three singles.

Dave Marvin hurled the win allowing nine hits, two of them to Ron Stanton who homered and doubled.

The CN's forfeit win gave them 25 points for the season, good enough for first place in the east.

League Leaders Upset

If cellar dwelling Bardon Supplies put in a request to the Commercial Softball League executive for permission to play all their remaining games against league leading Rollins Construction, it could hardly be termed a surprise move.

The Bardon squad has only three wins this season but two of them have come at the expense of Rollins. Bardon ended its seven game string of losses by turning on the front runners and posting a 5-3 win Tuesday night at Alemite Park.

And after watching the upset, second place Devolin Motors promptly went out in the late game and failed to take advantage. With a chance to move to within two points of first place, Devolin fell 21 to Howard and Robert Printing.

The win enabled the Printers to even their season record at 7-7 and left them tied in points with Trenton Auger's in third place. Auger's has the edge there, having lost one game fewer than Howard and Robert.

Facing a player shortage last night, Bardon reached into the Industrial Softball League and signed UIC's Bernie Smith. The newcomer responded by turning in a solid catching performance and rapping a triple.

First baseman Gary Johnston was the big producer for the winners with three RBI. He had a two-run triple in the first inning and he drove in another run in the fifth.

Rollins trailed 4-0 after two innings but bounced back with a pair in the third and narrowed the deficit to one with a single counter in the fourth. But that was it for the Construction crew.

Jamie Hunter topped Ted Waite in the pitching department. Hunter allowed eight hits, one more than Waite, while fanning none and walking three. He received flawless fielding support from his mates.

Lisencere

Waite retired seven on third strikes and walked only one. In the second game, Bob Ethier not only fired four-hit ball to get the win for the Printers, he drove in the deciding run. His fourth inning single plated Pat Anschinne who had opened with a base hit.

Ethier finished up with seven strikeouts. He walked only one.

The losers' Don Holoway matched Ethier's four-hitter and he was also even in strikeouts. Don issued four walks.

Before they finally pushed across a run in the sixth, Devolin threatened more than once but Ethier lived up to his reputation by being tough to reach in the clutch.

No player had more than one hit. All the winners safeties were singles. For Devolin, Eric Maher tripled and Marv Stacey banged a double. But both died on the bases.

Exhibition Soccer Is Becoming Costly

TORONTO (CP) — At a cost of about $50,000, the Canadian Soccer Association is bringing the Polish national team here for an exhibition game against the Canadian national team Aug. 1.

John McMahon, manager of the Canadian team, said Tuesday it will also cost up to $30,000 to assemble the Canadian squad.

This includes the cost of transportation, living expenses and a per diem allowance of $15."

McMahon will gather his players from across Canada for a training camp July 22, in preparation for the match against the Polish team which defeated England 2-0 in a World Cup preliminary match three weeks ago.

Asked why it cost so much to bring the Polish team here, McMahon said: "I honestly don't know, but since Poland beat England, the price seems to have gone up."

McMahon said the Canadian team will also meet the United States national team in a game Aug. 5 at Windsor.

Steve Molaski Sharp In McDonalds' Losses

In 22 games at the 1st annual Nepean Novice Lacrosse Tournament, 256 goals were scored — an average better than 10 goals per game.

But Belleville McDonalds didn't participate in the scoring bonanza. Rexdale clubbed Belleville 19 - 0 in the opener, Saturday, while Orillia knocked them out of the double elimination tourney 5-1 Sunday.

Right winger Bryson Lamb Jr. produced McDonalds' only goal in the 18 team two day tourney.

However, the results could have looked worse, but for the outstanding work of Steve Molaski in the Belleville net.

"As far as I'm concerned," said coach Ron Deane, "Steve played fantastically."

Molaski had his worst cut out for him against Rexdale facing "in the neighborhood of 45 shots on net" according to Deane. "We had few shots on net. Legitimately, only four."

Belleville did have some satisfaction however. Rexdale were inflicted a 14 - 10 loss by Brampton, while Orillia went on to the B championship only to lose 9-3 to Nepean. Peterborough doubled St. Catharines 13-5 in the A championship Battle.

The Orillia game wasn't nearly as sorry as the Rexdale contest according to Deane, although an old pattern became apparent once more.

"We were down 2-1 after the first half, but then they pulled ahead. I've found that we play well for the first half or two-thirds, but get tired out in the latter stages of the game."

Deane attributed part of the problem to lack of manpower. Although a team can sign 25 players, while dressing 18, Belleville fields only 14 players for a game.

"We don't have enough boys," commented the coach, "Going into the house league teams, we can't find enough talent to play all star. The numbers are quite small anyway."

Not to be outdone by a sing le outing, McDonalds will be on the road come July 14 as they host a four day tournament in Lakefield.

Cat Newcomers To Get Chance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Argonauts won't have to contend with Chuck Ealey when they travel to Hamilton tonight for their first Canadian Football League pre-season contest with the Grey Cup champion Tiger-Cats.

Hamilton coach Jerry Williams said Tuesday he will use Ealey, who spearheaded the Ti-cats' 1972 championship, sparingly while trying to sort out the backup question at quarterback.

"I want to take a longer look at the guys who we have in camp," Williams said of his reasoning in which Jim Ellinger and Bill Ehrer will handle most of the play-calling.

"I'm looking forward to playing against my old team-mate, Joe Theismann." Ehrer was saying earlier this week. Theismann was the top quarterback in United States college ranks at Notre Dame, where Ehrer served a backup role in 1970, before joining Toronto.

Ellinger, after brief tryouts with Philadelphia Eagles and Baltimore Colts of the National Football League, played last season with Kitchener of the now-defunct Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union.

Williams, whose Ticats were beaten 23-11 by the CFL all-stars last Wednesday, said the game will also give him an opportunity to watch running backs Andy Hopkins, Tim Beamer and Stan Brown in his effort to re-establish Hamilton's running game.

The Ticats were left stranded with the CFL leading rusher of last season, Dave Buchanan, retired.

Williams said he will also experiment in the kicking department, using placekicker Ian Sinter exclusively as a punter and Bob Macwhirtl, a Hamilton schoolboy product who attended Worcster (Ohio) University, as the placekicker.

The Eastern Football Conference game is one of three pre-season contests set for tonight. British Columbia Lions visit Calgary Stampeders in a wfc game while the WFC's Winnipeg Blue Bombers are in Ottawa against the Rough Riders in an interlocking match.

The Riders are hoping their defences to Winnipeg's passing game.

The Bombers, like Hamilton, were left without their running strength when CFL all-star Mack Herron was dropped by the club after being charged with a drug offence.

It's A First For Alouettes

REGINA (CP) — Montreal exhibition contest before 13,829 Alouettes finally endured the fans.

win column in Taylor Field. The victory was a morale- Tuesday night with a 34-16 win booster for the Als, who had over Saskatchewan Roughriders never before beaten the Riders in a Canadian Football League in their home park.

Both clubs substituted freely... with Montreal quarterbacks George Mira and Jim Jones both connecting for touchdown passes.

Jones fired a 52-yard strike to John Eason in the second quarter and Mira hit Terry Evanshen for a 26-yard touchdown pass in the third.

The only Rider touchdown was scored by Walter Rhone who took a 19-yard pass from Brian Lindstrom in the end zone in the final minute.

The Als took a 4-0 first period lead, stretched it to 11-3 at half time and led 20-3 after three quarters.

Don Sweet kicked two field goals and earned a single on an attempt from 47 yards out. His successful attempts were from 23 and 36 yards.

Sweet also converted both touchdowns. Other Montreal points were scored on a safety when Bob Pearce fell on a high snap in the end zone and on a 47-yard single by Sonny Wade.

Jack Abendschan kicked a 38-yard field goal and a convert for Saskatchewan.

Montreal coach Marv Levy took long looks at both Mira and Jones. They combined to complete 14 of 18 pass attempts for 249 yards. Mira had eight completions on 10 attempts for 138 yards.

Ron Lancaster was good on 11 of 19 pass attempts and played the entire first half for Saskatchewan. Bubba Wyche played the third quarter and connected on four of five attempts.

Lindstrom showed poise in completing eight of 11 passes for 75 yards.

Much-heralded Johnny Rogers showed this speed in leading Montreal receivers with four receptions for 57 yards.

Jim Brady and Dickie Harris were the workhorses along the ground for Montreal, each carrying six times for 33 yards.

The Riders, who picked up 259 yards in net offence on 77 yards rushing and 314 yards passing, collected 14 first downs to Montreal's 12 but most came in the last quarter on the touchdown drive directed by Lindstrom.

Montreal rolled up 364 yards, 130 rushing and 340 yards passing.

Rhone was the Riders' best ground gainer. He caught five passes for 84 yards. Another newcomer, Rick Eber, caught six passes for 50 yards.

Rose is Leader

CINCINNATI (AP) — Outfielder Pete Rose became Cincinnati Reds' all-time leader in runs when he scored on a first-inning double by Johnny Bench Tuesday night in a National League baseball game against San Francisco Giants.

It gave him 1,041 career runs since he joined the Reds' lineup in 1963 and moved him past Frank Robinson.

Rose recently joined the 2,000-hit club.

FISH CAN STILL BE THRIFTY

Fish prices have gone up - there's no denying it. But there's still lots of delicious, economical nutricious eating that you're missing if you omit fish from your diet.

Smelts for instance, are wonderful grilled, and are not on a low-calorie diet.

Try turbot fillets in any way that you would cook cod or haddock. Though different in texture and flavor you'll find them a delightful change, and easy on the budget.

Sea herring and frozen red snapper have their devotees, and have interest as well as thrift to offer to family meals.

If you're looking for convenience plus economy, remember that you can get both from frozen fish sticks and frozen fish cakes and for a special treat at a reasonable price, try frozen rainbow trout.

Every meal planner would be wise to serve fish for at least two dinners each week. It can be not only delicious and economical but it's high in food values and low in saturated fats as well.

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Elizabeth Taylor says she and Richard Burton have separated, after a nine-year marriage, because of "a temporary breakdown in communication."

"Maybe we have loved each other too much," she said, expressing hope in a statement Tuesday that they can be reconciled.

The actress said she believes separation will "bring us to where we should be—and that is together."

Rumors of a rift between the two screen stars began spreading Tuesday after it was learned Miss Taylor was staying at a Manhattan hotel while Burton was at the Long Island home of their lawyer, Aaron Frosch.

Miss Taylor initially denied the rumors but later issued a statement in which she said she is convinced "it would be a good and constructive thing if Richard and I separated for a while."

The cause of the separation was not known but there were reports the two had recently quarrelled.

"Maybe we have loved each other too much (not that I ever believed such a thing was possible) but we have been in each others pockets constantly, never being apart except for matters of life and death, and I believe this has caused a temporary breakdown of communication," Miss Taylor, 41, said in her statement.

Neither Burton nor his lawyer could be reached for comment on the statement.

Burton, 47, and Miss Taylor were married after a controversial courtship during the filming in Rome of the movie Cleopatra. Both were married at the time, but after obtaining divorces, they were married in Montreal.

Miss Taylor, who became famous as a teen-ager, was married to singer Eddie Fisher during the filming of Cleopatra. She had been previously wed to hotel heir Conrad Hilton, actor Michael Wilding and showman Michael Todd, who died in a plane crash in 1958.

Burton's wife Sybil later remarried.

Don Well Received

OTTAWA (CP) — A near-capacity audience gave a warm reception Tuesday night to the National Arts Centre's production of Mozart's Don Giovanni, the first of three operas being performed in this summer's Festival Canada.

Applause lasting 4½ minutes was given the centre orchestra under the direction of Mario Bernardi and the principal soloists. What flaws were detected in the production were in stage mechanics, things that can be fixed before the opera is repeated July 6, 10, 12 and 14.

Allen Monk of Calgary sang a robust Don Giovanni, the licentious young nobleman, but Paul Plishka of the New York Metropolitan Opera, as the Don's servant, Leporello, just about upstaged him and every one else in the cast with his well-timed bits of stage business.

Gwenlyn Little as the peasant girl, Zerlina, again was the hearth of the audience as she has in other productions during the last two years.

The other leading roles were taken by Johanna Meier as Donna Anna, Heather Thomson as Donna Elvira, John Brecknock as Don Ottavio, Piere Charbonneau as Don Pedro, and Maurice Brown as Masetto, Zerlina's fiance.

The sets, costumes and lighting were by Robert Prevost, and were characteristically colorful-mainly russet and brown tones, with stark touches of black and white.

Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener and Mrs. Michener attended the performance and went backstage afterwards to congratulate the cast. It was drawn together, principally by Mr. Bernardi, from several Canadian and other opera companies.

The NAC's second opera of the season, Offenbach's La Belle Helene, will open July 17, and last summer's production of Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte is being revived July 24.

Showbiz Shorts

PASSAIC, N.J. (AP) — Police raided two theatres showing X-rated movies Tuesday night and arrested five persons, including the female star of one of the films.

Georgina Spelvin, star of the film The Devil in Miss Jones, was making a personal appearance at the Montauk theatre at the time of her arrest and was charged with conspiracy and aiding and abetting in the interior of "obscene or indecent pictures."

First Assistant Passaic County Prosecutor John Nicolai said the other theatre involved in the raids was the Capitol theatre, where Behind The Green Door was playing.

Besides Miss Spelvin, those arrested were James Bocht, the owner of the Montauk; Edward Molteni, the manager, and Steve and Ellen Peters, a husband and wife who handle tickets for the Capitol.

Nicolai said a warrant has been issued for the arrest of John Howard Scher, owner of the Capitol.

LONDON (AP) — A painting by Pablo Picasso brought $615,000 Tuesday night at a London auction—a price record for the works of the late master.

The picture, Le Mort La Mise au Tombeau, was in a group of 26 paintings and sculptures from the collection of the late American movie star Edward G. Robinson. It was painted in 1901 during Picasso's Blue Period.

It was sold at a special evening sale of impressionist and modern paintings and sculpture at Sotheby's.

The picture was bought by New York dealer Stephen Hahn.

The previous record for a Picasso—the artist died earlier this year—was set in 1968 when La Mere et l'Enfant sold for $475,000.

The 33 pictures and three sculptures from Robinson's collection realized $1.78 million.

LONDON (Reuter) — A love letter written by Napoleon Bonaparte to Josephine de Beauharnais before their marriage was sold for $11,500 at Sotheby's auction room here Tuesday.

The then Gen. Bonaparte, writing after a lovers' quarrel, complains that Josephine misunderstood him in thinking that he did not love her for herself.

"How could such a vile thought be conceived by such a pure soul," wrote Napoleon. He said he was powerless to resist her fascination and declared his love with three kisses.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON
Thursday, July 5

Aries (March 21-April 19): The less progress you expect today, the better. Just do your fair share of what is happening.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You'll be proud of your patience and ingenuity in making do with incomplete resources and equipment.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Normal routines are apt to be sidetracked. Settle for what works readily, a lick and a promise.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Nothing comes directly to hand this long and complicated day. Time out for achieving balance, letting others do the game.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Momentarily, the key to success eludes everyone. Pursue detailed routine at a steady pace—tomorrow you'll need this background.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Set aside for once some personal schemes in favor of the common good. New business ventures are better postponed.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If it's on paper and properly signed, it's still a bit doubtful. Be skeptical of today's informal agreements, wild stories.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Outward surfaces bear little relation to what's inside. Judge what people do rather than what they say.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The less manoeuvring of money you try, the better. Get your work up by the simplest, most direct line possible.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Movement comes easily, but sensible direction isn't automatic or even probable. Think as you go.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 018): Chasing rainbows is okay—as long as you know that's what you're doing. For once the course to follow is doing the unexpected.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Ask no favors, volunteer nothing beyond what you hope to give without compensation.

Canadian Protein Needs Assessed

OTTAWA (CP) — After slapping controls on the export of protein ingredients used in livestock and poultry feed, Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie said Tuesday that Canadian needs are being "urgently assessed" and in the meantime producers may apply for export licences for contracts signed before June 29.

"This doesn't mean they will be automatically granted," he told reporters after discussing the issue in the Commons. "But we will consider them, provided they are accompanied by a photostat of the contract and are postmarked by midnight July 5."

Mr. Gillespie announced the controls Friday, a few days after the United States placed an embargo on the export of soybeans, cottonseed and their byproducts. Canada, which produces about 350,000 tons of soybean meal a year, imports about 400,000 tons from the U.S. With a shortage of this protein looming, Mr. Gillespie imposed export restrictions on Canadian protein shipments to all countries. The restrictions cover soybeans, soybean cake, soybean meal, rapeseed, rapeseed cake, rapeseed meal, flaxseed, linseed cake, linseed meal and fishmeal.

In the Commons Tuesday, Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar) asked that restrictions on rapeseed be removed since there were 22.8 million bushels on hand. Farmers needed sales to keep up with production.

The minister said it is a complicated situation and "I can't say we have all the answers yet."

The situation could not be judged until future commitments were known.

Canadian contracts to be considered for export permits would be those calling for delivery by Oct. 15 of this year.

The one thing clear, he said, is that Canada cannot expect to get more than 30 per cent of what it expected from the United States in protein supplies. U.S. officials are also assessing that country's domestic needs.

Mr. Gillespie said it is too early to predict the effect of any protein shortage on meat production.

But officials here have said any shortage is likely to exert an upward pressure on prices. If less protein is used animals take longer to reach the slaughtering stage and therefore cost more to produce.

Prices of soybean additives were running three to four times higher than last year even before the U.S. embargo.

Also in the Commons, Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray said he would consider a special inquiry into farmers' rising production costs.

"My consultations with my colleagues on this have not been completed," Mr. Gray replied Tuesday.

Child Eats Dirt, Cure Is Difficult

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Why does my two-year-old child eat sand and dirt?

Does she have a mineral deficiency? If so what can I do to stop her. We spank her, wash her mouth out with soap, etc.

Yet she insists on eating sand and dirt.—A.R.

It is a well-known condition called "pica," the ingestion of foreign substances, and it should be stopped as quickly as possible.

It can be a deficiency in the diet, often, so you suggest, a mineral deficiency.

Often, it is a condition that comes about quite harmlessly due to a number of factors, and I can sympathize with you and other parents facing the problem.

Summer is a big "pica season."

It is noted particularly in children between 12 and 16 months who are beginning to explore around their yards and into such things as sandboxes. It probably is a coincidence, either, that it occurs at about the time the toddler is getting his first teeth and beginning to experience different foods in the home.

It may just be a period of mild confusion as to just what is meant to be eaten and what isn't. Perhaps, being impressionable, the child may misinterpret the meaning of an older brother or sister making "mud pies," and the word he most readily relates to is "pies," like mom makes.

In such cases, the dirt and sand eating can be short-lived and pass as quickly as it came.

In cases of mineral deficiency, the child usually is faced medically and the child should be examined to determine if such a deficiency is present and to what degree.

But mostly, pica is best dealt with firmly at the outset, with parents making it crystal clear just what is and what isn't to be eaten.

Sandboxes are particularly dangerous buffets for the sandeaters, since neighborhood cats like to make these handy—well—sandboxes.

If you have already tried firmness (and from your letter, it appears that you have tried without success), you should probably stop that track, since further punishment might only serve to enforce the unfortunate habit.

A close physical checkup and review of the child's diet is probably more in order.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My problem is brown spots on the face. I am 31 and have been taking an oral contraceptive for 11 years, and wonder if this is the reason and what do about it. I have a long patch on each side of my upper lip.—B.J.E.

That "pill" causes this in some women. So, in some cases, does pregnancy. The pill, of course, stimulates pregnancy, glandularly speaking.

Only solution I know is to switch to some other method of birth control. Once you've done that, a dermatologist may be able to hasten removal of the spots.

Two Women Save Life Of Lineman

TORONTO (CP) — "Thank God he's alive," said Mrs. Sigmund Soudack, 38. "We had one hell of a time resuscitating him."

Mrs. Soudack and an unidentified woman saved the life of a Toronto Hydro lineman who was nearly electrocuted Tuesday.

The lineman, James Willett, 48, of Keswick, Ont., is in hospital in critical condition suffering from extensive burns.

Mrs. James Rusk, who was walking her seven-month old baby, said she was nearly underneath the hydro pole when she heard a "noise like a drilling or riveting sound. It was strong and then this hard bar dropped, nearly hitting my baby in the stroller."

"I looked up and the man was slumped over the wires. Sweeps screamed and the crew on the east side turned off the current or something.

"I ran from both sides of the streets ran with ropes and a ladder and brought him down."

When the lineman was lowered, Mrs. Soudack and the unidentified woman alternated applying mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

"I didn't think he'd come through," Mrs. Soudack said. "His back was badly scorched and he was bleeding from a cut on the head."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 NT

Opening lead—two of ♣.

This deal occurred in the finals of four match. Nothing much happened at the first table where South got to three no trump and West led a club.

Declarer won with the Jack, played a diamond to the queen and a diamond back. West winning with the ace as East discarded a low heart.

West shifted to the queen of spades, covered by the king and ace. East returned a club and South finished with two tricks off by crossing the two-way heart finesse.

At the second table the finesse functioned with great imagination and South went down one after the same sequence of bids.

West saw very little future in a club lead and decided to take a stab at finding East a long suit. A heart lead didn't look attractive with dirth only three to the queen, so West led the queen of spades, even though dummy had bid the suit.

No truer arrow was ever shot! Declarer covered with the king and East made the superb play of ducking the king, at the same time signaling with the six. South forced out the ace of diamonds, having no other choice, and West, pursuing his friendish attack, led another spade. East thereupon cashed four spade tricks to inflict a one trick defeat.

It is true that South could have made the hand by attacking the queen of spades, and probably a good case can be made for that play. But covering the queen with the king was certainly not abnormal, and most declarers would no doubt have done exactly the same under the circumstances.

In any case, East-West certainly earned giant kudos for their magnificent performance. They really did a fine job.

Tomorrow: Guessing a queen.

Voice in Peace Plan Pledged Small Lands

HELSINKI (CP) — The United States put forward today a five-point program to bring about peace in Europe and the world.

Outlining the U.S. objectives, State Secretary William Rogers told the 35-state European security conference that its goal should be a continent in which no country feels threatened, a continent open to the free flow of people and ideas.

Rogers reassured European countries that the United States and the Soviet Union would not try to settle European security by themselves.

Speaking on the third day of the Helsinki meeting, he described what the U.S. hopes to achieve when the conference begins bargaining at expert committee level in Geneva later this year.

Rogers said U.S. objectives were to:

—Elaborate on general principles agreed among the 35 states taking part on the conference.

—Reach agreement on specific military matters including exchange of military information and observers to dispel suspicion;

—Develop methods for early and peaceful settlement of disputes which could lead to confrontation;

—Advance proposals for increasing trade and stepping up industrial, scientific and technological co-operation;

—Work out specific ways to facilitate human contacts, the freer dissemination of information and the broadening of cultural and educational co-operation.

Rogers said this last point was of paramount importance. This echoed the speech earlier Thursday of Sir Alec Douglas-Home, the British foreign minister, and that of Canada's Mitchell Sharp Wednesday. Both devoted most of their speeches to the need for freer exchanges of people and ideas.

Oil-laden Vessel Is Crippled In Collision in St. Lawrence

LES ESCOUMINS, Que. (CP) — Work crews began transferring fuel oil today from the battered tanker St. Spyridon to another tanker just off the port of Trois Pistoles, across the St. Lawrence River from here.

The St. Spyridon was towed 12 miles to deeper water near Trois Pistoles Wednesday night after she was badly damaged in a collision with the bulk carrier Florence during heavy fog Wednesday morning.

The cargo of light stove oil was being transferred to the tanker Texaco Brave.

One crew member of the St. Spyridon lost his leg when the ship and the grain-carrier Florence collided, ripping a 40-foot-wide hole in the side of the tanker.

Mike Parianen, a kitchen worker on the St. Spyridon said he had just left the kitchen to go on deck shortly before 9 a.m. when he heard "a big boom" and felt the boat reeling violently from side to side.

On deck, wives and children of the captain and chief engineer were crying and the crew milled around in confusion, he said. Boats from the pilot station at Les Escoumins rescued all 55 persons aboard the ship.

The Florence suffered bow damage but was reported anchored in the river in good condition.

Mr. Parianen said the St. Spyridon has an automatic foghorn which sounds about every two minutes. He said he did not hear a signal from another ship. "I can't understand how the other ship hit us in the side like that."

There was speculation that position of impact resulted when the Florence swung out toward the main channel after dropping its pilot off at Les Escoumins and the St. Spyridon swerved toward the coast to pick up a pilot for its journey down the St. Lawrence River to Montreal.

"It's lucky we were hit in the side," Mr. Parianen said. "We were carrying refined oil and if we'd been hit head-on we would've exploded."

Capt. Dimitrios Voutjoukas of the St. Spyridon said the ship was stopped waiting for a pilot for the journey upriver to Montreal when the collision occurred about 140 miles northeast of Quebec City.

Peace Comes First

HELSINKI (CP) — Russia firmly told Canada today that the question of preventing war should take precedence over the promotion of greater human contacts, which the Canadians have been pressing at the European security conference here.

The Russian view was candidly put to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp during a free-wheeling, one-hour discussion with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Gromyko said Russia doesn't want to bury the human contacts issue but it must be kept in proper proportion.

Funds Sought
Doctors' Group Fights College

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario doctors are being asked to contribute $100 or more to fight the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario which is trying to limit the amount of work a doctor may do and to prevent doctors owning pharmacies or other businesses to which they refer patients.

In a newsletter dated June, 1973, an anonymous group calling itself the Association of Concerned Physicians in Ontario said "most so-called abusers" simply work more hours than the average doctor. It therefore contends that it is unnecessary and unfair to impose blanket policies to control less than one per cent of the profession.

The letter gives only a Toronto postal box number as its address and asks those requiring further information to get in touch with the association's legal firm. Attached to the letter is a two-page legal opinion by the firm on the recent pronouncements of the college.

The $100 would go into a fund to "support such legal and public action as is necessary," such as a campaign to inform the public of the "inevitable undesirable consequences of the implementation of the proposed regulations."

Captive Canadians Doing Fine

SAIGON (CP) — Plans were being made today for the rescue of two Canadians missing for a week north of here as negotiations continued to clear up the last hurdles holding up the departure of a search party from Saigon.

Meanwhile, an informed source reported that Capt. Ian Patten of Toronto and Capt. Fletcher Thomson of Ottawa were in good condition.

"They are being treated like kings," he said, adding they are receiving eggs, rice and ham for breakfast and are supplied with American cigarettes.

Both the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) and the South Vietnamese offered Wednesday to co-operate in a search for the men.

Sources in the ICCS said negotiations had reached the stage of discussing whether the two would be picked up by helicopter or a road convoy.

Canadian and Hungarian officials met Viet Cong officers Wednesday night and it was agreed the two officers would be picked up by a combined Canadian and Hungarian team from Saigon.

After studying an income tax advice booklet, one man came up with this conclusion: "I've found a good loophole. The only thing is that you've got to be a 65-year-old student who owns an oil well."

Nixon's Family Advised Against Resignation

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Julie Nixon Eisenhower says her father considered resigning because of the Watergate political-espionage scandal and asked the family's advice on the question.

"We said No," Julie reported, "because resigning would have been an admission of wrongdoing. And we also felt that he was the man for the job."

Julie, President Nixon's younger daughter who celebrates her 25th birthday today, said in an interview that the resignation issue came up during a discussion at Camp David, Md.

She defended her father, saying "I think he was just really in the dark" about the bugging and burglary of the Democratic national committee headquarters at the Watergate Building in Washington last year and the subsequent cover-up.

Young Mother Slain
Thugs Wrap Tape Round Girl's Head

DETROIT (AP) — A 19-year-old mother was left to suffocate Wednesday in a mask of adhesive tape by intruders who terrorized her family and then set fire to her home, police said.

Bandits broke into the wrong house behind home and lashed her and her husband, Douglas, 24, to their bed. Nora Haver became hysterical and the men wrapped her head in adhesive tape, her husband said.

Her husband, daughter, sister and two other children survived.

Her sister, Susan Barnes, said she was bound with tape and rope when the intruders broke into the house. She was cut free and knocked unconscious by the bandits when they left, police said. She rescued the sleeping children from the burning house when she came to, and called police.

Mrs. Haver was reported dead on arrival in hospital where police took her after removing her from the burning house.

Police said it was impossible immediately to determine what was taken or why the intruders set the house on fire.

Instant Popularity for New Belleville Beach

Belleville residents don't have to drive 25 miles to enjoy this new swimming area. It is in the city's north end. The new "beach" on the Moira River is on the West Riverbank Park area north of the seasonal dam. It was opened this week. In addition to the beach, the new play area has a parking lot, canteen, restrooms and change areas.

Quinte Members Welcome Delay in Redistribution

Quinte district MPs today indicated satisfaction that campaigning in the next federal election almost certainly will be fought within present electoral boundaries.

Reactions of both Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, and George Hees, MP Prince Edward-Hastings, reflected the general mood in the Commons which Tuesday — by all-party agreement — froze the work of its electoral committee on revising population - based representation in Parliament.

Generally "everybody fi.s they would like to run the next election within the present boundaries," said Mr. Hees.

Mr. Hees said present indications are the next federal election may not be until next spring at the earliest.

Mr. Ellis said he was "reasonably" happy with the move.

"I don't think anyone wants to change boundaries and reorganize their ridings with an election in the offing," he said.

The Commons gave formal first reading to a bill that would suspend the almost-completed work begun last year in adjusting constituency boundaries.

Object of the move, which also would give MPs time to produce a new formula for riding distribution, was to ensure a "better break" for all regions of Canada, said Mr. Hees.

A new formula — which Mr. Hees felt would be approved with little difficulty — would ensure provinces with less population would not lose seats in faster-developing areas. Net result is expected to raise the seats from 264 to 300.

If, however, such a measure is not produced by a House committee, electoral revision will be passed back once again to the government's redistribution commissions, Mr. Ellis believes.

Proposals for revising Ontario riding boundaries were signed by Representation Commissioner Nelson Castonguay in Ottawa Tuesday.

Suggested new boundaries, published late last year, would have drastically realigned both Quinte ridings.

The major change involved Prince Edward county, which would have been transferred from Mr. Hees' present riding and joined to a truncated Hastings territory, which now reaches north of Bancroft. The new Prince Edward-Hastings riding would also have included Belleville and the townships of Rawdon, Hunlingford and Tyendinaga.

Mr. Ellis protested the revision in a letter to the Federal Boundaries Commission which held public hearings in Belleville last February.

Mr. Hees lodged no objection to a realignment that would shift his riding mainly into Northumberland County, but include Trenton, its adjoining military air base and Sidney township.

Mr. Hees said today as far as he knew the original proposals affecting his riding were unchanged.

Mr. Ellis did not know what the final proposal for his riding involved.

Appliances Blown By Power Surge

About a dozen Lennoxe St. homes and portions of Prince Edward County were without power Wednesday night when an Ontario Hydro pole caught fire during a light rainfall.

Several residents of the West Hill street reported televisions, hi-fis, other appliances and light switches blown out when power from the 44,000-volt Hydro line surged into Belleville Utilities Commission circuits servicing their homes.

Three transformers belonging to the commission were also blown out, curtailing electricity for a short time in the vicinity of Lennoxe St. and Maple Dr. until alternate connections could be made. They were repaired this morning at a cost of $1,800.

Power was restored to Prince Edward County within 20 minutes of the 10:06 p.m. blackout. The Hydro line, running south from Picton, is the major supply circuit for county homes.

BUC engineer Keith Campbell said this morning unusual weather conditions contributed to the blackout.

"Dust and dirt had accumulated on an insulator," he explained. "When light mist fell around 10 o'clock, it dampened the dirt which acted as a conductor from the power line to the wooden pole."

The result, he said, was a fire on the pole's cross arm which, although easily extinguished, left the Hydro line dangling on BUC wires.

Persons who suffered losses because of the power surge were asked to contact their insurance adjusters, Ontario Hydro and BUC carry insurance to cover such emergencies.

Boundary Revision Plan Unchanged

Final proposals for revising Ontario federal ridings would have left the boundaries of two Quinte constituencies virtually unchanged from original readjustments out lined late last year, t is learned from Ottawa today.

The proposals were ready for submission to Parliament when the Commons Tuesday froze the work of boundary readjustment.

Prince Edward County, Belleville and five Hastings County townships remained intact in the proposed new riding of Prince Edward-Hastings. The readjustment was protested earlier this year by Jack Ellis, MP Hastings.

The new Northumberland riding which would have become the constituency sought by George Hees, now MP Prince Edward-Hastings, would still include Sidney township and Trenton. The addition of Hope township on the westerly riding limits was the only revision to the original readjustment proposals.

The remaining 18 Hastings townships north of Highway 7 were included in the sprawling Frontenac Lennox-Addington constituency, now held by Douglas Alkenbrack.

The riding extends from east of Kingston to Peterborough County where it embraces the townships of Chandos, Dummer, Methuen and Belmont.

A Faithful Home

The home of Mel Thompson is very special to him; in fact it follows him everywhere he goes. The house followed Mel in its new location one mile north of the 401 Wednesday and it caused some minor delays in traffic along its North Front Street route. Hydro lines and traffic congestion were under sound control by Ontario Hydro and Belleville Police however and the house was safely reunited with Mr. Thompson in its new location.

Bellewood Lumber Has A New Owner

Bellewood Manufacturing Co. Ltd. 448 Dundas Street East, or better known as Bellewood Lumber and Building Supplies, has been sold to Headway Corporation Ltd. of Toronto.

Announcement of the purchase of the local lumber company was made today in Toronto. Purchase price was given as $300,000.

Fred S. Pope, president of Bellewood Lumber, said today the Belleville operation would continue without change under the same name.

"There will be no changes in operation," said Mr. Pope. Mr. Pope did say, however, that he would retire from the company at the end of 1973. The lumber firm has close to 20 employees.

Long associated with the lumber business, Mr. Pope learned his trade as a millworker and general building contractor.

He set up Bellewood Manufacturing about 20 years ago at the present Dundas Street site and in the past two decades the building supply firm has seen rapid expansion.

Actually, said Mr. Pope, Bellewood Manufacturing is a misnomer as the firm does no manufacturing.

As the more popular name in Bellewood Lumber and Building Supplies — implies, the firm is a wholesale and retail outlet for lumber and building supplies of all types.

Production To Begin On Domes

PICTON — Loch Sloy Industrial Park has become the production site of a foam dome manufacturing company, Skylight Domes, and approximately 200 persons reportedly will be employed there soon. Initially, 25 employees will be hired and there will be a production of 10 units daily.

The dome houses are almost maintenance free and will be gained great popularity in developing countries as they can adapt to all climatic conditions and are almost indestructible. Many of the units provide comfortable living accommodation for a period of more than 50 years before wear is detected.

Each basic unit is domeshaped and its curvature of panels from the foundation is small enough to allow a person six feet tall to stand upright within four inches of the wall.

President of Skylight Homes is John Grimba of Toronto who visited Picton last December when location of the new industry was announced to the press.

County Pottery

Historic old Prince Edward County, with its big tourist trade, seems a natural choice for the arts and crafts industry. Joanne Cunnington, widely known for pottery work. Is among artists and craftsmen at work in the county.

In Prince Edward:

Craft Sales Are on Increase

BLOOMFIELD — By checking the issue, Bloomfield woodworker Harry Holland has developed "The Workshop," a souvenir centre for hundreds of Prince Edward tourists each summer.

Mr. Holland carves approximately 400 duck and geese decoys annually and paints them in realistic colors. Not for hunters only, these birds of a feather are popular among summer visitors as decorative highlights. Many are purchased for display as ornaments for the lawn or livingroom.

The birds are carved in several sizes and postures and priced to attract bargain hunters, among others. They are especially popular among American tourists because the prices are much lower than for similar items in the United States.

Mrs. Holland, who crafts wall hangings and stuffed toys for The Workshop notes that the Mallard is the biggest seller of all of her husband's sitting ducks.

The Workshop's shelves hold a wide variety of souvenir items, among them a large collection of scale model ships.

Mr. Holland has turned his woodcarver's talents toward the younger set by building miniature Noah's Arks stocked with plastic animals. A complete line of self-propelled wooden paddle boats also is in stock and has proved a perennial favorite.

Mrs. Holland observes that nitely more American tourists have visited The Workshop this year than at the same time in 1972. Many of these customers are enjoying return visits to the craft centre to buy colorful items such as wall hangings, toys, tiny wall plaques centred with dried flowers or hand woven place mats.

"We sell Noah's Arks like mad," says Mrs. Holland. She remarks that one already has been laid away as a Christmas gift.

Mrs. Holland is accomplished in needlework and makes wall hangings and stuffed toys year around for summer sale in The Workshop.

The growth of craft shops in Prince Edward is acknowledged by Mrs. Holland who comments that Wellington village is now the location of a fine boutique The Crab Apple.

A short distance from Bloomfield, Joanne and Raymond Cunnington have owned the old School House Pottery and offer unusual and amusing gifts for sale.

Born in England, Mrs. Cunnington studied art at Keighley, Yorkshire and pottery at MacDonald College in Montreal for six years. She has won the president's award for best earthenware at the Canadian National Exhibition and her work has been purchased by the Confederation Art Gallery and Museum for a permanent collection in 1967. Mrs. Cunnington also received a commission in 1972 for the City of Belleville Cultural Award.

She terms herself "a functional potter" and says she enjoys making items that will be used and, more important, felt by purchasers.

Mrs. Cunnington reports widespread demand for pottery and confirms that on several occasions pieces of her work have been bought as gifts for dignitaries and guest speakers visiting Prince Edward and county organizations.

The School House Pottery features Eskimo art, handcrafted textiles and a wide selection of antiques. Open daily in July and August the pottery is visited by many tourists each season. On Wednesday and Sunday afternoons from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. there are pottery demonstrations.

The Pottery itself was once a rural schoolhouse and has been converted into living quarters by the Cunningtons. The shop area was built after they purchased the original school house.

Trenton Is Wooed By Northumberland

TRENTON — The Town of Trenton may soon be regarded as a prize catch among regional planning bodies searching to bolster their population and industrial statistics.

At a special meeting of town council last night, councillors were read a letter from the region of Northumberland that requested an early decision as to the town's leanings concerning regional planning and government.

Since Durham, a large segment of the now defunct United Counties of Durham and Northumberland, chose to go to an Oshawa - centred region, Northumberland has been left somewhat as a hinterland between the Oshawa and Quinte planning regions.

Because of provincial government urgings for all municipalities to belong to a planning area and that each area should have a population of approximately 150,000, Trenton becomes the prize for Northumberland in its attempts to meet population figures. Municipalities in that region are adamant they will not join the Quinte Planning area, preferring independence.

The letter pointed to Trenton as a priority area and asked for early reply by mail if the town would consider leaving the Quinte Planning area and come west.

If the western region is successful in enticing Trenton to come away, the Quinte Planning area would also be in difficulty, having only slightly better than 100,000 population.

Members of council have been invited to attend the next meeting of the Northumberland committee, July 19 for further clarification of the town's stand.

Trenton mayor Duncan McDonald said he could not comment on the situation and that careful consideration would have to be given to all the details.

Town clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry has been instructed by council to create a brief on the background of the situation, and make some recommendations.

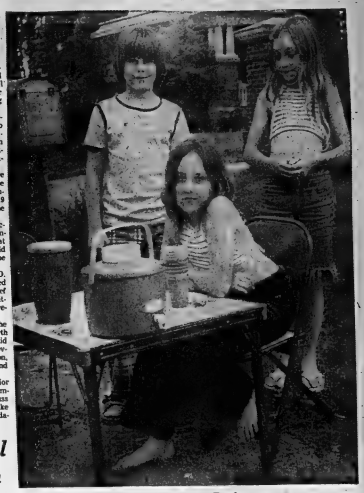
Mayor McDonald said the town had very definite growth patterns to the west and said the town had difficulty annexing in any other direction, hemmed in by the bay and the Canadian Forces base.

A meeting will be held prior to the meeting with Northumberland committee to discuss Mr. Larry's report and make some council recommendation.

Full Mall Plan Off

TRENTON — East side merchants here have, at least for the moment, successfully thwarted Chamber of Commerce plans for a full - scale shopping mall for the summer sale.

The chamber hoped Dundas Sreet could be temporarily closed to through traffic, allowing only pedestrian traffic during the sale days of July 12, 13 and 14.



When the plans were released, east side merchants who would not benefit from the mall concept filed a petition with the ministry of transportation and communications, calling for a halt to the scheme.

The decision to close Dundas Street and Front Street is ultimately in the ministry's hands.

Rather than calling off the entire show, the chamber has revised the plan to include sidewalk sale with additional space for booths gained by using parking areas on both streets involved in the sale.

A definite decision was made by the ministry but local organizers say now there would not be enough time to schedule all the necessary plans that would be involved in the larger mall scheme.

A spokesman for the business association here said all available sidewalk space would be used and area farmers would also be invited to bring produce to the sale.

Cooling It!

A touch of heat wave, cold lemonade and a little dash of enterprise all add up to the possibilities of profit for youngsters like this Picton trio. The weather was just right for David Holston, 10, Heather Evans, 13, (centre and Heidi Evans, 10, to go into business partnership this week on the town's Main St. East. The results of their business venture: A total take of 40 cents in gross revenue.

Centennial Expansion Planned

TRENTON — Expansion is on the horizon for Century-al Carpet Manufacturing after being taken over by British Columbian firm, Westmills Carpets Ltd.

Company president Harry Higson, in Trenton waiting for final mailing procedures to close the $1-million deal, said Wednesday, the 40,000 square foot plant would be used also as a distributing outlet for other company products from the west." He anticipated the transaction would be completed next week.

Mr. Higson could not say when expansion would begin but anticipated within the year warehousing facilities would be increased to handle distribution needs. Staff would be increased and the present staff of 18 will retain their positions in the new company.

Westmills Carpet Ltd. produces a finished carpet in the western operation but Trenton products is sent to Consolidation Carpet in Belleville for dyeing. The company has another plant in Meaford on Georgian Bay which produces carpet yarns.

No Way

With the highways as cluttered — and accident-pocked — as they are, who needs an all Canadian car?

Should we not have one, then, if only for reasons of prestige? After all the Australians have their home-made Holden; even though it comes under the wing of General Motors, it is their very own.

Well it appears that the idea of a Canadian model is impractical anyway, not to mention the clutter we have already mentioned, and the environmental aspect — exhaust pollution and whatnot.

Donald S. Wood of Toronto, president of the Automotive Parts Manufacturers Association of Canada, goes so far as to describe the all-Canadian car as an unrealistic, impossible, emotional dream.

"No never," he says in short, to the question would such a vehicle ever become a reality.

He says designing the car alone would cost between $300 million and $400 million. Then there is the cost of a plant, equipment and labor. The car would be obsolete before it hits the market. And — the ultimate fizzle — it could be another Edsel.

Mr. Wood, one of the behind-the-scenes architects of the 1965 Canada-U.S. auto pact, had some interesting comparisons with overseas auto production when he addressed a trade gathering in Toronto recently.

He had inspected car assembly plants there as well as in Europe, Japan and China. In Europe and Japan he noticed that assembly workers take a keener interest and pride in their jobs than North Americans.

And could it be the Chinese have the answer to boredom on the production line? Mr. Wood says men and women work together there and parts are made so well there is no allowance for tolerances.

In any event, to look around — at the frantic rushing hither and yon in the family auto and at the railcars shipping more and more vehicles to the distributors — is to realize that saturation point is pretty close — if it has not arrived already. There is the talk of greater use of rapid transit and there is the evidence of fuel shortages which in years to come will push prices ever upwards. In short, we have more than enough cars.

Another Season

What with all the hassle over the Olympics in Montreal three years hence, and the fact some of the old Expo pavilions have either been dismantled or are apparently scheduled for use in connection with the Olympics, we had been wondering if the Man and his World exhibition on the old Expo site was on again this year.

La Ronde — the entertainment complex — yes, but what about the "World" exhibition? Not enough shadow of its former glory and of the excitement and human experience that it was in 1967, the answer is yes, Man and His World is open for another season.

The exhibition opened June 21 with 13 national pavilions and 13 theme pavilions. Admission to the site is free but a charge is required for admission to the pavilions. Among the survivors of the original Expo exhibiting this time are France, Switzerland, the Soviet Union, Iran, Japan, Mexico, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia and they have been joined by Bulgaria, China, Morocco and Pakistan, as well as a pavilion representing the Austrian Tyrol.

Add to these the theme pavilions and La Ronde, not to mention that intangible thing called nostalgia and there are the makings once again of an interesting time for the visitor.

Busy Freights

Watching the freight trains pass through Belleville represents an instant lesson in geography and in our patterns of trade. There was the day we saw some cars marked Arctic Steamship, for instance, and the name of the Soviet northern port of Murmansk. And just the other day the lead cars of one of those typically long trains bore the names of Japanese shipping interests. All of which requires little explanation or elaboration. but here is just one of those freights which through, give it more than just passing glance.

Banking Committee Chairman Criticized

Conflicts of Interest Impair Senate Says Croll

OTTAWA (CP) — Like an energized cat, Senator David Croll is tearing after Senate reform.

And if he appeared to pull out all stops with 12 proposals he's already made, just wait until he gets loose on conflicts of interest.

Senator Salter Hayden, a fellow Liberal, is going to feel the wind on the back of his neck.

"I am tearing at anyone," says the Toronto senator, but "the question of conflict of interest is one of the most serious matters we have."

Does he think Senator Hayden, who holds a generous batch of corporate directorships, should be chairman of the Senate banking and finance committee, a position he has held since the 1950s?

"Of course not," shot back 73-year-old Senator Croll. "He's active in the practice of law with clients in the corporate sector and it's possible some may appear before his committee.

"The chairman of that committee," he added, "is as sensitive as a cabinet minister."

There are some people around the Senate who say Senator Croll is taking dead aim at Senator Hayden as he tackles the conflict of interest problem. But apart from saying Senator Hayden should not be chairman of the Senate's most important standing committee, he refuses to get his personal allies.

At the moment Senator Croll is biding his time, watching the reaction to his earlier proposals for Senate reform, and waiting for Prime Minister Trudeau to produce his long-awaited legislation covering conflict of interest for MPs and senators.

If that legislation becomes a vehicle for changing the present situation, Senator Croll won't have to initiate any further action himself. He'll certain he will have a lot to say when the matter comes into the upper chamber.

Senator Croll is not going to say that every member should sell every corporate share he owns, or that all directorships should automatically be forfeited.

"It's not easy to establish guidelines," he noted. I own 200 shares of CPR. Is that a conflict of interest?

"But . . . and there seemed little doubt about who he had in mind—"it's a different thing entirely when one sits in judgment."

"Reform or perish" was the message to the often - criticized upper chamber, in his March series of proposals intended to give the Senate more independence from the Commons.

Now, three months later, he has decided the reaction "has been nothing to cheer about."

"In the main the attitude has been 'leave well enough alone.'" And Senator Paul Martin, the government leader in the Senate, "has been neither receptive nor responsive," he says.

One of Senator Croll's proposals was that the government leader—in this case Senator Martin—quit the cabinet and thus eliminate divided loyalties.

He has run into "very much resentment" and sometimes it becomes "just, a little uncomfortable."

But his ruddy face gleams behind that big desk. "There is nothing new for me, you know."

"I couldn't live with this whole business and say nothing."

He is almost sad when he says the Senate could be such a useful body. So much ability is being wasted."

Alcohol Usage in Canada Is Up

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Canadians are drinking more than ever before, according to a recent study by the brewing industry. To business, the hidden cost of employees' drinking on the job is becoming a million-dollar-a-day problem.

Here's Canadians' drinking pattern, as described by a committee set up by the Brewers Association of Canada, to recommend a national control policy on alcoholic beverages:

"More people now drink, at least occasionally, than 20 years ago (an increase from 67 per cent to 80 per cent of adults) and, in terms of alcoholic content, they consume more alcoholic beverages today than, ever before."

The blue-ribbon committee was headed by Lancelot J. Smith, a Toronto chartered accountant, and one of Canada's top experts on taxation. It recommended that alcoholic beverages be taxed according to their alcoholic content.

The committee produced figures on drinking in 29 countries, which showed that Canadians drink 16.38 gallons of beer per capita in 1970 compared with a 20-country average of 14.44 gallons. 0.91 of a gallon of wine compared with an average of 5.37 gallons; and 1.29 gallons of spirits, compared with an average of 1.08 gallons.

The estimate that drinking employees cost their employer $1 million a day—which, like all other costs of doing business, is ultimately passed on to the consumer—appears in the current issue of the Imperial Oil Ltd. Review magazine.

It puts the number of alcoholics in Canada at something more than 400,000 with nearly twice as many on the verge of a serious drinking problem. It estimates that each problem drinker costs his company about 25 per cent of his earnings—perhaps $1,500 to $4,000 a year.

That cost takes the form of the drinkers' sharply reduced efficiency, frequent absences for other illnesses or accidents, and considerably shorter life span.

About 60 per cent of business drinkers are successfully rehabilitated by in-house programs of large employers. The department of national revenue is said to have a 90 per cent success rate in its rehabilitation program.

One widely used approach is "constructive coercion"—giving the business drinker every chance at the treatment he needs, insisting that he co-operate or lose his job.

People taking the treatment at the clinic, for example, are exposed to structured relaxation periods that show them how to relax without alcohol and are taken on weekly outings to display other recreational alternatives to drinking.

"In human terms, a case of arrested alcoholism means one life literally saved, and several surrounding lives made easier," says Imperial Oil Review.

"In cash values, the United States insurance company estimates that an employer saves $3 in potential losses for every dollar invested in an alcoholism program."

Pollution From Exhaust

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The following letter has been addressed to Mayor Robin Jeffrey:

I am sure, that the concern for your people is your first concern. To preside over a city of happy, healthy, prosperous, agreeable law abiding citizens would be to preside over Utopia. But that could be the goal.

Pollution is probably the second most commonly used word today. Everyone talks about it, but I can't really see where a great deal is being done about the air pollution; especially on Front St. there is no question that pollution of our environment is undermining the mental health of the individual. The body must adapt to all foreign elements, and all sorts of other things as part of the natural process. But there is a limit to endurance.

We are all guilty of pollution of atmosphere, to a degree, whether we are aware of it or not. Every time I drive my car down Front St., or anywhere for that matter, I contribute my share.

It is my preference to shop in the downtown area, especially in the independent stores. I find the variety offered, and the service given to me, is far superior to larger centres.

My concern is regarding the buses. Not only their fairly large contribution to pollution, but also the expenditure which you are considering for building a new garage to house and service these buses. To garage some of these old gassy buses in an ultra modern garage, is comparable to using Buckingham Palace as a cow stable. The garage cannot benefit the citizens. Remember the old adage — a bargain's not a bargain unless you need it. I understand the present garage is very adequate.

Your Worship, you might ask yourself these questions:

1. Will this expenditure for garage benefit people?

2. Will new buses be less harmful, pollution wise to people, than the old buses?

3. Is it really necessary that the buses make up their time on Front Street, usually with their motors running?

I asked a bus driver this last question and he answered that he could not get it started again if he turned it off!

Be the heart of the city is sick, then let's restore it, with a big dose of Vitamin E for Exhaustion. As Dr. Margaret Mead stated, in an interview, "Why all around arguing about how many years it will take to clean up the environment; just get busy and do something".

My suggestion is, that you start in this community, doing something, by investing in new buses instead of a new garage. Women and businessmen may find it so comfortable going by bus, & will leave their habit, most stores deliver. They may even find that it is more economical than the cost of their own car. Also, each would be contributing, in a small way, to the anti-pollution program.

In conclusion, I wish to state, that as a taxpayer of Belleville, I do not begrudge or criticize any expenditures used for the betterment of man in our community.

I would suggest — first things first. Look after the health of your people, and the people will look after themselves.

Robarts Wants Better Use of Land

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau

A former leader of a government is in an unique position to offer constructive criticism of public affairs.

He has a background knowledge which nobody else can equal, and perhaps for the first time can look at problems without political bias.

It has not been the custom in Ontario for our leaders who have retired from office to engage in controversial discussion. In most cases this would have been because they still kept strong, perhaps too strong party ties.

It was therefore refreshing to see John Robarts make a speech which was both perceptive and critical of the government he day.

It is true the speech was critical of all levels of government, but this included the provincial administration which he headed only three years ago.

The speech was devoted to the high cost of housing and it focused on two points: High taxation and red tape.

It handled the mud, the former premier said, how when confronted with a crisis on the scale of the current housing and shelter shortage, shelter was taxed at all three levels of government.

Such taxation, he said was "immoral."

On red tape or bureaucracy, he said this was tying up development through interminable delay, which added substantially to the cost of housing.

And as a constructive critic, he didn't present his question without providing answers.

The main one, he said, was, aside from better land use planning to cut out the red tape, a crash program to provide serviced land at prices ordinary

This was probably the most pointed speech there has been in Ontario recently on the housing problem, and it certainly should be the most effective.

It was particularly pointed in that many people, including the writer, have called for government land banks as one of the measures to cut down on housing costs, while Robarts dismissed these.

He said that only serviced land would work, and he is right.

While speculation in raw land has driven up housing prices it is only serviced land that can contain them.

Then the speech will be effective, of course, because his voice is one that will be listened to.

In making the speech he also would know many people would ask why he didn't do these things himself when he had the chance.

And he gets all the more credit for nevertheless making it.

Focus on South-West Africa

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Nothing but bad news has emanated recently from South West Africa, one of the world's bleakest, land masses, yet home to 750,000 natives and constantly exploited peoples.

Since the colonialists of Imperial Germany arrived in 1851, founded the still flourishing mining coastal capital of Windhoek and planted the Kaiser's flag for this and other remnants of the European colonial division of Africa, the hunted natives have always been exploited by the white man.

In 1915 Windhoek was conquered by a mixed British and South African force, local architect was elected a member of the Dominion Cabinet with the office of Chaplain.

The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club race will start from the George Graham dock at 3 p.m. Saturday. The course is between there to a buoy off the Redoubt Reservation and back to Graham's. The clubmen will be guests of Mr. Graham at a post-race reception.

United Nations until the UN under world pressure ordered the now independent South African Republic to give it up.

By then, it had become virtually a province of the new Republic of South Africa, the African-dominated white nation in Africa. And during the 1960s and up to the present time, South African industries, chiefly mining plus foreign firms, including Canada's Falconbridge Nickel Mines Limited of Toronto, have penetrated the barren, but mineral rich region. Critics of South Africa charge all of them with exploitation.

Black Africa's growing numher of independent states fiercely opposed to South Africa and all her ways including her control of South West Africa, have tried hard to get U.N. action against any further influence of South African racism in what could be a big money country in Africa.

They and South Africa's best of world critical value failed to get by the old colonial club first applied by Imperial Germany but now style it Namibia, presumably as a role which Communist nations for their country.

Spelling American-Style

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Lately, a question has been raised as to how Canadian we are. In my opinion, a Canadian newspaper that serves Canadian readers should use the language that Canadians speak. As far as I know, in Canada we speak the undiluted English language.

What I mean by this is that in school we are taught to keep the "u" in words such as favour, favour, honour, etc. which is always left out in the United States.

Also, we are taught to spell the word theatre with the ending "re" instead of "er" as in theater.

Why should we not be proud to be Canadians at all times, and express our thoughts in our own language.

BERNICE KARN

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, among others, uses the style of the Canadian Press Stylebook which is that of the American form. It conserves space and does not detract from use of the language as such.

Lloyd Oppel to Speak Here

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

My son Lloyd, of whom you wrote such a nice editorial will be in your city on July 21 while touring four of eastern Canada. I thought, you might be interested. I do not know the place he will be speaking at.

He has spoken at schools and at service clubs. His health is improving and prayers are going to God to keep his late fall.

History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

July 5, 1973 . . .

British and Canadian forces were defeated by an invading American army. 158 years ago today, in 1814 at the Battle of Chippawa on the west bank of the Niagara River during the War of 1812. Some 4,000 American under Gen. Jacob Brown and Gen. Winfield were roughly matched by Gen. Phineas Riall with some 2,000 regulars and militia. Riall relied on past experience that showed the wisdom of offensive operations against the American levies, but the men under Brown and Winfield were well trained. British and Canadian losses totalled 500, while the Americans lost 400 men.

1953—The first assembly of the Western European Union was opened.

1940—British severed relations with the French Vichy government during the Second World War.

Corporate Tax Cuts Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's once-explosive corporate tax cuts cleared their final hurdle in the Commons Wednesday, more than a year after they were first announced by Finance Minister John Turner.

Opposed only by the New Democrats, the legislation passed third reading by a 165-to-23 margin with the Conservatives and Social Credit parties joining the Liberals to support it.

The bill is designed to spur investment and create jobs by reward by uncertainty over the ability of the minority government to get it through Parliament.

The New Democrats opposed the bill bitterly from the outset and, for a period during the winter, it looked as though the Conservatives might vote against it as well, bringing down the government.

However, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, who opposed making the measures permanent, took the steam out of the issue by later accepting a review procedure offered by Mr. Turner.

The proposal permits an automatic parliamentary review next April if 60 or more MPs sign a petition demanding it.

It also allows companies to write off the costs of new equipment in two years rather than the normal 10 to 15 years it takes machinery to wear out or become obsolete.

First announced in May, 1972, the bill was delayed initially by the federal election last fall; then stalled for months afterward by uncertainty over the ability of the minority government to get it through Parliament.

Witnesses Differ At Hydro Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) . Conflicts in evidence became apparent Wednesday during the testimony of James D. Fleck, Premier William Davis's chief executive officer, before the legislature select committee inquiry into the Ontario Hydro headquarters contract.

Mr. Fleck said his meeting with John Cronyn at which the unhappiness of London, Ont., contractor Donald Smith was discussed was not later than Nov. 7, 1972.

Mr. Cronyn testified earlier that the meeting was in the last week of November or early December. At the time Mr. Cronyn, who is a director of Mr. Smith's company, Ellis-Don Ltd., was chairman of the provincial committee on government productivity. Mr. Fleck was executive director of the committee.

Mr. Fleck said Mr. Cronyn told him Donald Smith of Ellis-Don did not have enough time to prepare its proposals for the Hydro project and it did not have the opportunity to follow-up its proposal with Hydro officials.

The Hydro commission met July 18, 1972, and awarded the $44-million lease-purchase contract for its Toronto headquarters to Canada Square Corp. Ltd., headed by Gerhard Moog, a friend of Premier Davis. The contract was not officially signed until last Nov. 1.

Mr. Fleck said he also was aware of rumors that the press was considering investigating the Hydro project about the time Mr. Cronyn spoke to him.

Paul Godfrey Named Chairman of Metro

TORONTO (CP) — At 34, Paul Godfrey has one of the biggest municipal jobs in the country.

As newly-elected chairman of Metropolitan Toronto council, he can look forward to a 60-hour work week and the task of trying to heal a deepening rift between the city and the five suburban boroughs in Metro.

Mr. Godfrey's election votes illustrate the split on Metro council.

Only two of his 17 votes came from city politicians. And only two of the 11 votes cast for his nearest rival, city Ald. Reid Scott, came from the boroughs.

Lumber Prices Decline Sharply

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie told the Commons Wednesday he has been informed of recent declines in lumber prices of up to 20 per cent—a reversal of the trend toward substantial price increases in the last year.

Replying to James McGrath (PC—St. John's East), Mr. Gillespie said he had received assurance from lumber producers that domestic needs will be met and the government has no plans to control lumber exports.

Mr. McGrath said exports to the United States and Japan had driven up lumber prices by about 40 per cent in the last year.

An industry spokesman said later that prices had risen about 30 to 60 per cent, but fluctuations in the last three to four weeks had dropped some prices by 10 to 15 per cent, particularly for softwoods.

Mr. Gillespie based his comments on statements by a British Columbia producer who said he had to cut prices by 20 per cent, to meet competition from the United States, a spokesman for Mr. Gillespie's office said.

Free Work Offer Likely Too Late

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The financially troubled Colemans Packing Co. Ltd. probably will not accept a union offer to work for two weeks without pay, company general manager Graeme Bleman said Wednesday.

"I doubt that we're prepared to accept the offer," he said, explaining that the chain-reaction impact of winding down operations may already mean that the plant is doomed.

Members of Local 185, Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America, offered to contribute $26,000 in union funds as well as surrendering two weeks wages, which with a full staff would total over $100,000, if it would help the company settle its financial problems.

Last week the Bank of Montreal demanded repayment of more than $1 million in loans, forcing the company into receivership with Clarkson Co. Ltd. of Toronto.

Mr. Bleman said that even with a large influx of cash it might be too late as the company is losing customers.

Vote Small

HAMILTON (CP) — An unofficial plebiscite on regional government in Hamilton-Wentworth scheduled to end Wednesday has been extended because of poor voter turnout.

Organizers had expected 65,000 votes to be cast but at the end of last week only one-tenth of that figure had been reached.

Organizers of the vote, which began June 18, now expect 40,000 ballots.

Police State?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Montreal police sergeant told the Canadian Police Association's 25th annual convention Wednesday that Quebec is heading towards a police state.

Sgt. Guy Marcil of the Montreal urban community police force, and head of the Montreal Policemen's Brotherhood, said more and more powers are being given to the nine-man provincial police commission that was started in 1969. If the trend continues, he said, "We are going to see a police state in Quebec."

He told reporters his association warned the Quebec government of the danger if recommendations made in a white paper on police enforcement completed two years ago were implemented.

False Rumor

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario has launched a campaign to counter what Tourism Minister Claude Bennett calls "unfair propaganda" in some American states that indicate Ontario has a gasoline shortage.

Mr. Bennett said in an interview the Americans are not openly saying Ontario has shortages similar to those in most of the states but the propaganda is being spread by word of mouth.

He referred to "some broadcasters" as among the culprits.

About 20 million American motorists visit Ontario annually.

Dome Starts Pleading For Ethane Exports

OTTAWA (CP) — Dome Petroleum Ltd. began making its case before the National Energy Board Wednesday for permission to export 139 million barrels of liquid ethane to the United States.

W. E. Richards, appearing for Dome, told the board that Dome and Dow Chemical of Canada Ltd. are ready to put $400 million in the petrochemical industry here if they are given the export permission.

Mr. Richards said the export amounts to one-half of one per cent of Canada's proved reserves of natural gas from which the ethane will be extracted.

He said Dome will argue that since the board clamped down on natural gas exports in November, 1971, there have been sufficient new finds of natural gas to allow further exports.

Under the Dome proposal, an ethylene plant would be built at Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., along with a 2,000-mile pipeline from there to Windsor and Sarnia, Ont.

Mr. Richards said the project also meets the national policy of upgrading raw materials before exporting them.

The project would benefit both Western and Eastern Canada, he added.

Probe Costly

OTTAWA (CP) — The Le Dain commission inquiry into the non-medical use of drugs cost Canadian taxpayers $3,385,000 up to the end of January 1973, it was disclosed this year.

Only Quarter of Land Bought for New Town

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government has acquired less than one-quarter of the 28,000 acres originally slated to be purchased for the proposed new town in Pickering Township and is preparing to expropriate the balance of the acreage it wants.

Claude Bennett, minister of trade and tourism, the portfolio responsible for the project intended to house 200,000 people eventually, said in an interview Wednesday the original proposal might be amended.

"A review of the land area is one of the matters still to be cleared up," he said. "There could be some changes in plans we are going to submit. "We are still holding discussions with the federal government on the area affected."

Ottawa is responsible for assembling 18,000 acres for a planned airport to the north of the new town site.

Science Grads To Find Jobs Are Scarce

OTTAWA (CP) — Science graduates in the 1970s will not find a favorable job market, says a report released today by the Science Council of Canada.

The report says there probably will be a "shortage of the kinds of jobs that scientists traditionally have had."

The report was based on a mail survey of chemistry or physics graduates who received honors degrees in 1954, 1959 or 1964. Seventy per cent of the 813 scientists surveyed responded.

The report says science graduates will have to re-orient themselves toward industry, high schools, and international organization rather than toward university teaching and government research jobs.

The community project, run by Capilano College in co-operation with Lower Mainland Canada Manpower centres, will cater free of charge to all who enjoy and want to practise the French language and way of life, authorities for the project said.

More About Eggs Than the Chicken

By SHARON AIRHART
Staff Writer

She knows more about eggs than a chicken and more about the bone ends of a turkey than a biologist.

She's Dorothy Batchelder and for more than 20 years she's travelled Canada appearing on television and radio and demonstrating the wonders of chickens, eggs and turkeys on behalf of the Poultry Products Institute of Canada.

This year she retired. For about a month.

The poultry products institute itself, founded in 1960, will cease to exist as provincial marketing boards take over its information disseminating functions.

One of them is the Ontario Egg and Fowl Producers Marketing Board and Dorothy Batchelder has already agreed to become its home economics consultant.

"I was looking forward to retirement ... I had so many projects planned," Dorothy Batchelder will tell you.

But somehow you can't believe that the energetic home economist, who logged about 20,000 business miles a year, is quite ready yet to retire to her Bleecker Street home.

She began her career with poultry just months after the Poultry Products Institute was formed. She had moved, with husband Don McKinnon to Belleville from Ottawa where she retired from the Department of Agriculture.

That time her retirement had lasted nearly a year.

Since joining the institute, she has written and compiled 10 cookbooks and produced uncounted editions of "Poultry Patter," the institute's information and recipe disseminator.

With each "Poultry Patter" Dorothy Batchelder included a brief note about herself and her travels. Over the years the breezy little personal notes have built up a country-wide network of friends.

"When I'd go to a newspaper or a radio station they'd come running out saying 'Dorothy - we're so glad to see you!' - it's been very gratifying," she says. "My letter was published as often as the releases."

In fact, her final press release, which included a note of her "retirement", brought reams of letters from such widely-known food writers and consumer columnists as Helen Gagen and Una Abrahamson. To a woman, the letters said in thought if not in words, "we've never met but I feel we're friends - and I'll miss you".

The tributes have come not only from her peers - though these are the ones she values most - but from the poultry industry, too.

Canadian Poultryman says she's done "more to promote the consumption of eggs and poultry than any other person in this country".

Part of that promotion has been answering thousands of questions from users of turkeys and chickens and eggs.

The most common has been 'what are those little white things' in an egg (they support the yolk in the shell, she says) and, recently, how to tell there's redness around the bones of poultry once it's cooked. "We're eating younger and younger poultry and the immature bone ends cause the discolouration. Its perfectly edible.

"It's the little simple things you don't read about in cook books that people ask about," she says. "I feel pleased I've been able to sell the industry on consumer education."

"Selling the industry" hasn't been difficult when, after one of her tours in one or two provinces, the Poultry Products Institute received 10,000 requests for her booklets.

The industry, in gratitude, presented Dorothy Batchelder with a certificate for her work at its convension in London, Ont., in June. That, and a Yardley Jones caricature, are just two souvenirs of her years of effort for the institute.

"It was almost worth retiring," she says.

With her Yardley Jones caricature, Dorothy Batchelder, home economist who retired this year from the Poultry Products Institute after more than 20 years of consumer education. The caricature, along with an award of merit, was presented to her at a poultry industry convention in London last month.

Some Dorothy Batchelder Poultry Recipes

Just one of Dorothy Batchelder's many duties as home economics director for the Poultry Products Institute was to prepare recipes for regular distribution to newspapers and to write several cookbooks. Here are a few of her recipes.

Easy Chicken Bake

Use shallow greased casserole or pan. Season required number of chicken parts with a dash of ginger, garlic powder and drizzle of soya sauce. Turn pieces to coat evenly. Bake at once or marinate in covered pan in refrigerator for 30 minutes or longer. Bake, covered, for 45 minutes at 350 degrees F. Turn skin side up, baste with pan drippings or more soya sauce and continue baking, uncovered, 15 minutes or until browned, crisp and tender.

Variations: Omit ginger, garlic powder and soya sauce and instead:

1. Use dry red wine and chili powder;

2. Rub chicken pieces thoroughly with grated lemon rind, salt, rosemary, thyme and dash of garlic powder;

3. Sprinkle with dehydrated onion soup as it comes from the package, add no liquid;

4. Sprinkle with dry seasoning mix as recommended for hamburg, goulash, chili con carne, etc.;

5. Use red or white wine and commercial herb seasoning mix;

6. Use condensed cream soup and seasoned salt and pepper;

7. Use commercial sauce mixes, i.e., Stroganoff, spaghetti, etc.;

8. Use liquid salad dressings, i.e., French, Italian, etc.

Use new seasonings sparingly until you learn if the family likes them.

Turkey Custard Loaf

2½ cups coarsely ground cooked turkey
1½ cups fine bread crumbs
¾ cups turkey broth
½ cup diced celery
1 tbsp. finely chopped fresh or 1 tsp. dried parsley
2 tsp. grated onion
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper
2 tsp. lemon juice
4 large or 6 small eggs, beaten
1 cup evaporated milk

Combine turkey, crumbs, broth, celery, parsley and seasonings. Add beaten eggs and stir in milk. Mix lightly but thoroughly. Place in well greased loaf pan 8" x 5" x 3". Set in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven 350 degrees F about 1 hour or until loaf is firm and top is delicately browned.

Note: If turkey broth is not available, use 1 chicken bouillon cube dissolved in ¾ cup hot water.

For drier loaf, milk and eggs may be reduced by ¼.

For 2 generous or 3 average servings, divide recipe in half.

Chicken-On-The-Grill

3 lbs. cut-up chicken or 3½ lbs. whole chicken cut up
½ cup soya sauce
one-third cup white table wine or apple juice
1 tsp. poultry seasoning
1 tsp pepper flour paprika
¼ cup salad oil
6 to 12 small boiled onions
¼ cup boiling water

Rinse chicken pieces and dry. Place pieces skin down in single layer in shallow pan. Mix soya sauce, wine, poultry seasoning, pepper and ginger. Pour evenly over chicken. Cover and refrigerate 30 minutes or longer, turning pieces once or twice. Drain chicken thoroughly (saving marinade) coat on all sides with flour and dust liberally with paprika. Heat oil in frying pan and brown chicken slowly on all sides. Drain and arrange with onions in individual servings on large squares of heavy aluminum foil. Mix water with reserved marinade and add 2-3 tablespoonfuls to each package. Close foil with "drugstore fold" to make leakproof closures. Cook on outdoor grill 40 to 50 minutes or until tender. Open foil for last 10 minutes. If crisp skin is desired, remove chicken from foil and place over direct heat turning and basting for last 5 or 10 minutes.

Nice served with grill baked potatoes, salad and hot rolls. If desired, chicken may be browned ahead of time, cooled, packaged and refrigerated ready for the grill. Allow extra cooking time for chicken to warm up.

This recipe may be baked, substituting a casserole for foil. Bake at 350 degrees F. 50 to 60 minutes or until tender.

New Fashions for 'Sandbox Set'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Even children's party clothes have to be wash-and-wear nowadays, or Mom won't buy them, but they also have to be stylish. Fashion has worked its way down to the sandbox set, say Canadian makers of children's clothes.

Norman Latsky of Montreal says children wear, for years, was considered the poor offspring of the clothing industry. Mr. Latsky is president of the Children's Apparel Manufacturers' Association (cama).

"Nowadays the younger kids, eight to 10, are fashion-conscious. They know what they want to wear, and they are keeping the industry on its toes.

"You can make a whole season on one item if the kids go for it. They are setting their own style."

Shirley Cheatley of Elen Henderson, a Toronto firm that designs and makes girls' clothes, says they are making 400 long dresses in one design, which they have never done before. She says she believes adult styles are influencing children's wear, and mentions the caftan as an example. Mrs. Cheatley says style occasionally moves the other way, too, as in the case of the currently fashionable pinafore.

But she also says everything has to be washable and take a minimum of ironing.

"Even our organdy frills now are done in polyster so they don't take the work. Children's clothes must take 10 times the wear an adult's do.

If you could do everything in denim, you'd be all set."

Mr. Latsky says: "About 90 per cent of the industry currently uses the man-made fibres."

Both say they believe the consumer has been getting a good deal from Canadian children's wear makers.

Mrs. Cheatley says her firm is not a CAMA member, but she believes its members have been trying to hold their prices down.

"I think the canadian consumer in children's wear is getting a bargain because children's wear has not risen in price compared with other things. Our dresses cost one or two dollars more than they did last year."

"She says they may not be able to keep prices down much longer.

"Our overhead is the same as for other manufacturers. The only difference in a child's garment is half a yard less material. The finishing is the same.

"And I'm in the luxury line and people will pay a bit extra for a special occasion."

She says competition with imports is one reason the industry has tried to keep prices down.

"People will buy a cheap label for children, though they won't do it for themselves. They think differently about children's clothes."

Mr. Latsky proudly maintains that "dollar for dollar, Canadian-made children's wear represents a better deal than imports."

He says the CAMA resents importers being allowed to use Canada standard size labels.

"Most importers try to make their garments conform with the CSS standards to be on the safe side, but they should have a different label to distinguish them from the domestic products which also adhere to CSS standards."

Canadian-made children's clothes must meet hazardous products regulations. Care labelling is not mandatory, but Mr. Latsky says the industry is using it extensively.

"We've heard and seen more and more from our stores that even the parents who confine in wearing jeans and tie dyed T-shirts are buying their little girls the ruffles, and Grandma still likes to.

"A little girl is still a little girl, and when you put them in a party dress, oh, the difference!

"Even boys like to get dressed up, because they look and feel special."

Ann Landers

Last Spouse Has Rights

Dear Ann Landers: Two years ago I married Hank. His wife obtained custody of their two sons, both teen-agers. My husband tried to get at least one of the boys but the judge said no.

Ten days ago Hank's younger boy was injured in a car accident. At midnight Hank got a call from his ex-wife to meet her at the hospital. I went with him. When we arrived, she was standing in the corridor outside the operating room. The moment she saw him she threw herself into his arms and stayed there for 15 minutes, sobbing and crying. He made no attempt to disengage from her. I don't like that scene one bit.

The boy is on the critical list and Hank has been going to the hospital every evening. I want to go with him but he says I'd better stay home because his ex-wife doesn't like me. Well, I don't like her either, so that makes us even. I know Hank is seeing her every night and it's driving me wild. What can I do about it?—Upset

Dear Up: Nothing. A former wife has a legitimate call on her ex-husband when tragedy strikes one of their children.

If you're smart, you'll stop acting shook, start to display a little confidence in your husband, behave like a mature woman and accept the fact that your husband is having a very difficult time.

Dear Ann Landers: I felt sorry for the woman who asked, "Will history repeat itself?" She was considering a third marriage. Her first two husbands sounded as if they could have been brothers. Both, she said, were handsome and outgoing, slightly irresponsible and "they like to drink." The man she was planning to marry used to be a heavy drinker but promised to dry up after they were married.

When you told the woman that history usually repeats itself, it might have sounded cruel, but you spoke the truth. Here is a little poe mihai might be corny, but it contains volumes of good sense. I never can be certain whether my grandmother read it someplace or if she made it up.

I tell you this, and tell it plain,
What you have done, you will do again.
You will bite your tongue, careful or not,
Upon the already bitten spot.

Dear R.: Thank you for your astute observation. Your grandmother's poem is right on the button, as anyone who has ever bitten his tongue will testify.

Dear Ann Landers: Last night, after a few drinks, my jerky husband handed me a copy of the letter he wrote to you last Friday. For the love of heaven, don't print it!

I have been through so much with this big ape that I don't think I could survive another blow. If his letter appears in the paper I'll take the gas pipe. Believe it or not, Ann, the lunatic signed his right name, and the facts are such that anyone who knows us would have no trouble figuring out that the letter came from him.

I am begging you, don't print it. Please.—In My Corner

Dear One: Get off your knees and relax, lady. I never use real names of troubled readers and I never will. I like your husband's letter and it will not appear in the paper. You say he showed you the copy after he had had a few drinks? I think he wrote it after he had had a few drinks, too.

'Maybe We Can Help'

TORONTO (CP) — Because of Toronto zoning bylaws, Sister Anne Marie Gouy will not be able to do what she wanted—stay on the job 24 hours a day.

Starting this week, she will be director of Toronto's third alcoholic detoxification centre in a skid-road area of Toronto.

She wanted personal living quarters built into the 20-bed, remodelled Red Cross Society warehouse because "these men have to know that you are really here."

However, zoning bylaws prohibit residential accommodation in the area.

The detoxification centre, operated by St. Michael's Hospital with government funds, has an annual budget of a little more than $100,000 and is linked to all allied support agencies.

Half the beds will be for men brought in by police and the other half for men who have gone through the hospital's emergency department.

The sister and her staff have no illusions or delusions.

"They've been written off," she said. "Maybe we can help—if even just a few—help some to regain some pride."

Mounties and Indians Fill Queen's Program

REGINA (CP) — Another helping of Mounties and Indians fill the Queen's royal tour menu today as she and Prince Philip fly to Calgary to open the Stampede and end their 11-day, four-province visit.

Wednesday, the royal couple concentrated on Mounties, marking the centennial of the 12,000-member force at their prairie training centre here in a dazzling parade-square ceremony.

However, during the ceremony, in a portent of things to come today, Chief Dave Ahenakew of Prince Albert pleaded with the Queen for help in preserving Indian rights in Canada.

Harold Cardinal, leader of the Indian Association of Alberta, is expected to make a similar representation in Calgary where the Queen is to speak publicly on the Indian question.

Her remarks are expected to follow closely the thinking of the Trudeau government, which has approved the monarch's message in advance. The government generally has taken the stand that it will comply fully with treaties signed with Indians.

But the Indians are fearful that there is a gap between government intention and government action. Government thinking is that the Queen has more clout with Indians—her forebears, after all, signed the treaties—and that its message will mean more if it comes from the sovereign.

The Queen made no comment other than "Thank you" Wednesday after Chief Ahenakew, head of Saskatchewan's 28,000 treaty Indians, made his unscheduled, though not unexpected, pitch for a better lot for his people.

His representation was not heard by the invited crowd of 2,800 at the RCMP training ground because microphones used to broadcast earlier addresses by the Queen and RCMP Commissioner W. L. Higgitt were left on a raised platform for the chief's presentation below.

But he said later that he did not think anyone planned to keep his words from the public and that he was not at the ceremony to criticize.

The chief said his words were for the Queen, to let her know that "there are many things going on that jeopardize and abrogate our treaty rights and to tell her that this is happening in the country."

He told her he hoped the Canadian government "will not continue to try and terminate our treaties because this would mean the termination of a great race of people".

"It is our dream that once again we will be free and on equal grounds with our white neighbors," he said, his headdress flapping in the breeze, after pledging continued support for the monarchy.

Carleton County Jail Will Become Hostel

OTTAWA (CP) — The old Carleton County Jail in Ottawa is entering on a new career.

The Canadian Youth Hostels Association, financed with a $100,000 Local Initiatives Program grant, is working to renovate the 110-year-old prison and turn it into a year-round hostel for travelling youth.

A new regional detention centre took the place of the jail at autumn.

The hostel will convert two floors of cell blocks and part of the governor's mansion into sleeping quarters. The rest of the prison has been taken over by a historical group and the criminology department of the University of Ottawa.

"Before we touched anything else in the building we tore the thick wire mesh from the windows in the cell block," said construction foreman Don Oulton.

"We won't make any changes to the cell-block structure," said project manager Wayne Hitchell. "Our lease agreement calls for preservation of the original stonework. The structure is so sound we probably wouldn't be able to tear out the walls if we tried."

The dormitories created in the jail will have 80 beds lining the stone walls facing the prisoners' cells. The hostel is expected to open in mid-summer.

The hostel organization is making basic changes required by fire and health departments.

"We'll have to put bright and pleasant-looking beds and furnishing in the halls to offset the bleakness. The hostel mustn't look like a jail," said Marjorie Harris, a hostel worker.

Bars still cover windows overlooking a walled courtyard. A musty stench hangs in the air from the concrete walls, which are patched where rioting prisoners once smashed through them with steel bed legs.

Designs for Tomorrow

William Ferguson, planning director for consulting firm organizing Belleville's official plan, explains development concepts to special Quinte Planning Board committee at city hall Wednesday night. He said consultants now hope to produce draft of long-awaited official plan by August.

Centennial Summer Activity Hub

Area young people have a new place to be. If the sun and summer waters pall or the fish are not biting, Centennial '73 offers a range of supervised activities specially for grade 6 up.

SPICE — Students Participating In Community Education — is the name of the game. Under a Ministry of Education grant, six senior Centennial Secondary School students are organizing a seven-week gamut of activities for the young people.

Arts and crafts, cooking and sewing, and gymnasium activities are scheduled daily. Supervisor Nancy Rose says it is hoped guitar lessons will soon be on the program. Nancy, 17, is going to Western University in the fall and the money she earns will go toward her first year of a science degree.

Andy Laing, 18, will be going to Waterloo University after his contribution to Centennial '73. Karen Potter, 18, goes to the University of Toronto, and 17-year-old Debbie Coapman to St. Lawrence College. Pat Baird, 17, will be returning to Centennial's grade 12 after the summer and Norma Alwaters, 16, to grade 11.

In addition to the activities, the students are operating a canteen — more as a service than a business venture.

"The kids come by now and again but they don't have much money," said a girl behind the counter. "They come along with a nickel for sweets."

Centennial '73 is getting a helping hand from the Belleville Recreation Department. The department provides instructors each morning for the home economy sessions.

Apart from an optional $1 gym tag, the activities are provided free.

The girls followed an application by Dave Smith, co-ordinator of community school program for the Hastings County Board of Education. "It's for area students of grades 8, 7, 8 and up," said Nancy Rose, "and anyone else who wants to drop in."

Girl Dies Of Injuries

KINGSTON — A three-year-old girl became the third member of her family to die as a result of a Sunday car accident when she succumbed to head injuries Wednesday evening in Kingston General Hospital.

Julie O'Brien, three, of RR1, Corbyville, was unconscious when she was taken to KGH after the car in which she was riding skimmed into a barn beside Hastings County Road 8.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Jane O'Brien, 31, and sister Carrie Lee, six, were pronounced dead shortly after the accident.

Surviving are the father, Robert O'Brien, and two boys, Robert and Bernie.

Former School Site To Be Offered to OHC

PICTON — The former Mary Street school site, now a parking area, will be offered to The Ontario Housing Corporation at a price of $75,000 as a location for senior citizen units.

Town council this week decided in favor of offering the property for sale at $75,000, with the provision that the OHC consult with it regarding the design of any buildings proposed for construction there. An offer from the OHC of $20,000 for the site was turned down by council in June.

Although councillor Bessie Ward suggested the site be retained as a parking lot, her proposal was over-ridden by other councillors who agreed that senior citizen housing was more urgently needed here.

Picton Mayor H. J. McFarland observed the property is valuable and if the OHC shows no interest in the town's ask, price, the land perhaps could be utilized in later years for town construction.

Mayor McFarland lamented that Mary Street school had been demolished from the site since it would have increased the value of the property.

Percy Has New Reeve

Percy township in Northumberland county has a new reeve and deputy reeve this week as the result of a special meeting, Tuesday evening.

The new reeve is former deputy - reeve Wayne Pollock who steps up to fill the position left by the resignation of former reeve A. J. Hartman. Councillor John McCracken is the new deputy-reeve.

No action was taken on filling the council vacancy left by the resignation of Mr. Wartman. Council will continue with a reeve, deputy-reeve and three councillors.

Applications for the position of township clerk-treasurer will be opened late this week.

One Hurt In Crash

PICTON — A Belleville area man was treated for mingling juries at Belleville General Hospital early today following a one-car collision on Prince Edward County Road 38, near Belleville.

Injured was Joseph Goulah, 18T, Belleville, passenger in a car driven by Robert Benson, 21, of Trenton.

Damage to the car was estimated at $700.

New Potatoes On the Market

Locally grown new potatoes were offered on the Belleville farmers' market for the first time this season.

The new spuds, grown in the Cherry Valley area of Prince Edward county, were snapped up by eager customers at 80 cents a quart box or $1 for a two-quart basket.

And strawberries were also in demand on the market with the few vendors present having sold out by 10:30 a.m. and waiting for further supplies from the berry patch.

City's Official Plan Another Step Nearer

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The process producing Belleville's long - awaited official plan appears moving swiftly into its final phases.

Preliminary draft of the plan — which will blueprint the city's long-range development pattern — should be ready in a month, a special Quinte Planning Board committee overseeing the plan's evolution was told last night.

Committee chairman Alderman E. Arnold Orr termed it "delightful" news.

Precisely when the official plan itself may be finally produced is not being predicted.

It will await the reaction — from city council, planning groups and the general public — which undoubtedly will be stimulated by the draft.

The early-August deadline for the draft outline was confirmed by William A. Ferguson planning director for Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates — the consultants now producing the official plan.

Mr. Ferguson went before the committee in city hall council chambers with a planning study which is a basic formality in preparing the plan.

Crammed with 186 pages with data, charts and reviews, the brief was an intricate compilation of other studies completed through the years, projecting various phases of city development. It also includes the proposals harvested from citizen task forces on development in their neighborhoods.

The study — which projects $1,300 population by 1992 — does not form part of the official plan, Mr. Ferguson emphasized. Its purpose is to contain in a single presentation the needed data which will support the goals for land use and development to be set out in the final, official plan.

Committee members decided to take two weeks to examine the study. They will meet again July 17 when the consultants will answer any questions on which the committee wants clarification.

In the meantime, both consultants and QPB staff will meet to "whack away" at the draft plan, Mr. Ferguson said, aiming for the August target date.

Full-scale debate "will come with the draft plan," said Ald. Orr. "When it's presented, there will be enough in it to really begin discussion."

He said the draft also will be referred to the citizen task forces for detailed study and recommendations. If the August deadline is realized, public meetings should get under way by September.

City council will make the final decisions — after recommendations from the QPB. After that the draft will be returned to the consultants to ready Belleville's official plan.

Town Will Pay Bill After All.

TRENTON — Town council last night reversed an earlier stand and will pay the entire bill for the removal of a cement slab uncovered during excavation of the new municipal offices. Total cost is $1,413.21.

Council had earlier argued it was not consulted about the additional cost and that it should have been foreseen and included in construction costs in the first place.

Tony Lassing, principal of the consulting firm handling the contract, defended the firm saying "making decisions like that were what he was being paid for."

Mr. Lassing did not think it fair that the contractor be required to pay for 50 per cent of the slab removal and told the council "pay for it now and get Lassing later if that's what you wish."

While there is a clause in the contract with the town that any additional costs were to be approved by council, Councillor John Bono moved the bill be paid, seconded by George Greer and finally endorsed by the majority of council.

Ongoing Change Predicted For Canning Industries

PICTON — Robert Cobbledick, food and vegetable specialist, Ministry of Agriculture and Food here, says that the early history of the processing industry is the history of Prince Edward and predicts important changes for the years ahead.

Mr. Cobbledick, discussing agriculture in the county notes that the first successful canning plant in Canada was started in 1822 at the Vinegar Fountain by Picton by Wellington Boulter. He initially canned geese, corn and tomatoes, the cornerstone of the present processing industry. By the late 1920s more than 37 canning factories were located in Prince Edward.

"The industry had its ups and downs but the biggest impact on the Quinte area was in 1957 when Canada Canners Ltd. was sold to the California Packing Corp., better known as Delmonte," he observes.

Almost immediately Canadian Canners began to close all its plants in Eastern Ontario and by the early 1960s there were roughly 13 canning factories left in the Quinte area. Half of these were totally dependent on the labor-intensive whole pack tomato industry. The industry had shifted to southwestern Ontario and the future of the Quinte area seemed dim. Production, however, underwent a rapid change.

With social pressures to produce more food for less the industry was pushed to reduce the amount of costly labor where this could be done with no loss in product quality. In some cases the speed which accompanied mechanization has allowed the product to be handled and processed faster, permitting a better quality product to reach the store shelf.

Corn is now mechanically picked then transported to the processing plant where it is husked and processed without being touched by hand.

Mr. Cobbledick notes this type of mechanization was costly and required extensive financing.

"The smaller plants in the Quinte area, many of which were family operations could not move as quickly as the larger international firms, consequently the gap widened," he remarks.

In the mid-sixties the Quinte area began to regain its momentum, however, with devices such as the mobile combine.

Mobile combines remove peas from the pod in the field and these machines were put into use instead of hand labor. Since this innovation Prince Edward's acreage and growth of peas outstrips all other counties in Ontario.

"Sweet corn took quite a jump" says Mr. Cobbledick, mentioning new and expanding plants such as Produce Processors of Trenton and Metcalfe Foods of Deseronto. The Quinte area now grows over 39 per cent of Ontario's processed sweet corn.

In the tomato field Mr. Cobbledick states that this area is "very strongly committed to the whole pack industry." The Federal Research Station at Smithfield have worked to develop new tomato varieties to improve the quality of the product.

"The whole pack tomato industry is one segment that has been difficult to mechanize," says Mr. Cobbledick.

The crop still must be hand-harvested and peeled.

One Prince Edward grower however, Ken Marinett of East Lake, is trying a mechanical harvesting aid this year.

Pickers on a harvesting aid are transported across the field under a shade canopy, with a radio to entertain them. They pick onto a conveyor rather than belting crates.

Mr. Cobbledick adds there is now interest in speeding up the days from the field to the processed product even more for crops such as peas and corn. Some processors are studying the reduction of the importance of a central processing plant in favor of mobile processing equipment that could clean and partly transport the product back to the plant for final processing.

Says Mr. Cobbledick, "The processing industry is doing its best to reverse the consumer with a quality product at a reasonable price. It should be kept in mind with all the concern over higher food prices that Canadians still spend a smaller percentage of their income on food than any other nation in the world.

This is not to say that the processing industry is satisfied. The future still holds even more dramatic changes."

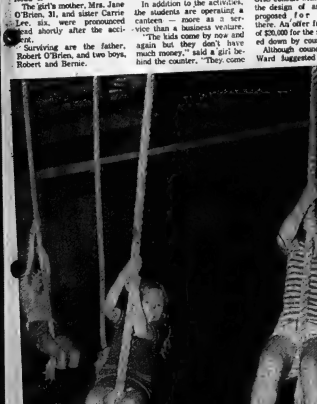
Driver 'Serious' After Accident



TRENTON — A Trenton man remains in serious condition in the intensive care unit of Kingston General Hospital this morning following a single car accident on Highway 33 Wednesday night.

Leslie John Ilic, 38, of 132 Dundas St., driver of the vehicle, was first taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital before being transferred to Kingston with a fractured leg and chest injuries. A spokesman at KGH said he was conscious but in serious condition.

Two other occupants of the Ilic vehicle were taken to Trenton hospital with less severe injuries. They were Lorena Reynolds of 180 Mack St. Trenton, and Dirk Peter Vanderlee of Kingston, who was treated and released.

Brighton Provincial Police said Mr. Ilic was eastbound on Highway 33 at approximately 9 p.m. when he slammed into a hydro pole.

Both Mr. Ilic and the woman, riding in the front seat, were thrown out of the car upon impact with the tree.

Swinging Time

Patsy Kenny (left), 12, and Marianne Ashley, 13, spent yesterday afternoon at Centennial High School's gym making the most of the facilities made available by Centennial '73. The seven-week program of activities for young people is funded by a Ministry of Education grant under the SPICE program: Students Participating In Community Education. Free apart from a $1 seasonal gym tag, activities are aimed primarily at area students from Grade 6 up.

Flowers and Beads and Things

Nancy Rose (2nd from right), 17, is one of six senior Centennial High School students who are employed under a seven-week Students Participating In Community Education (SPICE) program to provide summer activities for area youth. Arts and craft instruction and supervision by Nancy, Pat Baird, 17, and Norma Alwaters, 16, proved popular yesterday afternoon. Cheryl Chapman (left), 13, Helen Everard (2nd from left), 11, and Donna Cassidy (right), 13, were among the participants who made beads, paper flowers and simple leather crafts yesterday.

Woods Figures Right Homer Lifts Expos

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For a while, it appeared that New York Mets of the National League were going from the ridiculous to the sublime.

As it turned out, they went from the ridiculous to the ridiculous.

You would have thought the Met relievers had shaken off the bad pitches out of their overworked arms Tuesday night when Montreal Expos broke a club record with 21 hits en route to a 19-8 rout.

And you would have thought that, with Tom Seaver starting Wednesday night, the bullpen was going to get some relief of its own.

Wrong on both counts.

For five innings, Seaver held Montreal batters hitless. And for seven he held them runless, coasting along with a 5-0 lead.

But in the eighth, the Expos drove Seaver from the mound and once again Mets' manager Yogi Berra waved hopefully to the bullpen.

As it turned out, Buzz Capra was the sacrificial lamb. He offered a pitch that Don Woods demolished, sending it over the left field fence for a three-run homer that capped a seven-run inning and lifted the Expos to a 7-5 victory.

In other National League games, Houston Astros swept a doubleheader from Atlanta Braves 11-4 and 12-8, St. Louis Cards pummeled Pittsburgh Pirates 11-3, Chicago Cubs edged Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 in 10 innings, San Diego Padres downed Los Angeles Dodgers 4-2 and San Francisco Giants whipped Cincinnati Reds 6-2.

"Our bullpen has hurt us this year," Berra said in an understatement.

George Theodore's three-run homer and solo shots by Willie Mays and Daffy Dyer had seemingly given Seaver all the ammunition he needed. But in the seventh, the Expos got to him for four quick runs, two of them on the last pitch he made, a two-run single by Bob Bailey.

In came Capra. After Tim Foli singled, he got an out, the second of the inning. Up came Woods, batting for pitcher Joe Gilbert. "I saw Capra pitching the other day against Boots and all he threw were fastballs," the pinch-hitter revealed.

He figured he'd get a curve. He figured right.

Woods said he'd also figured ahead of time that manager Gene Mauch might use him as a pinch-hitter in such an important spot.

"I was thinking of this and getting myself in the right frame of mind to go up there," he said. "It's tough to come off the bench and hit like that."

The bullpens took a pretty good beating elsewhere, too. Houston unloaded 24 hits in the sweep of the Braves. Doug Rader and Tommie Agee each had a pair of homers in the twinbill and, in the second game, Lee May had a grand-slam off Danny Frisella to cap the Astros' five-run eighth.

The Cardinals scored eight runs in the fourth inning against the Pirates, two apiece on singles by Ted Sizemore and Ken Reitz.

Bill Buner gave Philadelphia a short-lived lead in the top of the 10th against Chicago with a run-scoring double. In the bottom of the inning, Billy Wilson came out of the Phils' bullpen to try to protect it. No such luck.

Glenn Beckert singled and, one out later, Ron Santo hit his 11th homer of the season for the Cubs, maintaining their 5½ games lead over runner-up St. Louis in the East Division.

Rich Troedson won his fourth game against five losses and singled home a run while Dave Roberts homered for the Padres, sending Los Angeles to its fourth straight loss and cutting the Dodgers' West Division lead over San Francisco to 3½ games.

Gary Thomasson, a southpaw swinger for the Giants, tripled in the game against the Reds, then scored on Dave Rader's single, the key hits in a four-run seventh inning.

MINNEAPOLIS (CP) — Three players who competed last year in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series have been signed by Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League.

The signings of Rick Chinnick, Tom Colley and Jim Johnston gives the North Stars five of its 12 choices in the Junior draft, including their top four picks.

Pros Are Warming Up

WINNIPEG (CP) — The professionals warmed up Wednesday for today's opening round of the $100,000 Manitoba Open golf championship but only three managed to best par.

Ron Lalter and Sandy Patterson, both of Brantford, Ont., and Gerry Morrissey of Winnipeg toured the 6,592-yard, par-72 Niakwa Country Club course in two-under-par 70 to tie for low honors in the pro-am event. But while the course won the preview, its first real test comes with the opening round when about 140 professionals and amateurs are expected to tee off in search of a share of the $10,000 prize money in the 54-hole tournament.

While Lalter, Patterson and Morrissey beat par, the rest of the field, including the pre-tournament favorites, failed to solve Niakwa's tight fairways and slick greens.

And with the announcement that defending champion Will Homenuk of Winnipeg will not be on hand, the championship remains wide open.

Veteran Canadian Moe Norman did likewise after winning in British Columbia Wednesday but then went straight to the putting green and back onto the course for more practice.

John Elliott Jr. of Lutz, Fla., the 1971 Manitoba champion, playing his first competitive round in more than a week, shot a 76.

Despite playing under perfect golfing conditions — brilliant sunshine, warm temperatures and light breezes — even the old pro Al Balding of Toronto soared to a 78.

The golfers will face similar conditions in the opening round and host professional Chick Duncan says the conditions are perfect for the course.

Lee Bradshaw, of Toronto, will also begin his quest to succeed where Gary Bowerman of Calgary, Dan Orr, and Balding have failed.

Bradshaw, winner of the Saskatchewan Open last weekend, will attempt to be the first player to win consecutive championships on the Canadian tour.

Balding failed after winning the Alberta Open and Bowerman did likewise after winning in British Columbia.

Twins' Investment In Bane Looks Good

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The $55,000 Minnesota Twins spent to sign Ed Bane has provided instant results at the box office—and appears to be a good investment on the playing field, too.

Although Kansas City Royals rallied for four runs in the ninth inning and beat the Twins 5-4 in an American League game Wednesday night, that was overshadowed by the major league pitching debut of Bane, Minnesota's top pick in the recent free agent draft signed last month off the Arizona State campus.

The sellout crowd of 43,890, largest in Twins' history—was not disappointed. The 22-year-old Bane held the Royals to one run and three hits in the seven innings he pitched.

"He lived up to all expectations," said Twins' manager Frank Quilici. "He looked just great."

What did Bane think of his first outing?

"It was fun," replied the youngster. "The big crowd didn't bother me . . . the Royals did. But that catcher's glove of George Mitterwald looked awfully big and reassuring back there."

Elsewhere Boston Red Sox swept a doubleheader from New York Yankees 2-1 and 1-0; Chicago White Sox swept a pair from Texas Rangers 2-0 and 6-2; Baltimore Orioles won the completion of a suspended game 6-4 over Milwaukee in 16 innings, then outscored the Brewers 10-7 in Wednesday's regular game; Cleveland Indians defeated Detroit Tigers 5-2, and California Angels beat Oakland Athletics 3-1.

Bane had compiled a 41-4 record in three years at Arizona State—including a 15-1 mark this season—and struck out 324 batters, most ever by a collegian.

Minnesota rallied for three runs in the eighth, two on Joe Lis' homer, but Kansas City responded with four runs in the top of the ninth, including a tie-breaking, two-run single by Cookie Rojas. A Minnesota rally in the bottom of the ninth fell one run short.

Of two Yankee errors in the first inning leading to Boston's unearned runs.

The late play came with the bases loaded and one out. Carlton Fisk hit a grounder back of third base, which Graig Nettles fielded and fired to second, forcing pinch runner Tommy Harper. But the tying run scored when second baseman Bernie Allen's relay threw to first was too late to get Fisk.

Carl Yastrzemski, who started out on second, never stopped running. First baseman Ron Blomberg's throw to the plate was wild and Yaz scored the winning run.

In the second game, Rogelio Moret—making only his second start of the season—fired a no hitter. He got the only run he needed in the fifth when Richie Miller walked, stole second and scored on a single by Yastrzemski.

Both the White Sox' victories came on four hitters, Jim Kaat and Cy Acosta combining in the first game and Bart Johnson and Terry Forster collaborating in the nightcap.

Baltimore, trailing 4-1 when the second game of Tuesday's twilight doubleheader was suspended by a local curfew after seven innings, rallied for three runs in the eighth, then won it in the 16th on a two-run homer by Elrod Hendricks.

The Orioles took the regular game thanks to Karl Williams' three-run homer in the seventh and a three-run rally in the eighth.

Cleveland snapped a seven-game losing spin by collecting hits, including a pair of run scoring singles by veteran shortstop Leo Cardenas. The loss ended Detroit's five-game winning streak.

The Angels' Bill Singer relief help from Dave Lemanczyk boosted his record to 13-5 beating Oakland.

John Vice Qualifies

Ontario Golf Association district qualifying rounds for the Ontario Junior Championship were held in 14 areas Tuesday.

Canadian Forces Base Trenton Golf Club was host for Area 12 with 36 young golfers from Napanee, Picton, Trenton and Belleville taking part.

The Ontario Junior finals will be played at St. Catharines, July 25.

Charles Lodermans of Picton fired a 78 to lead the junior section at CFB Trenton. Belleville's John Vice of the Bay of Quinte Country Club captured top honors in the juvenile division with a 79.

In the bantam section, Peter Nesbitt of the host CFB club finished first with a 82.

Tennis Clinics

TRENTON — Women's Ontario Tennis Champion Jane O'Hara begins three days of tennis clinics today in Trenton's Centennial Park.

Thursday and Friday clinics will be for Trenton Lawn Tennis club members only with open clinics held in the evenings of both days for the general public from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m.

Belleville Bantam — top scorers continued with their scoring feats in South Central Lacrosse Association play Wednesday, as Wally Inwood (from left) trapped four. Jeff Gow three, and Jeff Runciman four. Alan Hackett also provided four goals in Belleville's seventh straight win of the season. Belleville drubbed Ajax 20-1.

Player Shortage Hurts

Beside losing to Belleville 20-1 in South Central Lacrosse Association play Wednesday, the Ajax bantams had other headaches to contend with in just making the game.

Forty-five minutes after the game was scheduled to start at Dick Ellis Arena, two carloads of 11 players finally made it to the dressing rooms after weathering a rain storm in Bowmanville.

Before they left Ajax, coach Sid Ballik waited 10 minutes in the hope that first string goaltender, Ritel Andrews would make an appearance for the trek to Belleville.

Andrews failed to appear. Backup goaltender Lee Dolimole was forced to face a barrage of Belleville shots in a losing cause as Ajax's single line change made for tired players on the floor. Ballik said Andrews' would have made a difference of six or seven goals to the scoreboards.

At the other end of the arena, Belleville goaltender Jeff Donald had a comparatively easy night of it. He faced few legitimate shots on his side in the first period there was but one.

Ajax winger Brian Walsh, spoiled Donald's shutout bid with a shot fired from near parallel to his goalmouth to put Ajax on the board in the third frame.

Firing for Dolimole's poorly defended corners, Jeff Runciman, Jeff Gow and Wally Inwood continued to add to their tie team scoring. Gow produced three goals, while Runciman, and Inwood, with Alan Hackett mixing in his four, scored one better than a hat trick.

Hackett scored the best looking goal of the evening. Coming across Dolimole's goalmouth, the Belleville forward shovelled a one-handed shot along the floor, making the job of putting balls into the net look easy.

Although scoring only two goals, Jamie Kennedy provided work horse duty for Belleville, stinging Ajax forwards with quick - footed thrusts up the wings. Single goalgetters for the home team came from Mark Frenette, Scott Summers and Terry Thompson.

With seven wins and one tie, Belleville will be coming up against another losing five club Thursday of next week. Markham bantams worry coach Mike Finnegan. According to Ajax coach Sid Ballik, the western division club drubbed them by 12 and 16 goal margins to inflict two of their five losers. "They're a strong club," said Ballik.

John French Blast Sparks Canadian Tire

CNR can't remember all their hits in Industrial Softball League action Wednesday night and the Intelligencer can't forget the one bit that cost them a win.

The CN connected for 26 hits in demolishing Constellation 17-2 and stretching their east-ern division lead to four points over the idle Brooks Bond.

The one bit the Intell would just as soon forget was John French's fourth inning grand slam which erased a 4-4 Intell lead and sparked Canadian Tire to an eventual 8-4 victory.

Zane Plumbe led the Yardsmen's hitting spree with a home run and two singles with Barry Hamlin punching a pair of doubles and a pair of singles an1 Rob McMurter three single.

Parry Soule started for the pennant leading CN giving up both the Intelligencer runs and four hits before Wayne Casselman cleaned up with no - hit ball for the final four innings.

Tom Bellis was around for the entire 26 inning gallery on the Constellation mound. Jim Wayne May and Jim Lloyd added singles for the Carpenters.

The Intell scored three times in the first inning and one in the fourth on Ron Culloden's base knock homer before French's ace swing tied the game. A single run in the bottom of the seventh gave the win to the Tire.

French hurled the win, allowing 11 hits and fanning five. Larry Goodyear doubled and Alec Belch hit a pair of singles for other Tire hits.

Joe Edwards was tagged with the loss although firing a six-hitter. Sid walks kept the young right-hander in trouble most of the time. Glenn Reynolds stroked a double and two singles and Brian Amann and Edwards two singles each for the eastern division cellar dwelling Pruskers.

McTaggart Baffles Port Hope Batters

United Rigging pitcher, Ron McTaggart, was two-hitting away from a shutout in Eastern Ontario Baseball Association play Tuesday, when his brother's two errors gave Port Hope an unearned run to shatter a near perfect game.

Don McTaggart bobbled the ball to allow opposing pitcher Toner to reach second base and subsequently home to score Port Hope's lone run in a 10-1 drubbing.

Ron McTaggart's work on the Belleville juvenile's mound was near flawless as he gave up two meagre hits, walked two batters, and felled 15 at home plate. On the other hand, Toner allowed 17 hits while managing only five strikeouts.

Second baseman Bob Moore, provided Belleville with the heavy hitting needed to give United Rigging their sixth win in seven games and a solid hold on first place. Peterborough Lions trail Belleville in second.

Smashing two triples and a single for a three for four record, Moore earned five RBI's to lead the Belleville hitters. First baseman Tim Mader trapped Toner's pickoff throw to second and a double stole Brian Cousins and Brent Goegan, each hit twice to score one apiece.

Player Shortage Hurts

Beside losing to Belleville 20-1 in South Central Lacrosse Association play Wednesday, the Ajax bantams had other headaches to contend with in just making the game.

Forty-five minutes after the game was scheduled to start at Dick Ellis Arena, two carloads of 11 players finally made it to the dressing rooms after weathering a rain storm in Bowmanville.

Before they left Ajax, coach Sid Ballik waited 10 minutes in the hope that first string goaltender, Ritel Andrews would make an appearance for the trek to Belleville.

Andrews failed to appear. Backup goaltender Lee Dolimole was forced to face a barrage of Belleville shots in a losing cause as Ajax's single line change made for tired players on the floor. Ballik said Andrews' would have made a difference of six or seven goals to the scoreboards.

At the other end of the arena, Belleville goaltender Jeff Donald had a comparatively easy night of it. He faced few legitimate shots on his side in the first period there was but one.

Ajax winger Brian Walsh, spoiled Donald's shutout bid with a shot fired from near parallel to his goalmouth to put Ajax on the board in the third frame.

Firing for Dolimole's poorly defended corners, Jeff Runciman, Jeff Gow and Wally Inwood continued to add to their tie team scoring. Gow produced three goals, while Runciman, and Inwood, with Alan Hackett mixing in his four, scored one better than a hat trick.

Hackett scored the best looking goal of the evening. Coming across Dolimole's goalmouth, the Belleville forward shovelled a one-handed shot along the floor, making the job of putting balls into the net look easy.

According to Ajax coach Sid Ballik, the western division club drubbed them by 12 and 16 goal margins to inflict two of their five losers. "They're a strong club," said Ballik.

Mayer Aiming For A First

LONDON (AP) — Alex Mayer, a 21-year-old student from Wayne, N.J., has one ambition at this time: to become the first U.S. intercollegiate tennis champion to win the Wimbledon crown in the same year.

Mayer, studying law at Stanford University, won the National Collegiate Athletic Association title the week before Wimbledon started. Then he flew to London and went straight to Wimbledon's fast grass courts without any practice.

Now he's in the semi-finals, playing fourth-seeded Alex Metreveli of Russia today for a place in Saturday's final. He reached the semis by upsetting Ilie Nastase, the wily Romanian who was top seeded and a strong favorite for the title. Then, in the quarter-finals, he beat eighth - seeded Juergen Fassbender of West Germany after losing the first two sets.

To make things more difficult for him, he played the first week with a bad attack of hay fever, and throughout the tournament has had an injured thumb joint on his racket hand.

In all, five U.S. intercollegiate champions—Bob Friedberg, Ted Schroeder, Tony Trabert, Alex Olmedo and Stan Smith—have gone on to win Wimbledon, but never in the same year.

Mayer, son of a Hungarian tennis-playing father and a German mother, views the prospect of his match against Metreveli as first Russian ever to reach a semi-final here, coolly.

"I can only try," he said. "Metreveli's playing awfully well, but I don't feel particularly nervous. I really don't feel I'm under much pressure."

The man who does feel pressure is third-seeded Roger Taylor, the burly British left-hander. Taylor is one of the few members of the Association of Tennis Professionals who defied the ATP's ban on playing at Wimbledon this year.

He goes into his semi-final against Jan Kodes, the imperturbable Czech who is seeded second, knowing the centre court crowd will be anxiously rooting for him to win and be the first Briton to reach a Wimbledon final since Bunny Austin was beaten by Don Budge in 1938.

The women's final Friday will be an all-American battle between four-time champion Billie Jean King and 18-year-old Chris Evert, playing in her first Wimbledon final.

Beliveau Listening

MONTREAL (CP) — Gerry Patterson said Wednesday that talks between Jean Beliveau and Quebec Les Nordiques of the World Hockey Association have become quite serious.

Patterson, who serves as Beliveau's agent, said "you listen when they're offering half the bank."

The management of Les Nordiques met Wednesday in Quebec City to complete plans for their offer to Beliveau. It is expected they will meet with Patterson and Beliveau before the end of the week.

Beliveau retired in 1971 as team captain of Montreal Canadiens after 18 seasons in the National Hockey League.

During his career with Montreal, he scored 507 goals and 712 assists in 1,125 league games. He has been a vice president with the club since.

Four Signed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four more players signed National with Vancouver Canucks today, including left - winger Don Tannahill, a 32-goal scorer in his rookie season last year.

General manager Hal Laycoe concluded negotiations with Tannahill's lawyer, Alan Eagleson and at the same time announced the signing of goaltender Bruce Bullock and amateurs Paul Sheard and Paul O'Neil.

Terms of Tannahill's contract were not disclosed.

Ontario Women Dominate

HALIFAX (CP) — Ontario women dominated the top placings at the end of preliminary tests at the Canadian Diving Championships here Wednesday, but in the men's division, Western and Quebec competitors fared better.

Beverley Boys, Cindy Shatto and Linda Cuthbert, all diving out of the Ottawa Institute of Toronto, led the eight divers who made it to the finals by way of their standings after preliminaries.

Only Eniko Keifer of Montreal broke the Toronto trio's hold on the top three places when she took third spot in dives from the three-metre springboard.

Boys led the three-metre competition, with Shatto second then Miss Cuthbert fourth.

In the one-metre competition, Miss Shatto was followed by Boys and Cuthbert, while Cuthbert and Shatto finished Miss Boys in the tower diving.

In the men's diving, Ken Armstrong of Montreal led the three-metre event followed by Scott Cranham of Toronto and Skip Phoenix of Etobicoke.

Rookie Quarterbacks—Some Shine; Others Fizzle

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rookie quarterbacks were everywhere with mixed results in three Canadian Football League exhibition games on Wednesday night as the pre-season scramble for jobs warmed up.

At Hamilton, three rookie signal-callers plus sophomore Chuck Ealey combined to direct the defending Grey Cup champion Tiger-Cats to a 21-7 victory over Toronto Argonauts.

Rookie Frank DiMaggio started Ottawa Rough Riders off with a second-quarter touchdown drive but the Riders needed Gerry Organ's last-minute field goal to salvage a 19-19 tie with Winnipeg Blue Bombers in Ottawa.

And in Calgary, rookie Kark Douglas failed to generate any scoring for British Columbia Lions and it was left for veteran Don Moorhead to rally the Lions to a 16-15 win over the Stampeders with two fourth-quarter touchdown drives.

The display of quarterback talent at Hamilton left Ticats coach Jerry Williams with perhaps a tougher decision than before the game after all three of his rookies turned in impressive performances.

Bill Etter, from Notre Dame, started the Ticat offence with two scoring drives. The first was a 44-yard field goal by rookie import kicker Bob Macchitti and the second a single by Macchitti on a wide field goal attempt.

Ealey directed a third-quarter Ticat drive that ended with a five-yard scoring run by Andy Hopkins and then rookie Jim Ethington, from Kansas University, directed another scoring drive, providing the touchdown with a one-yard quarterback sneak.

Finally, Alex Lockington from Hamilton's McMaster University, directed the Ticats in the final quarter, setting up another Macchitti field goal. Macchitti also provided two converts.

Veteran Joe Theismann took over in their only touchdown in the second quarter, a four-yard scoring run by Len Hopkins, converted by Ivan MacMillan.

The Argos also brought out rookie quarterback Mike Rae from University of Southern California, but he failed to get the team moving, as did veteran Wally Gabler who played most of the second half.

At Ottawa, Organ kicked the tying field goal from 22 yards after the Blue Bombers had gone ahead on a 68-yard touchdown pass from backup quarterback Tom Pharr to Charlie Collins.

Quarterback Don Jonas kicked the Bombers' extra point and provided a 36-yard field goal in the second quarter.

Organ converted Ottawa's touchdown which came on an 11-yard pass from DiMaggio to flanker Billy Cooper.

At Calgary, rookie quarterback Gary Danielson from Pacific University marched the Cowboys 47 yards for a three-yard plunge by Rudy Linterman after backup quarterback Jim Lindsey had directed the first scoring drive for a two-yard touchdown by halfback Bill Long.

Larry Robinson kicked the Calgary converts and Don Moen booted a 41-yard single.

The next pre-season action has Montreal Alouettes visiting Edmonton Eskimos Friday.

Food Industry Denied Bids to Boost Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The food industry in the United States is peppering the Cost of Living Council with requests for exceptions from President Nixon's price freeze but losing the battle.

The council said Wednesday the food industry has been predominant in the list of more than 350 requests by companies or trade associations claiming severe economic hardship.

Despite claims that the freeze is creating food shortages and threatening some food stores with bankruptcy, the council said few will be permitted to increase prices.

In fact, in a majority of both food and non-food requests, severe economic hardship has not been evident, said Bert Conklin, the council's operations director.

"We will not take seriously horror stories that are not documented," Conklin said.

Prairie Crops Are Good But Leaf Rust Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — Crops are making generally good progress in most of the Prairie provinces although leaf rust could produce damage if unfavorable weather conditions occur, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

In its third report for 1973, the bureau said leaf rust has been reported throughout wheat fields in much of Manitoba and parts of Saskatchewan and although most commercial varieties still live moderate resistance, weather conditions could lead to damage.

In Ontario, wet weather has slowed crop growth throughout the province but its southern Ontario recent warm weather improved prospects. Eastern and Northern Ontario still are showing excessive moisture and in eastern Ontario soil cultivation is almost impossible.

The News Quiz has treasures for you. Don't forget to pick them up.

Buying Spree Cuts Balance

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada went on a bit of a buying spree in the United States during May, sending total import value for the month to $2.2 billion, an increase of $421 million over imports in May, 1972.

As a result the trade balance in May of $103 million was down sharply from an unusually high surplus in April.

Accounting for the rise in U.S. imports were automobile and automobile parts, aircraft parts and the delivery during the month of several commercial aircraft.

McKeough Back In Vital Role

TORONTO (CP) — Less than a year after his political setback, 40-year-old W. Darcy McKeough is back in the Ontario cabinet.

In a brief ceremony at Queen's Park Wednesday, Mr. McKeough, his wife Joyce and two small sons watching, was sworn in as energy minister, a new portfolio spawned by a modern crisis.

It was Aug. 31, 1972, that Mr. McKeough announced his resignation as minister of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs because of his financial involvement in a Chatham land development plan.

His selection for the new ministry, which brings cabinet strength to 26, came as no surprise. As early as last Jan. 15 when he was appointed chief adviser to Premier William Davis on energy policy, it was obvious that he was starting a political comeback.

Last June, he produced 46 proposals to guide the province in mapping energy strategy.

One of his proposals was for a secretariat, not a ministry, to manage the new energy policies. But Mr. Davis rejected the idea.

His new ministry, established by legislation only last month, should be in operation by the start of the fall session of the legislature Oct. 2.

Paper Says Liberals Asked U.S. Firms' Aid

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says in a copyrighted Ottawa dispatch that the federal Liberal party made "a concerted effort" last fall to persuade American companies that their Canadian subsidiaries "should contribute to the Liberal war chest."

The report says the effort began as the campaign for the Oct. 30 general election "began to drain party reserves."

It names Senator Harry Hays of Calgary as one of the Liberals who travelled through the United States "attempting to persuade U.S. corporations to give through their Canadian units."

It adds that Senator Hays "while admiting that part of his U.S. tour might have been devoted to fund-raising discussions, says he was on personal business." But it further quotes him as saying "I am working for the cause of Canada and the political system all the time."

Inflation-fighting Action Is Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The government must present an emergency program to deal with inflation, Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin said Wednesday.

The Peace River, Alta., member told reporters the country cannot afford to go without such legislation for two or three summer months while the House is recessed.

He said economic forecasts predict the cost of living will rise more than five per cent this year.

Citing steeper housing costs and mortgage interest rates, Mr. Baldwin said middle-income earners no longer can expect to own a home.

"This is a disgraceful condition in a country as rich as Canada."

Earlier in the Commons, Finance Minister John Turner told Mr. Baldwin that rising mortgage rates reflect a strong demand for credit that has yet to peak and level out.

Mr. Baldwin noted that the Toronto Dominion Bank raised its housing mortgage rate Tuesday to 9% per cent from 9¼ per cent and asked whether government action is planned to hold mortgage rates down.

Mr. Turner said no increases have been allowed in Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. rates for low-income housing.

He also pointed out that Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford has a bill before the Commons, designed to increase the flow of mortgage money. It would create a residential mortgage bank.

Mr. Baldwin said the bill will have only marginal effect. However, the Conservatives were prepared to support it.

Mr. Turner said in the House that selective export controls, such as those announced recently for petroleum and oilseed products, are not part of a general government effort to control inflation.

But he refused to give assurances, when pressed by James Gillies (PC—Toronto Don Valley) that similar controls will not be applied elsewhere in future.

Later Mr. Turner offered to check "any legitimate complaints" that small business had been denied bank loans.

Kingston Man Plans To Remove Queen E.

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — If the 238-foot Atlantean that Captain Brian Erb bought for $1 lives up to expectations, an adventurous seafaring crew may be putting it to a real test soon in Hong Kong.

Mr. Erb bought the ocean freighter in 1966 after it was beached and damaged by storm at Las Exoumins, Que. Now, with some help from his friends, he hopes to make it into one of the world's largest salvage operations.

The crew hopes to head to Hong Kong harbor to try to remove the wrecked Queen Elizabeth, the world's largest liner.

Several large companies have tried to remove the wreck, a traffic hazard in the busy harbor, but none have succeeded. Mr. Erb said in an interview Wednesday, his method, so far a secret, will take a matter of days.

Add so far, he has been doing quite well.

After the storm, the Atlantean had a fractured hull and was left 100 feet from shore. But Mr. Erb gambled a dollar, bought it, blasted a channel under it and was able to pilot it back into the St. Lawrence on its own power.

Now the 2,500-ton Yugoslavian-built freighter, soon used to transport cattle, is being renovated to accommodate the crew of 30 and diving and blasting gear used to bring up sunken ships.

Most Actors Eskimo in Unique Movie

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — Paramount Pictures is spending about $2 million filming a picture in which at least half of the dialogue will be Eskimo.

The picture has a cast of more than 50 but only three are well-known. The remainder, with one exception, are Baffin Island Eskimos who have never acted before.

The exception is an Alaskan Eskimo girl with some dramatic experience.

"I don't know if it's going to work but it's interesting as hell," says James Houston, author of the successful White Dawn which is about to become a movie.

The man who spent nine years of his life with the Eskimos, mainly in nearby Cape Dorset, is actually convinced the film will be a success.

Mr. Houston need only hope that the film will be partly as successful as his book.

After being on the best-seller lists in the United States and Canada, it has been published in 22 editions around the world in many languages.

Negotiations are in progress to publish it in the Soviet Union.

Mr. Houston does not deny reports that he still get $100,000 for the film version of his novel.

The book, based on a true story he heard from elderly Eskimos, tells of three New England whalers at the turn of the century who became lost from their ship.

They were rescued by Eskimos and lived with them for some time until they had so disrupted the lives of the natives' that they had to be killed.

In the book the story is narrated by an Eskimo. Mr. Houston, writing the screenplay, turned the plot around so that the three strangers tell the story.

The strangers are played by Warren Oates as Pete, Timothy Bottoms as Dagat and Lou Gossett as Portigee. The only other import actor is Geni McCormick of Los Angeles.

Why is half the dialogue in Eskimo?

"I don't want it to be a documentary," said Houston. "I had to turn the book around a bit because the only other way was to have the Eskimo speak English—and I wouldn't have it.

Will the audience understand?

"I believe we'll be able to convey everything it needs to know. There will be some voice over to explain what the Eskimos are saying."

Director Philip Kaufman came here with a predominantly Canadian film crew—"I'm very impressed with them"—and a determination to produce a picture that is true to the Eskimo—"just meeting these people is a wonderful thing."

Mr. Houston has set up an Igloo village near this Baffin Island community "take a look, that's the last Igloo village you'll ever see," a schoolteacher told a group of sightseeing students from the school in town recently.

There are certain things we are not bothering to spell out," Mr. Kaufman said. "The meaning will become clear."

The director, who described White Dawn as the War and Peace of the Eskimo, said:

"Jim wanted to do the last great day of the Eskimos, a time when they were great hunters. I wanted to record it.

"I'm trying to look through Jim's eyes. I want to adhere totally to Jim's idea. I could not make this film without Jim."

He said Eskimos are proving to be good actors, responsive to direction.

Is this film expected to be released in a year-1-rougher than others in which he has been involved?

"Every film is tough. It's a totally absorbing experience."

Filming has not been easy. The weather warmed faster than expected, making the ice soft. Sometimes filming was done in the early hours of the morning, before the temperature rose.

But if working conditions are difficult, they are partly made up for by the fact that the company has imported a Montreal chef.

Unquestionably, the actors are eating the finest food in the Arctic, including such things as imported strawberries and asparagus tips.

Theatre Feature Times

AT THE PARK — In Color — This feature is a gentle comedy about the life of three people in contemporary Canada. Two of the characters are Canadian and one is American. The film is directed by Arthur Hiller and stars Elliott Gould, Trish Van Devere and Donald Sutherland. Gould portrays a young American draft dodger who has come to Canada to avoid the draft. He is married to a Canadian girl, played by Van Devere, who is pregnant. Sutherland is a Canadian who is married to an American girl. The two couples become friends and the film follows their adventures. Hiller has directed such films as "The Americanization of Emily" and "The Tiger Makes Out." Showtimes: 7:30, 9:30 and 11:30 p.m.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON
Friday, July 6

Aries (March 21-April 19): Sticking near home base saves resources, time, energy, perhaps averts undesirable permanent changes.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Put your main attention to what you're supposed to do. Let others flak in today's turbulent crosscurrents.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Luck seems right with you today despite much scurrying about, shocked information. Gather your clan for a general celebration.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Plan, organize, meet fresh contacts. Tackle the heaviest chore first, get done with it, keep rolling.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 23): Use your most persuasive pitch to promote your plans. It's prudent to avoid people with more authority than yourself.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Group stability is at stake. Basic facts must be clear in the minds of all concerned before action is attempted.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's your turn at bat, so to speak. Pause to gather inner conviction, make it stand—stick with it, and prevail.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Demands on your time and attention are extensive, whether quiet or noisy. Set quotas, fill them, then move on.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be brisk and cheery, don't waste a minute getting to the point. You can clear away an astounding backlog of work.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Believe little of what you see, less of what you hear. Appraise emotional concerns at top priority.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Urgent business details are apt to require inconvenient and extra moves. Go in good faith regardless of reservations.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Provide teamwork, expecting people of great versatility to be quite distracted. You've got quiet persistent backing.

The News Quiz is school review. Are you keeping up with it?

Dropped Stomach Not Bothersome

By G. C. THORTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thorteson: Will you explain to me what a dropped stomach is? I have had colitis off and on for 15 years, and this last month have had a lot of soreness at the edge of my ribs.

My stomach bothers me when I eat spicy foods, salads or raw fruit. My back also pains opposite my stomach when I work a long day. I feel better when I am constipated, which I am not very often.—Mrs. G.S.

I'm not convinced that a dropped stomach is causing your troubles.

A "dropped" stomach is one that sags in the abdomen a bit more than normal. (It usually is found in lean individuals). In itself it is not serious and ordinarily produces no symptoms—which, of course, is why I am not convinced that it is the cause of your difficulties.

In other words, I would begin by studying your colitis without automatically assuming it's a part of "dropped stomach" (or anything to do with it. Rather, I suspect a spastic colon.

As a matter of fact, the sagging of the stomach or other abdominal organs caused more concerns a few years ago than it does now, because so frequently the sagging is incidental and not really related to a patient's distress.

Your reference to feeling better when you are constipated also leaves me with questions. Since you have spells of trouble, then spells of feeling good, I would be inclined to suspect that you are just reacting mentally at times and are not really constipated; but when you have an attack of diarrhea, you perhaps jump to the conclusion that the opposite is "constipation."

That is pretty typical of spastic colitis.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: In 1968 I went to the doctor and he told me what I had was a yeast infection. I tried prescription after prescription and douche after douche until I was tired of it all. I stopped having intercourse with my husband and since then I have never once been bothered with the infection.

My husband would not go to the doctor. He said there was also nothing wrong with him. Is there would this be possible?—Mrs. W.P.

This is something I have heard before, and probably the doctor has told patients this and again, but it never sinks in.

Some of these vaginal infections can exist in both the male and the female. They both must be treated at the same time or they will keep passing infections at all. But the organism still there.

So the wife gets treated, and does the infection, the normally gets it all over again from her husband.

The wise thing to do, of course, is to treat both husband and wife at the same time, and get it over with. But it's amazing how many husbands stay, figure does, that "there's nothing wrong with me."

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I have had couple of years I have had, and I must call, for lack of better, sinus. I get a head full of cots," whether sitting, eating sleeping. I've tried, for a second or perhaps several seconds, Every Breath Up cautious I don't know what I gone on.—J.B.

I'd suggest investigating whether these symptoms from your description) a form of petit mal epilepsy, which frequent forms of that test and it could have been brought about by an injury. A neurologist might perhaps order a "brain wave test" to pin down the diagnosis. You did not give your age. An insufficient supply of lution to the brain might cause this.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gerczak, 71, runs the neighborhood shoemaker is an endangered species. Mr. Gerczak, born and schooled in Budapest, and operator of his own shop in Vancouver for 46 years, says many people are so affluent now that they throw away their shoes instead of getting them shoes repaired. And business is down so much that he says he can shoes for $6 to $10—the month as reselling, he said.

The bidding:

Opening lead—queen of clubs.

Assume you are in six hearts and West leads a club. There is obviously a chance of losing the slam if you misjudge the diamonds and also lose a spade finesse, so all your thoughts must be riveted on way and means of playing the diamonds so as to make the contract even if you misguess the queen.

Fortunately there is a way of playing the hand that makes the slam practically certain. The proper line of play is to ruff the club, draw trumps, ruff dummy's last club, and lead a diamond to the king.

Let's say both sides follow suit and that when you continue with a low diamond from dummy East plays a deuce. low. To insure the slam you simply finesse the jack, not caring one whit whether West shows out or wins with the queen.

If he shows out you take 12 tricks, and if he wins the queen you also have 12 tricks. In the latter case, he will have to return a spade or a club, and either return brings you safely home.

The same result would accrue if it turned out that West had three diamonds to the queen. In that event you would go up with the ace after East showed out, place West on lead with a diamond, and in that way also put him out of business.

Declarer's aim from the start must be to handle the designed not as much to guessing the location of the missing damsel as to making sure that if he misguesses the queen he till has the slam in the bag. He makes the contract always the first considerations.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.

Major Offensive Seen in Vietnam

SAIGON (CP) — Military experts with the international peace supervisory force here are anticipating a generalized lull in fighting between the Viet Cong and South Vietnamese Army units which may last several months.

But most seem convinced that sometime in the next year, the Viet Cong will launch a major offensive aimed at securing at least one deep-water port and a major city.

Sources conversant with international law tend to support this view. They say the Viet Cong must have a port and a large city in order for their claim to sovereignty over parts of South Vietnam to have any credibility.

Experts with the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS), who insist on anonymity, also indicate that a large-scale push by the Viet Cong is most likely to be launched in the southern part of South Vietnam, possibly in the Mekong Delta region.

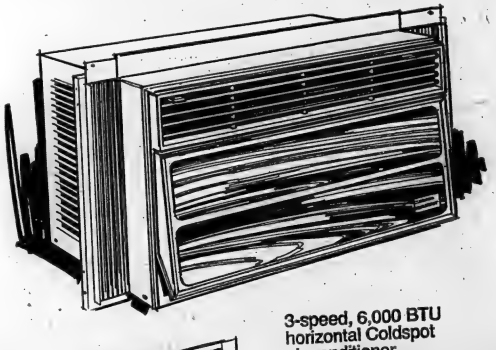
These sources believe North Vietnamese regular forces have established effective control over the three northern provinces of South Vietnam, below the demilitarized zone, and that the Viet Cong, as a result, have begun concentrating their attention on areas farther south.

Talk of a coming offensive is heard everywhere in Saigon. In diplomatic and military circles, it is one of the main topics of conversation.

But while virtually everyone seems convinced that an attack is being planned, there is little consensus so far on when it will take place.

There is a growing belief, however, that the Viet Cong will postpone any major move at least until late summer when the rainy season, which is just starting, has ended. Other sources expect renewed hostilities nearer the end of the year.

Military sources say the Viet Cong seem to be acutely aware that an offensive in the next couple of months might will bring on a resumption of American bombing, while an attack after six months or so may carry less risk of U.S. retaliation.



A major renewal of fighting would cause grave problems for the ICCS, whose main concern would be the evacuation of its field teams and even regional headquarters' staff to safe areas.

Canadian officials, however, seem relatively certain that an evacuation could be accomplished fairly quickly, although not without considerable security risks.

The problem would be an academic one, as far as Canada is concerned, within a few weeks. External Affairs Minister Sharp has announced Canada will withdraw from the truce observer team not later than July 31.

Best Brains Blew It

Changed Ridings Would Bar Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament almost stumbled into a situation in which an election could not be called if the government was defeated, the Commons was told Thursday night.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen said that if electoral boundaries commission proposals had been proclaimed this fall as planned, an election could not be held for one year while preparations were made under the new boundaries.

The law stipulates that an election called after the boundaries are proclaimed must be contested under the new boundaries, he said in discussing a bill to suspend the redistribution of Commons seat.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) took a dim view of the situation: "It is unthinkable under our parliamentary system that there should ever be a time when an election cannot be held for technical reasons."

He said his party will support the bill "to correct an oversight that even the best brains in this House did not detect when we passed the present act in the early 1960s."

At that time, Parliament adopted a formula for redistribution of Commons representation every 10 years. The bill now before the House wipes out the almost-completed work of adjusting electoral boundaries in accordance with the 1971 population census. The work cost more than $1 million.

An election could not be held within a year following proclamation because new returning officers would have to be appointed and new polling divisions created, Mr. MacEachen explained.

As well, political parties would require time to organize under new boundaries and candidates would have to be found in new districts.

He also said members have expressed dissatisfaction with the proposed new boundaries, MPs from six provinces, some of which would lose seats, have filed notices of appeal against the redistribution, while members from three other provinces still have time to do so.

The appeals notwithstanding, redistribution likely would have been proclaimed this fall, said Mr. MacEachen.

Gordon Ritchie (PC—Dauphin) said most members of his party would support the bill, which allows about 10 months to develop a new redistribution formula.

The bill, which stipulates that the boundary proposals will be reinstated if the Parliament fails to produce an acceptable formula, keeps the old constituency boundaries in force for one year after the new ones are proclaimed. This ends the possibility that an election could not be called because of this technicality.

The bill means that an election called in the next 2½ years would be fought under the old boundaries, weighted in favor of sparsely-populated rural areas.

On the basis of the 1971 census, Ontario and British Columbia would have gained three seats and Quebec would have lost two while Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Manitoba and Saskatchewan would have lost one each.

Kidnappers Get $3 Million

Record Ransom Is Paid For Firestone Executive

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A record $3-million ransom is reported to have been paid to the Argentine kidnappers of United States rubber company executive. But there was no word on arrangements for his release.

Reliable sources said the ransom was paid at least three days ago by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. for release of John Thompson, the president of its Argentine subsidiary.

A company spokesman at Firestone headquarters in Cleveland, Ohio, refused to confirm the report of the payment. He said the company will have no comment until Thompson is released.

Thompson, a U.S. citizen born in Chile and a long-time resident of Latin America, was abducted on his way home from work June 18. Armed men in at least five cars intercepted his limousine on a heavily-travelled highway, smashed a window of the bullet-proof car and pulled the businessman out.

The largest ransom previously reported paid in the wave of kidnappings that has been occurring in Argentina for months was $1.8 million. Most of the kidnappers have been left-wing guerrillas collecting funds to finance their revolutionary activities.

Thompson came to Argentina two years ago from Brazil and has worked for Firestone for 25 years. He is the father of four children.

Kidnappers freed an Italian banker and an Argentine lawyer Thursday after ransoms was paid, police sources said. But at least six other kidnapped persons are still missing.

A ransom of $600,000 was reported paid for the lawyer, Jorge Victoriano Grinbaum, who has a large practice in La Plata. Reserves in the Italian community said Mario Baratella, the vice-president of the Bank of Italy and the River Plate, was freed after the leftist guerrillas holding him reduced their demand for $2 million. The amount paid was not known.

Three Die As Butane Explodes

KINGMAN, Ariz. (AP) — "Suddenly the tank exploded and the air was filled 200 feet high with burning material," said Fire Chief Charles Potter after a railway tank car filled with butane gas caught fire and exploded Thursday.

The explosion and fire killed three firemen and injured 76 other persons. Twenty-five were taken to hospital.

The fire blocked highway and railway traffic, destroyed two buildings and damaged three others in this northwest Arizona town.

The butane gas exploded minutes after firemen began fighting a small blaze in the tank car. Flames and metal shards were showered over adjoining buildings, lawns and fields. The blast lifted the tank car a quarter of a mile and dug a crater 10 feet deep.

"All that fire," said Capt. John Howell, "It seemed to last an eternity, but I suppose it lasted 20 seconds."

The accident occurred on a siding of the Santa Fe Railway. Authorities said the butane apparently was being unloaded at the time.

The victims jammed the Mohave County General Hospital. Planes and chartered flew the most seriously burned victims to hospitals at Phoenix.

Mounties' Ship Said Smuggling

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The News says the RCMP is investigating alleged smuggling activities by one of its own patrol boats.

The newspaper says police have searched the homes of some RCMP members in connection with the investigation.

An RCMP spokesman said in an interview today an "internal" investigation was being carried out but, he refused to give details and would not comment on the story in the News.

The story says smuggling activities apparently involve transportation of contraband liquor from the French islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon off Newfoundland's south coast aboard one of two RCMP vessels, the 75-foot Standoff and the 65-foot Acadian.

The vessels are stationed on Newfoundland's south coast mainly to discourage smuggling from St. Pierre.

The News quotes an unnamed RCMP source as saying the investigation is continuing and that its findings will be sent to RCMP headquarters in Ottawa.

Bahamas Independent

NASSAU (Reuter) — A 300-year link with Britain ends next Tuesday when the Bahamas, a sprawling archipelago of 3,000 islands, becomes independent.

Cambodians Savage

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Cambodian government troops beheaded and disemboweled a wounded insurgent prisoner during recent fighting north of Phnom Penh, they ate his liver, an eyewitness said. The ritual act of cannibalism is believed by many superstitious Cambodians to be a source of strength and courage but also is a reminder of the increasing savagery of the country's three year civil war.

Pilot Is Charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Air Force has charged a pilot with refusing to obey an order to fly a B-52 bombing run over Cambodia two weeks ago. An Air Force spokesman said Capt. Donald Dawson, 28, of Danbury, Conn., is accused of refusing to fly a mission June 21.

New Hearing Sought

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — Texaco Canada Ltd. and Scott's Restaurants Co. Ltd. have filed application with the Ontario Supreme Court to prevent a government committee from using evidence presented at a four-day hearing in deciding on a proposal to dump Toronto garbage in Hope Township. Philip Griffin, a lawyer for the two firms, asked the court to order new hearings because one member of the committee, Dr. Charles Martin, a retired physician, was not present for the afternoon session.

Detroit Tops in Murders

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's homicide rate once again leads other United States cities with populations of more than one million. Most homicides arise from arguments, family fights and muggings, police say. Most victims are shot to death. The odds are the victims knew the person who killed them. In the first six months of 1973 there were 343 homicides in Detroit.

Teach Metric System

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto board of education put the official seal Thursday night on teaching the metric system in schools. Grades 1, 2 and 3 will be taught primarily on the metric system from next September.

'Search' for Pair To Start Saturday

SAIGON (AP) — The Viet Cong announced today that a search for two Canadian officers of the Vietnam truce commission, missing for more than a week, will begin Saturday.

U.S. sources have said that the two Canadians are being held in a Viet Cong-controlled zone 35 miles northeast of Saigon and are being well treated.

The Viet Cong delegation to the two-party Joint Military Commission (JMC) in Saigon says it does not know the whereabouts of the two Canadians.

A statement issued by the Viet Cong delegation said that Lt.-Gen. Duncan McAlpine, military commander of the Canadian delegation to the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS), met with deputy delegation chief Col. Bui Thanh Khiet.

The statement said that McAlpine told Khiet that the South Vietnamese delegation chief had granted a guarantee of safety for a Viet Cong team to travel in the area to assist "in finding information about the two missing Canadian officers."

"Col. Khiet approved the Canadian delegation's request for assistance and accepted the Republic of Vietnam's guarantee for safety," the statement said.

Col. Khiet requested that the ICCS chairman, Maj.-Gen. Lorenzo Estergalgos of Hungary, assign members of the commission to accompany the Viet Cong and Canadian teams, the statement said.

Capts. Ian Patten of Toronto and Fletcher Thomson, of Ottawa have been missing since June 28 from their team site at Xuan Loc, 40 miles northeast of Saigon. They were seen the same day talking to a group of armed Viet Cong 10 miles west of Xuan Loc.

The Canadian delegation has insisted that they were on an ICCS "flag-showing" mission. The Viet Cong delegation in Saigon maintains it is not responsible for the men, that they were not on official ICCS business, had no clearance to travel in contested zones and had no safety guarantees in advance.

Reports reaching U.S. sources agree that the two men were not on ICCS business at the time they strayed into the Viet Cong zone. These U.S. sources say the officers are being well fed and cared for.

Queen Is Home

LONDON (CP) — The Queen and Prince Philip arrived back in London today after their 10-day Canadian tour which has been seen here as a bigger success than expected.

200 Dumb Beagle Pups Sought to Test Pollution

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A congressional critic of the Pentagon charged today that some of the air force wants 200 beagle puppies whose voice boxes have been removed for gas experiments.

Les Aspin (Dem. Wis.) said he has written the secretary of the air force strongly protesting plans to buy 200 mute puppies for experimentation with gases.

"I realize that this may not be one of the most pressing matters of national defence," Aspin said, "but there are literally thousands of dog lovers like myself who won't stand quietly by while it happens."

He said the air force has advertised for 200 beagle puppies that will be used for testing gas.

"I am not convinced myself that the poison-gas experiments are all that crucial," Aspin said. "But if they are, is it necessary to use young dogs with their vocal cords cut out?"

At the defence department, an air force spokesman said use of the dogs is in keeping with dog-use policies set by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to animal.

He said the testing is for environmental pollution studies.

The spokesman said the dogs would be used to test the environmental impact of aviation-related pollutants, such as fuel.

He said removal of barking ability is required to eliminate the noise 200 dogs would make in the confines of a laboratory. The simple operation is painless, the spokesman said.

Aspin's office, however, said the dog had to be made mute "so they wouldn't scream and cry in pain" and disturb the "quiet of the laboratory."

Malta Says Big Powers 'Bare Ugly Teeth'

Canada Backs Right of Mediterranean States to Parley Voice

HELSINKI (CP) — Prime Minister Dom Mintoff of Malta warned the European security conference today that it must urgently tackle the problems of war and peace in the Mediterranean if it wants to avoid "being nothing more than the official multilateral rubber stamp of the super-powers."

No security and co-operation in Central Europe is possible without some action by the conference "to create an atmosphere for the preconditions of detente in the Mediterranean," said Mintoff, who has been battling here for the right of Algeria and Tunisia to address the Helsinki meeting. The Maltese bid has been buried for days in a subcommittee.

Mintoff cited such factors as Europe's dependence on North African oil as reasons why the conference should take an interest in Mediterranean problems.

Canada and other conference states agreed that Mediterranean countries should enjoy the right to have their views noted by the meeting.

But External Minister Mitchell Sharp said today this should take the form of written statements rather than personal appearances.

Canada also says the right should be given to all Mediterranean states expressing an interest in putting their views to the conference.

Israel as well as Algeria and Tunisia have expressed such an interest but Malta rejected the idea of Israeli representation.

Mintoff pictured the U.S. and Russia shaking hands across Central Europe while they "bare their ugly teeth in the blue Mediterranean Sea."

The first phase of the 35-nation conference is expected to end Saturday after four days of speeches by foreign ministers.

Switzerland has proposed that the second phase, that of working committees to thrash out agreements between the two halves of Europe, begin Sept. 18 in Geneva. The Soviet Union wants an earlier opening date.

The main issues so far are those that emerged during the preliminary negotiations that made arrangements for the foreign ministers' conference: the Soviet bloc's demand for Western recognition of the post-war borders in Eastern Europe and the Western drive for freer movement of people, information and ideas between East and West.

Cartoonists Agree

Dief's Face Treasure

TORONTO (CP) — It's not often that John Diefenbaker publicly admits that he has "a face like a monkey."

But the former prime minister did so at a recent convention in Ottawa of political cartoonists from Canada and the United States.

Mr. Diefenbaker was one of numerous political figures who dropped in on the Association of American Editorial Cartoonists' convention.

Others included Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau; Robert Stanfield, national Progressive Conservative leader; David Lewis, national New Democratic Party leader; External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and Finance Minister John Turner.

Hartley Steward of The Star, who attended the convention, said the politicians found time to mingle with the 180 cartoonists at Hogan's Alley ago to them. Politicians, no doubt, are aware of the influence such cartoonists have.

Mr. Diefenbaker was one of the biggest draws.

One U. S. cartoonist said about the former prime minister's face:

"If I had had a face like that to draw, I'd be the most famous cartoonist in the States. He's perfect."

Mr. Diefenbaker told the cartoonists he always has been a popular subject with them "because I'm not a pace like a cockatoo."

The problem of numerous cruel cartoons, Mr. Diefenbaker showed no bitterness. Instead, he praised editorial cartoons as being important and said he hoped they'd be around for a long time as a subject for them.

Mr. Stanfield drew a standing ovation from the cartoonists with his comments.

"I must connect you on your impartiality," he said. "I realize that you get no more pleasure out of carving up one than you would get out of carving out your mother. It's only that no one will pay you to carve up your mother."

He chided the cartoonists for drawing him with one drooping eyelid.

"I had that corrected almost a year ago," he said.

"For those of you interested in symmetry, I had my other eyelid lowered a month."

But he added he was glad that fewer cartoonists now than in the past were using underwear in their drawings of him.

"I was beginning to worry that underwear would be cheapened by over-exposure. I like to tell people who dwell on such things to keep their traps shut."

Members of Mr. Stanfield's family operate an underwear manufacturing business in Truro, N.S.

Mr. Lewis challenged the cartoonists to use as a subject a letter he recently had seen from a young woman who was claiming unemployment insurance for a period of work while having a baby.

The Unemployment Insurance Commission had written her to ask where her confinement had taken place and how long it had lasted.

Obviously unsure of the mentality of the commissioner, the woman had written: "It took place behind the bar."

Flying Undertaker

Oregon Aviator Scatters Ashes

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Out beyond the fog-shrouded Oregon coast, Mike Todd banks his single-engine Cessna, cranks open a wage window and a gentleman from Indiana is laid to his final rest.

Todd's aerial crematory ashes whip out of a gabardine sack through the 120 mile-an-hour wind-stream and pelt the fuselage like hailstones, then drift down through the brilliant mackerel-sky clouds to the Pacific.

Then Todd opens a color photograph of the drop site and begins the 60-mile flight back to Portland.

"The relatives like to have a picture," he said. "It sort of ties up all the loose ends, makes everything complete. I try to do it off some well-known scenic point that they'll recognize if they ever get a color back and visit it."

Todd scatters human remains at a set fee of $35. The price includes the color photo and a card detailing the time and place of the drop.

He'll take family members along at a cut-rate cost, but doesn't like to because of the chance of an emotional scene in the tiny plane.

And he'll provide an in-flight religious service, also at cost, because "I know some ministers who love to fly."

Todd scatters about 15 to 20 times a month, usually over the Pacific but occasionally, at the family's request, over such landmarks as Oregon's 11,235-foot Mount Hood.

"The law here considers a cremated body to be in its final state and the buyer owns whatever it wants with the ashes," said Hugo Elongren, executive secretary of the Oregon Funeral Directors Association.

Todd receives ashes, parcel post, from mortuaries all over the country, sometimes ten or three times a day, but says he never handles more than one shipment per flight. "I consider that I'm doing business economically when I carry a particular time. That's the way my customers want it and that's the way I do it."

Todd, 38, gave up an Army career years ago and began earning a living air-taxiing bodies for mortuaries, which still constitutes the bulk of his business.

Baby Smuggled Into U.S. Hid In Handbag

MIAMI (AP) — A Cuban exile says she smuggled her baby into the United States from Spain last month so the child could "live in a free country." But customs officials say the act could result in jail for the aunt and deportation for the baby.

Xiomara Aguilera said Thursday the plan was devised while she was visiting her sister in Spain last month. She said she brought 6½-pound Desiree Beblier back from Madrid June 18 in a canvas handbag after paying Iberia Airlines $85 in excess baggage charges for the baby and her belongings.

"I took her back in the bag to the rest room many times to change her and feed her," Miss Aguilera said.

Miss Aguilera told customs agents she had smuggled the baby after being advised to do so by a neighborhood contact.

Dogs Beware

PICTON — A petition signed by 12 Picton residents to protest dogs barking at night has spurred council to action on a curbing the problem.

Mayor H. S. McFarland said the petition had been presented at a July 3 meeting with sympathy with persons complaining that they could not sleep because of barking dogs.

Town solicitor Jack Ward has been instructed to prepare a by-law dealing with noise disturbance created by dogs or other household pets.

Africa's Art Treasures Still Being Plundered

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Most of Africa's cultural treasures were plundered in colonial days but the few left, covers still support a booming trade in stolen art objects.

Museums and private collectors in Europe and the United States hold large exhibitions of African artifacts while museums in Africa are virtually bare.

"Most are replicas," explained a guide at the ancient museum of Abomey in northern Dahomey. He pointed to dusty tapestries on the wall. "All the originals were taken to Paris years ago."

Most of the exhibits at the tiny museum of Benin, Nigeria, once the centre of a great empire famous for its work in bronze, are replicas. Many of the originals are in London.

And the steady flow of art objects out of Africa continues.

Traders commonly sneak across Africa's disputed and largely open borders with rare wood carvings.

African youths hang out on vacation from schools in London or Paris sometimes go to the classes with stolen village artifact.

At many border posts, customs guards still turn a blind eye, for a consideration, as precious art goes by.

Diplomats, violating their special immunity, send home thousands of dollars worth of art objects in shipments never checked by customs.

Soaring demand in the United State and Europe for genuine African art objects has resulted in widespread fraud.

Collectors report that village-born busy men make fortunes for months to give the appearance of age. Others roast masks in efforts to convince buyers that they were used in dances around a village fire.

Want to see an ancient sword my grandfather once used?" a trader in Mali asked a tourist.

The tourist didn't buy. Later he learned that hundreds of bronze swords are made from parts of junked cars.

The exodus of rare art objects has caused African officials and control measures are in force.

"We officially prohibit the legitimate export of art objects," says Kenneth Bonkoni, head of Nigeria's National Antiquities Commission in Lagos. "But we object go if we have the original work. If we do not have it, we buy the copy and the foreign collector seeking to take it away."

In one recent incident, a man attempted to sneak art objects out of Nigeria in a dug canoe. Loading the fake boat with artifacts, he slipped across the Lagos lagoon to the island where a waiting ship bound for Europe.

Police, alerted, on a tip, dashed across in pursuit in a speedboat. The man was caught just before boarding. He was later allowed to leave but without his loot.

A year ago, Nigerian border guards seized art objects worth nearly $2 million from foreigners at the Dahomey border post. The case is still before the Nigerian courts.

Twelve traditional statues and effigies from the 16th century were reported stolen more recently from the palace of a 19th century chief near Benin in Nigeria's Midwest State.

Baby Crocodile Found In Mail

SYDNEY (AP) — A baby crocodile was found in a mail bag at Sydney's General Post Office Thursday.

Postal officials said the crocodile, about 18 inches long, was found in a bag of mail from Darwin, in the Northern Territory.

Officials said the crocodile was alive and apparently unharmed.

Cobourg's Old Hall Renovated

COBOURG, Oct. (CP) — The red plush carpet on which the Queen walked during her visit to Victoria Hall in Cobourg June 28 is to play a useful role in the hall in the years ahead.

It has been donated to be laid in the courthouse and judges' chambers in the renovated hall.

Restoration of the historic municipal building, built in 1860, is under way at an estimated cost of $1.74 million.

John Taylor, executive director of the Society for the Restoration of Victoria Hall, explained the circumstances.

"In January, 1971, it was announced that Victoria Hall had been examined by structural engineers and would either have to be demolished or $200,000 found to shore it up. For a town of 11,000 people that's a lot of money.

"Nevertheless the town council decided that something should be done to try to save the hall, with its Old Ballot Box courthouse and opera house on the second floor, and reformed the society."

"We've had two Local Initiatives Program grants from the government, $20,000 in 1972 and $80,000 in 1973. The money enabled us to clear away the haphazard heating, plumbing and wiring that was added over the years inside the stone walls.

"Now we are in the process of fund -raising for the actual restoration work. Large companies have donated money and private individuals from all over Canada, the United States, Europe, Australia and Japan have sent us money.

"We are selling special Weekend dinner tickets at $22.50 each with Victoria Hall on the front. So far we have raised in only 500 of these tankards were made, they will increase in value over the years—and half of them already have been spoken for.

The total budget for restoration, set in 1971, is $1.74 million. Provided all goes well and no major strikes, we'll make it within the budget," Mr. Taylor said.

Plans are to reopen the hall in 1975. The organization hopes that Prince Charles will perform the opening ceremonies, as his predecessor as Prince of Wales did in 1860.

Pool Table Furnishes Courtroom Down North

LA RONGE, Sask. (CP) — For Judge Robert Francis, a pool table in the courtroom is just another fact of life.

Since he was appointed a provincial judge last year, Judge Francis' territory has included the entire northern half of Saskatchewan—from La Ronge, north of Prince Albert, to Fort Smith in the Northwest Territories border.

Judge Francis, a former Saskatoon lawyer, has thrown out much of the formality of the traditional courtroom. A church basement is used as a courtroom with a pool table and unattended children wandering aimlessly about could provide quite a contrast to a judge with a long black robe.

"I don't wear a gown so people will feel more at ease."

He holds court in 16 communities, most of them little more than landing strips for small aircraft. "I even have to stoke the fire at some places."

The different set of values among the native population in the far-flung North often results in different interpretation of the law.

A common crime in the North requiring judicial interpretation is breaking and entering. Native people will often "just use someone's house" without stealing or causing damage.

Judge Francis says that if natives "break and enter" another native's house, chances of charges being laid are lessened because no one involved may feel a crime has been committed". . . You must treat break and enter cases differently here than you would in the south."

The judge says he prefers giving fines to sending people to jail for offences such as liquor infractions. "And I don't believe in sending people to jail for not paying a fine."

He isn't afraid to try innovative approaches to get an insight into what it feels like to sit on the other side of the bench.

Last summer he participated in a mock trial conducted in Cree by native court workers in which he was prosecutor, then a police magistrate's court where he was charged with drunkenness, and finally a coroner's inquest on the subsequent death of the accused.

Judge Francis, who was charged with drunkenness, said that even though he was familiar with courtroom procedure "I didn't understand what was going on or being said . . ."

"Imagine how a person who had never been in a courtroom must feel . . . This is also a lonely frustrating."

Fishing Industry Expands in Cuba

CAIBARIEN, Cuba (Reuter) — Cuba's rapidly expanding fishing industry has become a major source of foreign currency and the Caribbean island now is second after Australia in lobster exports.

At the same time, living and working conditions in the island's fishing ports have changed dramatically with the nationalisation of the fishing industry, the setting up of canning and processing factories and the modernisation of the fleet.

When Fidel Castro's guerrillas toppled the dictatorship of Fulgencio Batista in January, 1959, 10,000 people lived off the sea, operating along the coast with an estimated 2,500 small wooden boats.

A good year would provide a total catch of 21,000 tons of fish, mostly consumed in the coastal villages. Between 20 and 40 bigger vessels would venture out to the Gulf of Mexico to catch better quality fish destined for Havana's top restaurants.

Fishermen lived a precarious existence, never knowing if they would be able to sell their catch.

Caibarien, a sleepy village of mainly wooden houses on the northern coast of central Las Villas province, is one of the ports which best illustrates the changes.

Through a co-operative scheme, Caibarien's fishermen were first provided with engines for their craft and later, when the boats were no longer, seaworthy, they were encouraged to operate from bigger vessels provided by the state.

The state guaranteed to buy the total of their catch at fixed prices and payed each a salary.

These measures were taken following the nationalisation of the fishing industry in 1962.

When the state took over the official fleet consisted of five tuna vessels boats from Japan and 40 Polish trawlers. It now boats more than 1,200 vessels which catch more than 100,000 tons of fish a year.

Last year's catch reached a record 140,000 tons, with the result that fish is now of the few foods which is no longer rationed.

By 1975, the Cuban fishing fleet should be increased by a further 1,000 shrimp, lobster and tuna boats. Smaller craft are also being built in several of Cuba's shipyards, including that of Caibarien.

Refrigeration facilities have been installed in many coastal towns, the latest addition being a huge freezer with room for 6,000 tons of frozen food which was opened late last year in Santiago, Cuba's second-largest city.

In Caibarien, a lobster processing factory equipped by Denmark, British and Japan was inaugurated recently. It is capable of producing five tons of pre-cooked lobsters a day and employs 150 persons.

The face of Caibarien is rapidly changing. Many fishermen have moved out of wooden houses near the sea to the ciudad pesquera or fishing city, a new district of modern apartment blocks and houses which are given to those living in the worst conditions.

These new districts are being built by the fishermen themselves. They devote part of the five days of rest they get after spending 10 days at sea to work on construction sites.

ALLERGENS ARE AN AIRBORNE MENACE

For many people with rhinogies, just the thought of the outdoors can bring on a feeling of dread. Airborne pollen can mean hours of suffering. To reduce exposure to allergens here are a few helpful hints.

Humid weather and evenings are usually a more comfortable time as a great many plants discharge their pollen in the morning and on dry days. Avoid wash that is hung outside as damp materials will trap pollens. Outside pets will often carry pollen in their coats. If, in spite of all precautions, an allergic reaction occurs, remember that there are numerous medicines available that can offer relief.

Confused Rainbow Grabbed in Moira

Big-time trout fishing may be on the way back in the Moira River.

For the second time in a week, a species of the popular game fish — unseen in the Moira for years — was caught near Lazier's Dam.

An official from the ministry of natural resources Thursday confirmed the 1½-lb. trout was a rainbow.

The specimen was caught Wednesday afternoon by David Buckles, a 15 - year - old Rickehill Road resident who had been hunting for carp with friends.

He said he grabbed the fish with his bare hands after younger boys, spotting it in a six-inch pool 50 yards below the dam, stunned it with a kick.

"It was nearly dead when I caught it," he said.

Last week, Ray LaGuff of Belleville brought in what was believed to be a speckled trout while fishing north of the dam. Only 12-inches long, it, too, would be a species rarely found in the river.

Frank Taylor, fisheries management officer who identified the rainbow, said he was not surprised to come across the fish so far upstream.

"The rainbow is a great fish to ramble," he said.

Another expert noted that rainbows, found along with other trout species in cold water streams west of Belleville, have not tested Moira fishermen for some time.

"The Moira hasn't been trout water since the middle of the last century," said Jack Christie, director of Glenora Fisheries.

He said other types of fish, particularly spiake and Pacific salmon, were flourishing in Ontario rivers and streams since officials began stocking Lake Ontario with new varietie in recent years.

Air Search Continues

TRENTON — More than 20 men and three aircraft from Canadian Forces Base Trenton are involved in the search for a downed helicopter missing in northern Quebec since last Monday evening.

Edward Swearingen, an employee of Trans Quebec Helicopter, with three passengers, embarked on a "routine" 600-mile surveying trip Monday morning but failed to return on schedule that evening. An airbase spokesman said the aircraft was last recorded at a checkpoint 145 miles from its point of departure on the St. James River, near James Bay, EST. Trenton, once contacted, immediately despatched tow 424 Squadron twin Otters and a 436 Squadron Hercules to take part in air rescue procedures.

Four extra Otter crews will make the trip so planes may be utilized completely during daylight hours. A spokesman for the Air Rescue Unit said this morning there had been no sightings yet and that if necessary 15 planes could be mobilized to scour the area.

The search continues today with Captain Jim Lowe of Belleville named as search master for Armed Forces participation.

Scrap Fire Stubborn

POINT PETRE — Picton firefighters were called to Concession 4 near Point Petre in Athol township yesterday morning when flames broke out in a scrap head adjacent to a farm field.

For approximately 90 minutes they fought flames that burned about 1½ acres of grass. No buildings were nearby.

A spokesman for the fire department said it is believed the fire may have started as old parts were being cut from scrap metal in the field. The property is owned by Allan O'Toole.

Car Taken, Burns In Mishap

TWEED — Police today were still seeking the driver of an automobile — taken without the owner's consent — which crashed and burned in a field southeast of here last night.

The small 1969 imported vehicle went out of control on Hungerford township's 11th concession, crashed through a fence, rolled over and caught fire in a field.

Tweed volunteer firemen were called but the car was destroyed by fire. Police are still pondering the possibility the driver may have been injured.

The car was owned by Terrance Thomas of Toronto. Police said Mr. Terrance was visiting the farm of Douglas Bailey, RR2, Roslin, when the vehicle was taken.

Centre Gets Donations

DESERONTO — Donations for this town's medical centre continue to be received by the local Lions Club which organized the project.

Recent donors include the ladies auxiliary of the town's Royal Canadian Legion branch whose president, Mrs. Russell Hill, presented the Lions with $250.

The Legion branch has donated $500 to the centre.

Other recent donors included St. Mark's church which subscribed $75.

Fish Tale

David Buckles, 15, holds 1½lb. rainbow trout he caught with his bare hands Wednesday in the Moira River below Lazier's Dam. It's the first reported incidence of rainbow in the Moira in years. Looking on are David's friends, Stephen Wilson, left, and Archie Hughes, both 15, who helped land the beauty.

For Show Birds

Fuss Makes Fine Feathers

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

ELMBROOK — Elmbrook resident James Gannon frankly admits he's chicken in his neighborhood.

"Even if he were to alarmly a flat denial, the clucking and crowing noises from his 125 roosters and hens would serve as a giveaway.

Mr. Gannon specializes in raising unusual breeds of poultry and has 13 different varieties of chickens in his coops. Among these are colorfully named breeds such as Silver Spangled Hamburg, Bearded Buff Laced Polish, Black Giants and Silver Grey Dorkings.

An exhibitor at Prince Edward County's annual fall fair, Mr. Gannon finds nothing unusual in giving white hens a bath prior to the big show. The birds don't appreciate this shower but they emerge with brightened plumage suited to their status as show girls.

The chicken and roosters kept at the Gannon farm house have been obtained, for the most part, in eastern Ontario.

The attractive varieties raised by Mr. Gannon are bred for feather color and are not noted as top laying hens.

One of the handsomest birds contending for rank of the roost in the Gannon coops is a huge Black Giant rooster who tamely nestles in his owner's arms and crows.

Mr. Gannon is familiar with many of the poultry show breeds and observes that Belleville this year will be the host for the annual exhibition presented by the Canadian Hamburg Club.

Self-serve Gas Bar Proposed

Self-serve gas bars are widely used throughout the United States, but Marmora council has deferred a decision on whether such an operation will be allowed in the village.

Bill Baker, Becker Milk Company representative, has made an application for a self-serve automatic gas station in Marmora but decision has been deferred until more information can be secured from the fire marshal's office.

Bert Gray, chairman of the Marmora fire and water committee, said the dangers of self-serve gas stations had been discussed at a recent Mutual Aid meeting and that Marmora's decision to allow or disallow such a facility would be setting a pattern for the whole county.

Even with council assent, the Baker application would have to be approved by the Department of Energy and Resources.

Rooster at Rest

James Gannon with Black Giant rooster, which despite formidable appearance, nestles like a pet and crows in his arms. It's only one of various varieties he exhibits at Prince Edward County's annual fair. His careful grooming can include baths for some show species.

Y Asks Mortgage Relief

Because Belleville's United Community Services would not sanction a YMCA fund drive this spring, the Y has considered the decision asking for more than $6,000 to pay the interest on a building loan hoped to be written-off by the fund drive.

With more than $80,000 remaining on the mortgage, the Y contends because the UCS wouldn't allow a campaign this spring the unpaid balance will grow by $6,400 in interest by February or March when the UCS would consent to a campaign.

While members of the board described the situation as "academic, there was simply no money to work with," Eleanor Sisson sympathized with the Y saying, "we've inflicted the interest upon them by not allowing the fund drive."

The UCS would not consider a money campaign at this point, fearing it would interfere with the United Appeal campaign in the fall. Rather, they agreed to an independent Y campaign following the United Way.

A small faction of the board showed some leaning to investigate whether the UCS had the money to give out, though most were doubtful.

Hugh Pepper cautioned board members the Y president, Dr. Douglas Horne's request should be handled with public relations in mind or the board would find itself back in the same situation of poor communications as last fall when the Y was ejected from the United Way.

It was moved that a letter and a telephone call be made to the Y acknowledging the request and that the UCS would like to send a committee to meet with the Y to fully discuss the situation.

Mr. Pepper cautioned the board the Y "will need a lot of money next year," and hinted the Y could leave the appeal in search of necessary funds.

He said it could come down to a question of "where the Y could get the most money."

UCS executive director Isidore Cooperman, asked to comment on the situation, told the board the UCS had no responsibility to pay the interest, being a capital expenditure. The UCS only provides operating budgets.

Replying to Mr. Pepper's warning of the Y money search, Mr. Cooperman said the Y could not leave this fall, already having signed a contract to participate in this year's appeal.

No date was set for the meeting with the Y but the board prepared itself to call a special meeting following the Y talks to come to some final decision.

Takes Hard Work

Closeted as most of us are in mainly circumscribed lives, the chance to live vicarious thrill to be gained by reading of the exploits of those who really get-away-from-it-all.

A reading of The Christian Science Monitor invariably presents a broad spectrum of offbeat activity and individual accomplishment: Los Angeles professional photographer Roger Bath for instance and his wife Betty, an electronics firm supervisor, who now have their second home-built ocean-going yacht — this one with a ferrocement hull — to continue the travels they have been making to the islands of the South Pacific and to New Zealand.

If we are envious, it must be remembered also that the Baths worked evenings and weekends for many months to build the vessels. Hard reward though! As for the hard work involved we are reminded of some observations of South African golfer Gary Player. Winner of many tournaments around the world he said once that most people envious of his and others' successes are not prepared to make the considerable effort that reaching the top in any field entails.

Another piece in The Monitor tells of the travels of British mystery writer Hammond Innes, sailing his own boat or jetting off to some romantic corner of the globe in search of new background for his stories.

Another article tells of two young men who, finding Los Angeles "getting to be too much," opened a hamburger establishment in a narrow winding street of a 19th century fishing village on the French Riviera. Peter Launder and Philip Miller run their Burger Bistro with the help of an attractive young woman with the beguiling name of Nola Quinn.

"The Americanization of Europe," writer Jeffrey Robinson calls it, and if that upsets some of us (envy again), it is also a lesson to Canadians who want to do something more than just dream. Be warned though, the government red tape this enterprising trio encountered seemed "never-ending."

Want to get away from it all then? We think of another pair of young west coast Americans who established a successful hotel business on the island of Moorea, close to Tahiti.

Or want to just stay at home and potter round the garden? The Monitor (incidentally, another article tells of ways of helping to finance a trip) reports from Berkeley, Calif. on the growth of curbside gardens as people react against high food prices — and, as one worthy said, "to get a little of the soil without having city living behind and moving to the country."

A Great Musician

With the death of Karel Ancerl, the international music community has lost one of its greatest luminaries.

For the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, whose position it was lent to have Ancerl as its conductor, the Czech-born musician's passing is a serious loss. The orchestra is now leaderless, with a big program ahead as well as a long tour next spring which is now placed in jeopardy.

Conductors are a rare breed and Ancerl was one of the most notable. His personal life represented triumph over adversity, in the classic tradition of those for whom war and persecution have brought grief and hardship yet have remained unbroken in spirit and in devotion to family and profession.

Ancerl's parents, his first wife and child all died in concentration camps and, imprisoned himself by the Nazis, the musician's own health suffered. He came to Toronto in 1968, following the Communist takeover in Czechoslovakia where he had been conductor of the Czech Philharmonic, and leaves his second wife and two sons.

Tennis Sneads

It is good to see young Canadians shedding their rather disdainful attitude toward tennis and discovering what the rest of the world already knows, that here is one of the most interesting and enjoyable of competitive sports.

We see that a court has been made available in Brighton and in Frankford they are talking about the need there. Meanwhile in Trenton and Quinte's top young women players, Jane O'Hara, is conducting clinics and playing challenge matches against the best of the local players.

It is clear the "Anyone for Tennis" attitude is fading and the game is being accepted for what it is, one of the top sporting and recreational activities of the day.

PM Gave It His Blessing

More on That Cosy Overseas Jaunt for Students

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The wild way the federal government spends money never ceases to amaze freshmen parliamentarians who see it for the first time.

Joe Clarke, who was around Ottawa before the last election as one of Conservative Leader Stanfield's aides, should have been more than ordinarily familiar with the government's massive tax-and-spend policy.

The late great C. D. Howe long the Liberal "Minister of Everything," used to joke about what the government calls "the spending process," calling it with his Connecticut Yankee nexus "just the business of taxing and taxing, spending and spending, electing and electing."

But even with his close-up look in Mr. Stanfield's office at the way the administration spends a thousand ways the taxpayers never hear about, Mr. Clarke since his election as Conservative MP for Rocky Mountain, has found himself amazed.

He has been busy in the Commons Committee that has been trying to get to the bottom of the Secretary of State's $2,168,00 (Jeunesse Canada Monde) program on which 260 Canadian students are traveling to five countries abroad for six months of "self development."

The program was dreamed up by Jacques Hebert of Montreal, a close friend of Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mr. Hebert submitted it to if skeptical, and - so go the leaks from the department - a reluctant State Secretary.

But after Mr. Trudeau "intervened," as he put it - Mr. Faulkner says they "talked" - the program was accepted.

The 260 students were off overseas at some $8,000 per head and each will return with a foreign student guest for a three month Canadian visit.

What bothered the committee was that the reason or justification for the program, and secondly the question of who got to go.

It was not another of those foreign aid flings better done in reverse, Robert Simond,director of Travel and Exchange in the State Secretary's office, assured the committee.

No indeed, it was a "social development" thing, designed to "help young Canadians (the fortunate 260) to develop," he explained.

How was the selection of the 240 world travellers made, the committee asked.

It could talk about is for the whole afternoon," parred Mr. Simond. "It is supposed to be a perfect replica of the Canadian population."

Well, they did not ship back 8 all afternoon - there was n.4 time - but they took another run at it the next day.

And got nowhere.

If "personal development" of the lucky 240 was the name of the $2,168,00 overseas travel game - courtesy of the taxpayers - "how," asked Joe Clarke, "do you decide who is and who is not going to get the grant ..."

A straight question that. But you should read the "answers" set out in two baffling ring-around-the-rosy pages of the committee's printed report.

Under Secretary of State Jean Poucher was answering the questions and he led the committee down the garden path of Opportunities for Youth, the Canada Council, Contact Canada, Katimavik and Wings and other government give away programs you maybe never knew existed.

Mr. Boucher seemed to be spouting the definition of grants for Canada Council - which he previously headed - with Jeanne-Canada Monde.

It was, he revealed, a "system of adjudication, which is a peer system which is hardly challenged."

It is incestuous," blurted out Mark Rose, New Democratic MP for Fraser Valley West.

"It is," agreed Mr. Boucher, "but it is a pretty wide family."

Those people who receive the grants approve other people's grants," pursued Mr. Rose.

In stepped Joe Clarke.

"I came down here knowing less than most new MPs about what goes on in the Secretary of State.

"But I am constantly amazed when I receive an improbable letter about how my constituents to see if there is money to send somebody to Europe, and find out that, by God, there is a program to send somebody there. Usually the people are not the ones who get to go, but that is not the point here."

How, he asked, when MPs "do not even know these things exist can you be sure there is not incest (in the grants programs) as well as great public waste?"

Well-he might ask. And by the way the committee evidence "really" will be a long time getting a sense-making answer.

Vacations: More Canadians Staying at Home

Here it is summer. And for the Canadian travel and catering industries. It promises to be a record-breaking holiday season.

For the travelling public, it has become necessary this summer to make holiday plans far in advance, to be willing to compromise a little, and--surprise!--to pay more.

What's so different about the summer of '73?

—Not since 1967 have there been so many crowd-pleasing celebrations to attract tourists to particular provinces, regions or communities. Public attention has been focused on some of them in the most forceful way possible--a royal visit, with its surfeit of media coverage.

—Good old Air Canada (which doesn't rush into things) has at last discovered international fares. These all-inclusive travel "packages" have revolutionized the tourist industry in Europe, and have long been used successfully in the United States. Canadian holidayers have taken to them like ducks to water since eight-in-30-day off-peak fares that few seats remain unsold on domestic flights for the next several weeks.

—Travel to Europe has levelled off this year, a sharp break from the usual pattern of big year-to-year increases. More Canadians have decided to see Canada, as have more Americans who in previous years might have flown overseas.

One factor keeping North Americans in North America has been the sheer growth of tourism in Europe. The congestion in Piccadilly, the Champs Elysees and other tourist haunts frequently underlies at peak periods.

A second factor is the red tape that now surrounds charter flying, which in recent years had become the European-bound Canadian's favorite mode of travel. The new restrictions have indeed stamped out the abuses that used to beset the gullible and the credulous, but they have resulted in higher fares and a rigid system of reservations completely foreign to Canadians' preferences.

The most crucial factor of all, though, is the drastic decline in the value of the dollar in relation to most overseas currencies. During May and June, the Canadian and U.S. dollars lost one-sixth of their value in terms of the high-flying West German mark.

The shrinking dollar and the steady inflation in the price of travel services alerted have combined to put European travel beyond the reach of large numbers of Canadians who don't care to rough it when they vacation.

However, if you still count on doing your mid-distance travelling this holiday season and haven't made adequate arrangements, don't despair. Consider the so-called packages, which include transportation, accommodation, some meals and a bit of sightseeing, all for one price.

You pay for the seller's time and trouble in assembling the various components of the package, but you'll probably make a corresponding saving through his ability to book space in volume.

New Era in East-West Relations

By JOHN HARBRON

Was it Sir Winston Churchill who said the Kremlin is an enigma wrapped in a mystery? No matter. Today perhaps more than ever before, we should again wonder if that statement still is true.

When it was made in the 1940s, we in the West imagined the Russian motive for almost any move in their foreign policy, could be seen with clarity and suspicion. Basically, it said, the Kremlin's line was offence, even when defence and pacification appeared to be their policy.

The "world peace movement" of the early 1950s with its origins in the U.S.S.R., came close to the Korean War. Would it lull us into the illusions of the 1930s that we can make peace with dictators and not fight again as we had done in Korea?

Today after much more summitry, open clowning between Khrushchev and Nixon in the early 1960s, Brezhnev and the same Nixon in the early 1970s, we imagine we possess the same clarity about Soviet foreign policy. The words this time are comprehension and permanent peace.

No tricky "peace movement," no major effort at subversion, no spy plane problems and no apparent threats of war between the nuclear powers. U.S.-Soviet co-operation, economic, technical and political was far down the line as we can see.

Is it? Do we have more prescience than Russian watchdogs than we did 20 years ago when we deeply suspected each other? Has Mr. Khrushchev's boast that "we will bury you" been buried in the Kremlin?

Admittedly it's hard to tell when the Chase Manhattan Bank has just opened its first Moscow branch, when Russian ocean liners after 25 years of calumny about Soviet spy ships in New York are docking with eager American tourists off by sea to Leningrad.

There is a secret scenario for Brezhnev to hail America as the friend of us into a passive view of Soviet intentions, which might it include?

First, stimulate American military withdrawal in strength from Western Europe, a move which if made would largely destroy NATO's effectiveness. Second, persuade the Americans through the fear of nuclear war to de-escalate her military and weapons establishment enough to give parity with the U.S.S.R. where that does not now exist.

Third, convince the Americans that the fish factory fleets in the oceans of the world so-

Monarchy Is Non-Partisan

Peterborough Examiner

Western leaders have been having a bad time lately, what with the Watergate scandal to depress Richard Nixon and a sex scandal to intrigue the British. Closer to home, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has had a trying precariously through the great love affair of the New Democrats since the last election, and Premier William Davis has had his troubles with Queen over the new Hydro building, regional government and garbage disposal.

It is the fate of political leaders to be criticized and sometimes vilified when things should be going plenty. And they can be damned into the top quarters of hot water by the misdeeds of their associates.

Trouble of one kind or another is almost a natural state of affairs for those elevated to office, they are at the centre of power, subjected to great pressures from colleagues or outsiders who want to help them use - or misuse - their power.

Although it is not always deserved, most leaders wind up slightly tarnished by the public eye after they have been in office for awhile.

That is why it is pleasant in these days of summer to forget the political temporarily and become a visitor rather than a participant in them, a non-political observer rather than a politician.

Queen Elizabeth II may be the subject of controversy between royalists and republicans within the Commonwealth countries she is always over the office, not the person.

Do we need a monarchy or don't we? Instead of going into the pros and constitutional debate over that one, ask some of the thousands who have come to see or to catch a glimpse of the Queen these days. They might tell you quite simply that it's nice to see her again.

We agree.

Price of Oil Likely Will Go Up

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Parliamentary Bureau

One of Canada's worries these days, believe it or not, is the high price of oil.

The Middle East and its oil potentates.

With the government of Alberta in the middle, and the growing energy crisis at their backs.

Oil is the major source of energy today throughout the world and is expected to be such for at least the next one or two decades.

A few countries in the Middle East are the biggest suppliers of oil, particularly to the United States.

And recently, these countries have been increasing the screw on prices.

Formed into an Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, a cartel, they have been boosting oil prices and exercising control over oil available for export.

Since 1970 the price of fuel oil has increased to nearly what it cost from 96 cents.

And they are still putting on pressure.

They want more money, and they would seem to be in a position to get it.

Perhaps most important of all, they can sit back and wait until other countries come to them.

They now have so much oil money that they could cut off exports for a considerable time without getting a plucker.

While it is said that cutting off all shipments for a fortnight would cripple a modern industrial economy.

Their bargaining position is fantastically good.

Sufficiently enough, in his report on energy to Premier Davis, predicted this out.

And he also brought out an even more serious factor—that a price increase in the Middle East oil could also mean an increase in the price of natural gas in Ontario service.

A move of the Alberta government has been given impetus by this.

Through legislation the government is establishing arbitrators to set the price of its natural gas.

And it would make it mandatory that these prices be related to the equivalent prices of other energy sources.

This would mean that if Middle-East oil goes up, so would our gas.

Mounties Find Big Drug Cache

VICTORIA (CP) — An intensive five-day hunt along a northwest Vancouver Island inlet ended successfully with the discovery of a big drug cache, RCMP Supt. J. M. Nelson announced Thursday night.

He estimated the cache weighed about 1,000 pounds and included 700 to 800 pounds of hashish and about 200 pounds of marijuana. Estimated street value of the drugs was $1 million.

The discovery was made Wednesday by an unidentified serviceman who was part of a search and rescue team at the Canadian forces base at Holberg which had joined the hunt along both sides of Quatsino Sound by scores of RCMP officers and forces members.

The find came as the search, which began Saturday morning after two vessels were stopped in the Sound, was nearly at an end.

Supt. Nelson and other RCMP officials said earlier the operation had been in progress for several months, apparently on the basis of information from the United States. It involved the RCMP, Canadian forces and the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics.

Vote Tied

WINNIPEG (CP) — Liberal Leader Izzy Asper and NDP candidate Murdoch MacKay were deadlocked with 3,137 votes each after a count Thursday of hospital votes cast in the Winnipeg riding of Wolseley in the June 28 Manitoba general election.

Mr. Asper had had a one-vote lead over Mr. MacKay until the hospital vote count.

Out of Jail

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — A 28-year-old mother of two young children was released from custody Tuesday pending hearing of her appeal against a sentence for passing $1,100 in worthless cheques last Christmas.

Mary Ruth Stein of Orillia was sentenced last Friday to an indefinite jail term not exceeding six months after pleading guilty. She is separated from her husband and living on provincial mothers' allowance.

The appeal will be heard in the Ontario Court of Appeal in October.

Cut Sales

DETROIT (AP) — A spokesman for the Automobile Club of Michigan said Thursday about 50 per cent of Michigan's major brand gas stations are limiting operations.

An Auto Club survey revealed gas is more plentiful in the Upper Peninsula, where only 26 per cent of the stations are limiting hours. In southern Michigan, as many as 60 per cent of the gas dealers have placed restrictions on hours or sales.

Firm Folds

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Coleman Packing Co. Ltd. finally succumbed to financial pressures Thursday when union officials were unable to raise the $300,000 needed to keep the company in operation.

The company and its employees were exporting the possibility of a profit-sharing plan and Coleman's general manager Graeme Bieman asked 100 present and former employees earlier in the day to contribute $50,000 towards keeping the plant open.

Get Materials

WHEATLEY, Ont. (CP) — Libby, McNeill and Libby of Canada Ltd. was granted an injunction Thursday, permitting it to enter the strike-bound Dresden Fisheries plant at the Lake Erie community, about 25 miles southwest of Chatham, and remove seven truckloads of packaging materials.

A Libby spokesman said by recovering the packaging materials, the firm will be able to complete wrapping of peas frozen at alternative locations, some as far away as Quebec.

Probe Sprays

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health protection branch is investigating all medicated sprays sold in Canada for possible health hazards, Health Minister Marc Lalonde told the Commons Thursday.

Fiance of Princess Faces Dangerous Driving Charge

LONDON (AP) — Lieut. Mark Phillips, fiance of Princess Anne, faces a dangerous driving charge, police reported Thursday.

Phillips is due in court July 31 in the Wiltshire town of Salisbury. Lawyers said the maximum penalty is four months in jail, but for a first offender a fine and suspension of driving license would be normal.

'Desecrated' Areas Sought

TORONTO (CP) — Members of an Ontario legislature committee studying the use of all-terrain vehicles agreed Thursday that trail bikers have as much right to have their fun as bird watchers and hikers, but they couldn't decide where their good times could take place.

Bud Germa, New Democratic Party member of the legislature for Sudbury, said "what we have to think about is providing these people with areas that are already desecrated. If they had a place to go like a gravel pit, they'd be just as happy as in the woods."

Not all members agreed with Mr. Germa. James Taylor, Progressive Conservative member for Prince Edward-Lennox, said owners of all-terrain vehicles are showing the greatest interest in areas where land is the least available to them.

He suggested that compatible trails could be established for snowmobilers in the winter and trail bikers in summer.

Report Denied

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa denied Thursday night having received an RCMP report concerning one of his cabinet ministers when he formed the government after the provincial election of April 29, 1970.

He was referring to an earlier statement by Robert Burns, Parti Quebecois house leader, that a police report on organized crime referred to a meeting April 16, 1970, between two underworld figures and Pierre Laporte. Mr. Laporte, a Liberal member for Chambly, became labor minister following the election later that month.

He was kidnapped and strangled in October, 1970, during Quebec's terrorist crisis of that autumn.

Space Unused

OTTAWA (CP) — The government still pays hundreds of thousands of dollars rent for office space that isn't used, says assistant auditor - general George Long.

He told the Commons public accounts committee Thursday committee recommendations that departments pay for office space from their own budgets have not been implemented.

The public works department now pays for government office space but departments choose accommodation locations.

Reservations

TORONTO (CP) — James Fleck, Premier William Davis's chief executive officer, said Thursday that last December he felt Ontario Hydro's contract with Canada Square Corp. Ltd. for construction of its new headquarters was a "good deal" with some provisos.

One proviso was the manner in which the building, now under construction in downtown Toronto, was to be appraised once completed.

Mr. Fleck told the legislature select committee inquiring into the awarding of the contract that another reservation he had was the pro-rata method used by Hydro in deciding on Canada Square's proposal.

Enough Protein

OTTAWA (CP) — The country's over-all protein supplies for cattle and poultry production will be adequate until new crops come on the market later this year, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan predicted in the Commons Thursday.

However, he added, "supplies of soybean meal will be less than normal and substitutions will have to be made."

Bombs Set

DETROIT (AP) — An organization calling itself the People's Revolutionary Army of North America has claimed credit for two bombing attacks on military recruiting offices in Michigan, police said Thursday.

One pipe bomb damaged an army recruiting office in Plymouth Tuesday, while another failed to explode at an office in Jackson.

Sampling the Soup

At the table Rita Mennings and two of six guests enjoy the first course of a gourmet dinner which included Stuffed Artichokes and a fondue. Mrs. Mennings's gourmet group meets monthly at a member's home. In the background are Rachel Brady and David Ross.

Dining Out-In

The menu was Spring Tonic Soup, Artichokes Stuffed with Shrimp, Fondue Bourgignon, Potato Croquettes and Strawberries Cardinal. The wines were German Wintersteins and French Mommessin. Coffee and liquers completed the meal.

The diners were Lynn and Brian Knudsen, Rachel and Ian Brady, Mary Lou and David Ross, and Rita and Wilfrid Mennings.

A Saturday night dinner party? Yes, and more. It was the monthly meeting of a small but special club devoted entirely to the business of eating fine food.

Loosely referred to as "The Gourmet Club" by its eight members, the group came together about a year ago.

"It was mainly an experiment," says Lynn Knudsen. The experiment has been a success and the members say they are reaping rewards beyond a good meal once a month.

Mary Lou Ross says it is a good chance to practice preparing and serving a formal sit-down dinner.

Rita Mennings, who prepared Saturday's dinner, says it's fun making dishes "you wouldn't prepare otherwise."

And Rachel Brady points out that the atmosphere helps the diners overcome any reluctance to try a variety of foods.

"We do prepare some things you wouldn't ordinarily bother with," Lynn Knudsen says. "For a week before it's your turn, you're planning the meal," she says.

"It's kind of a big splurge; it's only your turn two or three times a year."

And she adds "When you're not host and hostess it's nice to sit back and enjoy three other lovely meals."

Menus so far have been largely thematic; generally French or based on one type of food. Lynn and Brian Knudsen hosted an all sea-food dinner including Caviar Pie (Lynn is from Nova Scotia), and Rita and Wilfrid Mennings hosted a German dinner featuring Austrian Boiled Beef.

The group decided at the outset that costs for each meal would be borne by the hosts.

They decided to keep the number of members limited.

"We can all accommodate eight," Lynn Knudsen says, "and that way 'turns' come up just often enough."

The group also discussed violent likes and dislikes in food. As it turns out, there weren't any among the group though Lynn admits she's acquired a new fondness for asparagus, since one of the group prepared it.

"You're more inclined at least to sample a dish if someone has gone to the effort of making it," she says.

"I think it broadens your dining experience."

Rachel Brady says there's not been a flop in the group and attributes some of the cooking and eating enthusiasm at least to a "limited" restaurant situation.

"There are only a few places where we like to go for a nice dinner," Lynn Knudsen says, "and after a few times it isn't special any more."

And, as Mary Lou Ross says, "It's much more delightful to eat at home."

Rita Mennings taste tests Spring Tonic Soup for Saturday's Gourmet Club dinner. She and husband Wilfrid hosted this month's meeting of the group which is dedicated to good eating.

Ann Landers

She's Faking It

Dear Ann Landers: Although I love my husband very much, I was getting absolutely nothing out of our sex life. I mean zero. I faked it because I didn't want to hurt Joe's feelings.

Joe traveled in his business and I was alone a lot of the time. I found myself becoming depressed and physically ill. When I confided in my doctor, he told me I was "frigid" and suggested that I take a lover. He convinced me that there is no such thing as frigidity woman, only incompetent males. Then he offered to help me out and provide what he called "every woman's right." I was appalled. I told him I wouldn't consider such a thing. Two weeks later I changed my mind.

My doctor and I saw each other once a week for nearly two years and now I'm in worse shape than ever. This clandestine affair has made me feel worthless and guilty. Every time I go to confession I lie a little and withhold a lot. After awhile, I feel like killing myself. Now I realize I must have psychiatric help because I am becoming increasingly suicidal.

You have stated repeatedly in your column that in order to get anything out of therapy the patient must be completely truthful. I am afraid if I pour out everything to the psychiatrist he will damage the doctor with whom I had the affair. It was as much my fault as his and I don't need anything more to feel guilty about.

How can I be sure the psychiatrist will keep the information to himself? Is he under some sort of Hippocratic Oath to report the physician to the American Medical Association or the County Medical Society? Please help me. I am getting sicker.—Anonymous Lady

Dear Lady: There is no need for you to name names. The psychiatrist isn't interested in the identity of your lover. The Hippocratic Oath doesn't say one doctor must turn in a colleague who is doing a lousy job. Say, however, if you can't help it unless you name names, at least not harm him. Too bad your internist didn't honor that promise.

Dear Ann Landers: "Smilin' Thru's" letter nauseated me. Your approval made it worse. I am considered by friends and family to have a pretty good sense of humor but I'll be hanged if I can find my way through a marriage to a skitchaser and part-time religious fanatic. Such a combination would gag a goat.

You might at least have sneaked in a sentence or two informing your readers that a man can divorce his wife for a good bet that the dumbbell who is "Smilin' Thru" will get changed for something younger even though she boasts an uncanny knack of settling on a happy face when there's not a damned thing to be happy about.

My husband was no religious fanatic, but he was an incurable funny-paster (a nasty job). He didn't Smile-Thru. I got rid of him when I was 39. Now my daughter is for the flea-brain who is stuck with that sex maniac. Sign me: Tired Of Being Straight

Dear D.C.: You did what was right for you and Smilin' did what was right for her. My advice to every married man's band has eye and feet trouble (roving eyes and itchy feet) is this: Ask herself, "Would my life be better or worse without him?"

That alone should be the basis for the decision. Those clowns have already decided what is best for them.

Successful Living

Drug Users Need Help Especially Youth

By DORIS CLARE

"Young people going through certain ages and social changes become much more vulnerable to drug use than others". Such is the opinion of Dr. Jared Tinklenberg of Stanford University Medical Centre. This means that given help and guidance through these periods, the youngster may actually get past the stage where drugs have much appeal.

The period of maximum vulnerability appears to be from early adolescence to the mid-twenties. Habitual drug abuse at this time greatly increases the chance of lifetime problems with drugs - a stage when drug using behavior reverts to a more or less stable pattern. This is also the period during which the greatest features of an individual's identity are established.

The characteristic methods by which an individual deals with stress are gradually acquired and generally solidified into lifetime behavioral patterns. They also develop their characteristic modes of leisure activity and social interaction which can persist through life".

He points out that drug use is a time-limited phenomenon, and it is highly faddish with the young people. — The Journal, Addiction Research Foundation, Toronto.

Dear Doris: It's a cruel world. I'm the youngest of a large family, and ever since I was little, the rest of the family kept pushing me around. I'm 25 now, with my own girls and boys.

One sister presents at me about how bad I am until I cry. My other sister tells a lie whenever her daughter-in-law last year, and I didn't know a thing about it. When I called my sister to invite her to my married daughter's baby shower she was angry because I didn't go to her shower etc.

When I was little, the older ones in the family hurt my feelings and I feel now is different. It doesn't go away it happens over and over.—Terribly Hurt.

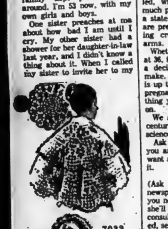
Dear Terribly: The pattern is set — unless you have the gumption to pull away from it and be forged yourself by helping them grow into strong, optimistic adults.

How about that? Take a look at yourself as a mother, not as an overgrown bullied baby sister.

Dear Doris? I'm 36-years-old and married for 18 years. Could I start a family now or forget the whole thing and live happy as we are now?

I was always so scared of having a baby that might not be normal. My health is fine. I may have been pregnant once, but being so scared I lost it.

My husband is very good but always lets me make up my own mind. — I Don't Know.



Dear Don't: Your fear is based of ignorance. Most babies are normal. Most childbirth processes are capably handled, with mothers saved as much pain as possible, and in a state of triumph when they are presented with a new living creature to hold in their arms.

Whether your health is O.K. at 36, for the child bearing, is a decision your doctor must make. If the answer is yes, it is up to you to read up about pregnancy, childbirth - anything you can lay your hands on.

We are not living in a past century now and medical science will help you.

Ask yourself, first of all, do you and your husband both want a child? Be honest about it.

(Ask Doris, in care of this newspaper for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Walton Reid, Madoc, are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter, Norma Sharon Elizabeth, to Robert John, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Schamehorn, Roblin Ontario. The marriage will take place August 4, 12:30 at Ivanhoe Standard Church.

Womens Groups Gain Importance

TORONTO (CP) — Traditional women's groups should be taking on a new importance because the changing times have given them a new opportunity, Mrs. Gordon Armstrong of Toronto, newly elected president of the National Council of Women of Canada, said Friday.

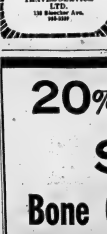
The council, through affiliated national and local organizations, represents about 750,000 women. It is 80 years old this year.

Mrs. Armstrong said "in the old days, when council was in vogue, because of illiteracy and the availability of funding and attitudes of public acceptance, were only able to deal in 'nice' ways with the problems of the day.

"In the democracy we have today, that has advanced the idea of citizen participation, women have an opportunity they have never had before. The public will accept, as well as government and industry, that women are capable of presenting new ideas and being party to accepting new policies."

She said they are, and must be concerned with politics dealing with pollution, population, use and conservation of resources and the change in Canada's economic base.

"Not just women, but all citizens should be advising MPs and governments across the country about what they feel is necessary for the country. They shouldn't be waiting for MPs who are elected to look after business-to-business. Mrs. Armstrong said she would like to see more involvement at planning stages on government councils and conferences. She acknowledged she is not sure how the organization could achieve success on such bodies.



She said she is aware the council is one of the traditional groups considered outdated, partly because it cannot move quickly. She said delegates began to remedy that at the annual meeting which ended Friday by establishing a new way to get resolutions before the delegates.

There might be other changes during her three-year term that would help them get consensus quickly, she said.

Engagements

The forthcoming marriage is announced of Brenda Joyce Farnsworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Barry, of Belleville, and Cons. Michael James Plante, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Plante, of Belleville. The marriage will take place Saturday, July 28 at St. Columba Presbyterian Church at 2.30 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Little, Belleville, wish to announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Keitha Marjorie to Vernon Christy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Christy Sr., RR 5, Belleville. The wedding will take place at St. Paul's Anglican Church, Belleville, August 11, 1973 at 4 p.m.

'Dream Job' Loses Glamor

Stewardesses Hard to Find

BONN (Reuter) — The "dream job" of air hostess appears to be losing its glamor for German girls today. Miss Deutschland 1973 no longer has her heads in the clouds and her eyes fixed on an intrepid pilot.

Lufthansa, the West German airline, is finding it so difficult to recruit German girls as stewardesses that it has had to lower its exacting standards.

The physical proportions of a striptease dancer coupled with the manners of a duchess, the solicitude of a nun and a certificate of higher education no longer are listed on as minimum qualifications.

Edith Lewandowski, Lufthansa's chief of cabin personnel and a former stewardess herself, says the job has been "de-mythologized." She turns a blind eye to a few inches less on the height chart or a few pounds more on the weight scales.

Wearing glasses is no longer an obstacle. A medium-grade education is good enough and experience in the hotel or tourist business in an asset.

Airline executives believe there are two main reasons why girls no longer are attracted to flying. At one time, jobs as stewardesses were sought after a cheap way of seeing the world. But today charter planes and group travel have brought flying within the reach of many more people.

The second reason, they think, is that the stewardess has been given a bad name in a number of novels and films where she is depicted as a "high-altitude call-girl."

But the real reason, explained one stewardess who has been flying for 11 years, is that bigger and faster airliners have made the job much more strenuous and the compensations scarcer.

"In the old days when planes were slower we had plenty of time to serve the passengers and could rest for part of the flight. These days we are on our feet from takeoff to touchdown.

"In the old days we used to have much longer stopovers and turnarounds in foreign cities. Modern jet aircraft fly so fast that we go somewhere, turn straight around and fly back. All we have is an hour at the airport."

The shortage of stewardesses has been aggravated by the introduction of jumbo-jets and the extension of intercontinental services. A jumbo must have 13 cabin personnel on board. To keep one jumbo jet flying, a pool of 65 persons is necessary, allowing for crew changes, holidays and sickness.

So few girls are available that Lufthansa is using a larger proportion of male stewards. Airlines cannot arbitrarily reduce the number of cabin personnel required by international regulations in proportion to the number of passenger seats on the aircraft.

Edith Lewandowski has hired 140 ex-stewardesses on seasonal contracts. None of them had given up flying years ago to marry and have children. "And for the first time we are hiring stewardesses from other airlines," she said.

Lufthansa is advertising for girls in Scandinavia, South America and the United States.

Queen Flies Home After Trip Which Widened Political Role

CALGARY (CP) — The Queen flew home to London Thursday night after establishing herself as a more politically-involved Canadian monarch during an 11-day royal visit.

She returns in three weeks as head of the Commonwealth to attend a four-day meeting of Commonwealth leaders in Ottawa.

Her final appearance here, at the opening of the annual Stampede, was a glittering, slick affair as she ended her four-province tour that included Ontario, Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island, celebrating its Centennial.

Prime Minister Trudeau joined the Queen in tribute to the RCMP at an evening dinner prior to the opening of the stampede.

At the dinner, the prime minister praised the RCMP's history, saying that the Mounties had turned possible violent excesses between Indian and settler by moving in before the settlers and establishing "law and order and respect for civil society."

The final day of the 3,400-mile expedition that gave more than an estimated 1.3 million people a glimpse of the royal couple began with a meeting with a group of Alberta Indians.

On a grassy patch of earth near the airport, the Queen joined 42 chiefs on buffalo-skins in a ceremony reaffirming the desire of both to uphold treaties signed by their ancestors a century before.

"You may be confident of the continued co-operation of this government which represents your people as it represents all the people of Canada," the Queen said. "You may be assured that my government of Canada recognizes the importance of full compliance with the spirit and terms of your treaties."

Under the treaties, the government, on behalf of the Crown, promised to provide health care, education services and economic developments opportunities in exchange for the Indian's share of the country.

That speech pointed up the Queen's aggressive new attitude toward political problems in Canada and illustrated the government's desire to use the Monarchy as a unifying force in the country.

Speeches by the Queen in solving Canadian policy matters are approved in advance by Ottawa.

She made the point in a more general way at the beginning of the tour in Toronto. Then, she urged Canadians to accept her as the Queen of Canada "and all Canadians, not just one or two ancestral strains."

"The Crown is an idea more than a person and I would like the Crown in Canada to represent everything that is best and most admired in the Canadian ideal."

History Traced

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Genealogical Society has been formed to help trace family histories. The society includes ship and cemetery records and information on births and deaths from the department of vital statistics.

NDP Says PCs Copied Grit Pleas to Firms

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservatives attacked Liberal election financing tactics Thursday in the Commons but were accused later by the New Democrats of following similar practices themselves.

The flare-up followed a Toronto Globe and Mail report that said two high-level Liberals canvassed the United States parents of Canadian companies last fall seeking funds for the Oct. 30 election.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen did not deny the report but called it speculative and flatly refused a request by Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield for a public inquiry.

fielding questions for an absent Prime Minister Trudeau, Mr. MacEachen said no government officials were involved, but drew a distinction in his answers between government and political officials.

NDP Leader David Lewis supported the demand for an inquiry but said it should apply to past financing practices by all parties, his own included.

He said he was not impressed by the self-righteousness of the Conservatives. "I believe they have done the same thing in the past."

Stanley Knowles, NDP House leader, said the Conservative criticism was a case of the pot calling the kettle black.

Mr. Lewis said MPs should give speedy passage of legislation now before the House that would force all parties and candidates to make public any campaign contribution over $10.

Mr. MacEachen said the government is agreeable but co-operation by all parties will be needed to pass the bill before the Commons adjourns later this month.

There was no suggestion of illegality, either in the report or the questions it prompted, and the issue appeared to raise few eyebrows outside the Commons.

Ontario Will Investigate Role Of Nurses' College in Licensing

OTTAWA (CP) The Ontario government has been asked to set up a special committee to investigate the role of the College of Nurses of Ontario, which is responsible for licensing nurses and graduates in the province.

A group of about 60 nurses who received their training abroad and who have not been able to obtain registration (lift of censure) from the college made the request in a brief to Premier William Davis.

The brief was released today by Francis Wirvin, president of the Association of Professional Nurses Educated Abroad (APNEA).

Brief said the college appeared to discriminate against some of the nurses educated overseas with little rhyme or reason for the rejections.

"Despite the fact that many of the professional nurses educated abroad had received their nursing education at some of the renowned institutions in the world and had practiced nursing as professionals for varying periods ranging from one to 20 years in many famous hospitals in Canada and abroad. They were deemed to be nurses of such low calibre that they were not even eligible to write Ontario registration examinations let alone have their qualifications-education and experience-recognized as equivalent," the brief said.

Of 62 nurses seeking registration in Ontario and refused, 32 had been registered in other provinces.

Pearson Gave Bombings OK But Then Changed His Mind

TORONTO (CP) — Former prime minister Lester Pearson, quoted in the Pentagon papers as assuring U.S. President Lyndon Johnson he would not condemn non-nuclear bombing of North Vietnam, suggested a year later that the U.S. continue the tactics.

The Pentagon papers, first released to the press in 1971 by former U.S. defence consultant Daniel Ellsberg and amplified early this year during Ellsberg's trial in Los Angeles, reported a meeting between Mr. Pearson and President Johnson in May 1964.

During the meeting in New York, the late Canadian prime minister was quoted in the secret Pentagon history of the Indochina war as telling President Johnson that "punitive" striking of discriminated targets by careful iron-bomb attacks" would be "personally understood."

However, Mr. Pearson, in a carefully-qualified speech at Temple University, Philadelphia, a year after the meeting, suggested that the U.S. should take a "pause" in the bombing in the hope of clearing a way for a negotiated settlement.

"I think that after two months of air strikes, the message has been received loud and clear," Mr. Pearson said.

"Continued bombing could harden the determination of the North Vietnamese."

The Pentagon papers also reveal secret Canadian diplomacy in third-party negotiations with Hanoi, prompted by Mr. Pearson's 1964 meeting with President Johnson.

This meeting, which came nine months before the U.S. started bombing North Vietnam, took place only three weeks before Blair Seaborn, Canada's delegate on the International Control Commission (ICC), made his first visit to Hanoi.

The Pentagon papers revealed how Ottawa subsequently became a diplomatic instrument, through Mr. Seaborn, of President Johnson's Vietnam policy.

During the Pearson-Johnson meeting, the president suggested to Mr. Pearson that Mr. Seaborn should carry U.S. diplomatic messages to Hanoi.

A cable sent to Henry Cabot Lodge, then U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, from acting State Secretary George Ball on May 30, 1964, two days after the meeting, read that President Johnson "needs a confidential and responsible interlocutor to carry the message of U.S. attitudes to Hanoi."

The cable continued:

"Pearson, after expressing willingness to lend Canadian good offices to this endeavor . . . stipulated that he would have great reservations about the use of nuclear weapons. . . . He said he would personally understand our resort to such measures if the messages transmitted through the Canadian channel failed to produce any alleviation of North Vietnamese aggression . . ."

Release of Mafia Kingpin Linked to John Dean

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A Senate subcommittee is investigating possible links between the White House and the surprise release of jailed Mafia kingpin Angelo (Gyp) DeCarlo.

DeCarlo was freed in time for Christmas last year by presidential executive clemency after serving two years of a 13-year term for extortion.

Henry Jackson (Dem. Wash) has linked his premature release to former White House lawyer John Dean, fired by President Nixon in April because of his involvement in a top-level effort to cover up the Watergate bugging scandal.

Jackson also drew in former attorney-general Richard Kleindienst, who headed the justice department when DeCarlo was freed.

It would appear that normal procedures and safeguards were bypassed by the attorney-general and presidential counsel in this matter," Jackson said in a letter to the dept.

current attorney-general, Elliot Richardson.

"Something smells, and I want to know what," the senator said.

A spokesman for the Senate crime investigations subcommittee of which Jackson is chairman, said the DeCarlo release did not go through normal procedures but went straight from the pardon attorney's office, to Kleindienst, to Dean and then—presumably—to the president.

Jackson also expressed concern about the disappearance of another Mafia figure, Anthony DiLorenzo, who was linked with investigations into securities fraud.

DiLorenzo was serving a 18-year term sentence passed in 1970, but was allowed certain privileges including the right to leave prison unescorted.

"Late last year, on one of these unescorted furloughs purportedly to visit his dentist, he disappeared," Jackson said.

Violations Of Voting Law Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office (GAO) has cited four apparent violations of election laws in the transfer of $49,900 from President Nixon's re-election effort to a Salute for Ted Agnew gala last year.

The GAO said Thursday the Agnew committee falsely reported the $49,900 as contributions from 31 donors. It said also that the Finance Committee to Re-elect the President did not report the transfer of the money.

The GAO accused Blagden Wharton, treasurer of the Agnew committee, of making "false, fictitious or fraudulent statements" and of "subscribing under oath to materials he believed to be untrue."

The fourth violation was by unnamed persons "acting for the committee" who "wilfully participated in the effort to falsify, conceal or cover up" the $49,900 transfer.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The public is invited to attend an unveiling ceremony of national historic sites and monuments board of Canada plaque commemorating "Glanmore House" which will be held on the grounds of Glanmore House, 257 Bridge St. East, Belleville, at 2 p.m. Saturday, July 7th, 1973.

In the event of rain, the ceremony will be held in the auditorium of the Sir Winston Churchill Public School (MacDonald Avenue).

Controversy Carried to Streets

This small band of pickets paraded in front of the United Community Services building for about an hour during last night's board of directors' meeting . Signs proclaimed strong opinions against UCS director, Isadore Cooperman. Only Clarence Young, a noted opponent of the director, professed personal contact with Mr. Cooperman — others said they knew enough through reading the newspaper. The anti-Cooperman pickets were countered by neighborhood young people who hastily prepared their own signs supporting the UCS director. The demonstration barely raised mention at the board meeting, and pickets would not say who had organized the anti-Cooperman protest.

UCS Head Asked to Define Job

Tighter controls and checks are being placed on Belleville's United Community Services executive director, following last night's meeting of the agency's board of directors.

On two motions from Social Planning Committee chairman and board member Virginia O'Rourke, a personnel committee will be formed to create a suitable job description for the position; monitor performance of the director; ensure the job is being adequately done and that the present director's employment contract expires Dec. 31 to be renewable at the board's discretion.

Included in the motion was a stipulation that approximately two months prior to the renewal date, the personnel committee, using the job description as a guide, deliberate annually whether the contract be renewed.

Mrs. O'Rourke, a senior member of the board, said this system would "eliminate snipping throughout the year," referring to parent allegations that the present director, Isadore Cooperman, was not suitable for the position provoking an eight-to-seven vote of the board to retain him.

On a subsequent motion by director Eleanor Sisson, Mr. Cooperman was instructed to create a description of his duties in his role as executive director to provide a basis of discussion for the personnel committee.

At the moment there is no job description governing Mr. Cooperman's duties though one was requested in the past by the executive committee of the board.

Citizens Bureau Assured of Home

The Citizens' Bureau was told last night it has a home in the William Street offices of the United Community Services until Sept. 30.

There was some speculation that because of personality conflicts and charges of interference, between bureau and UCS staff, the bureau would be asked to move out of the building.

Virginia O'Rourke, recognizing the move to oust the bureau from the premises, deferred a motion with that intent until she could contact Canada Manpower officials who monitor the federally-sponsored program.

Mrs. O'Rourke, with the support of several other board members, said on behalf of the bureau that sufficient funds were not available to relocate at the moment. A board of directors has been formed to take over the bureau when Local Initative Project funds run out next fall and that body's priority was finding other means of funding, allowing the bureau to find other quarters.

Both Mrs. O'Rourke and Hugh Pepper explained it would be poor public relations to ask the bureau to leave now, "considering the facility they give the UCS on the community at large," through traffic into the office.

During the discussion, the board was reminded of an earlier piece of business from which an announcement came that the Hastings - Prince Edward Family Planning Association would be leaving the UCS building in the coming month. That agency, which paid $50 a month rent, explained it would take Front Street offices to get closer to the young people the agency is trying to reach.

Mrs. O'Rourke suggested moving the Citizens Bureau to the upper floor of the converted home to "relieve the day-by-day, minute-by-minute tensions among staff that has created much of the controversy surrounding the UCS recently."

Resulting from her suggestion, a motion was successfully introduced calling for a complete space study of the UCS building to investigate the possibility of re-allocating areas. A spokesman for the bureau said his group would have no objection to moving upstairs.

Regardless of the outcome of the space study, the bureau was given absolute assurance last night it would be accommodated until the Sept. 30 LIP fund cutoff date.

Resignation Ends Welfare Battle

A letter from Community and Social Services Minister Rene Brunelle says a field worker with Hastings County Social Services department has resigned following complaints against treatment of several welfare claimants.

The letter was sent Ellie Marcel, New Democratic Party MPP for Sudbury East.

A review was ordered by Mr. Brunelle in May after affidavits were collected by the Belleville Citizens' Bureau.

Following the investigation, County Administrator Carl Bateman said there were no irregularities in the administration of welfare and none were claimed. But there had been objections to the attitude of some welfare workers.

After results of the review were discussed with county officials, says Mr. Brunelle's letter, the field worker submitted his resignation, which was accepted.

"This resignation appears to resolve any difficulties that existed in the relations between the county Social Services and their clients," wrote Mr. Brunelle.

Gala Ceremonies Set for Tomorrow

The most spectacular open-house event in Belleville's recent history takes place Saturday at Glanmore House.

The palatial old mansion, a city landmark on Bridge St. East since the late 19th century, tomorrow becomes a museum, housing among other exhibits, one of the most remarkable collections of Victorian art and furnishings in Canada — the Couldery Collection.

With suitable fanfare, the event marks the end of long planning, restoration and preparations.

The program preceding the first formal tours of Glanmore begins at 2 p.m. on the spacious lawns fronting the house.

Among special guests will be Anabel Docter and Philippa Faulkner.

Miss Doctor is a niece of Mrs. A. S. Salaman, who willed funds used to purchase and restore Glanmore for the Couldery Collection, also bequeathed by the same family. Mrs. Faulkner inherited Glanmore from her father who had married the adopted daughter of its builder, John Philpot Curran Phillips. She retained the house until 1971 when it was sold to the city, the County of Hastings and the Departments of Indian and Northern Affairs.

Opening ceremonies will include the unveiling of a plaque by Jud Buchanan, MP. Lorne, representing Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien.

Following the official opening and tours of Glanmore a reception will be held at 4 p.m. at Bridge St. United Church.

It's Official -- Three Municipalities Out

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A year's uncertainly on its municipal membership matter has ended for the Quinte Planning Board.

As a result the QPB has lost the three local government units that once made up its western sector — Brighton, Murray and Brighton townships.

The board last night accepted as final the decision of the three breakaway municipalities to quit the Quinte Planning Area.

The end to the separation issue was in calm contrast to the controversy it had invoked since the three first stalked out on the QPB last year, charging poor value for their membership dollars.

The conclusion came as Trenton mayor Duncan McDonald reported to the QPB on a recent meeting with spokesmen for the western municipalities.

The meeting followed a brief to the QPB in April in which the three sought a new financial formula from the board.

However, said Mayor McDonald, a major concern now was doubt about future planning area boundaries.

There is uncertainty over what area the three municipalities eventually would be connected with.

Aldermen E. Arnold Orr, QPB chairman, said the three cities "it would be foolish for them to come into this area for a short while and then move out later."

Reeve Horace Casey of Thurlow township performed the last act in the controversy when he moved all QPB services — including correspondence, forwarding of documents — to cease and a letter be sent to the municipal affairs ministry outlining "the whole situation."

QPB members now are Belleville, Trenton, Sidney and Thurlow.

Denturist Legislation Is Passed

TORONTO — Once-controversial legislation placing Ontario denturists under supervision of dentists was proclaimed into law here minus any admonition to the dental profession from Health Minister Richard Potter.

The move now is on the profession to ensure dental health care protection for the public, said Dr. Potter.

At the same time dentists must make full use of qualified denturists and be sure reasonably - priced dentures are publicly available.

"We expect the dental profession to live up to its obligation," said Dr. Potter. "If they don't we'll have to take other steps."

The government bill permits denturists — now restyled denture therapists — to practice in a dental clinic, a dentist's office or supervised by contract with a group of dentists.

The qualifying examination already has been held by the health ministry. The next is scheduled for September — the same months a three-year course in dental therapy begins at a Toronto community college.

The first examination passed 33 of 47 — a failure rate of 42 per cent.

"I don't want the public to get the idea that this high rate is indicative of the competence of the denturists," said Dr. Potter.

However, it indicated, municipal council was not misplaced in the controversy over licensing of denturists.

Payment scales — a concern of denturists — still are under negotiation.

Bags Are Base

While most of the Quinte area has long forgotten the flood threat, Canadian Tire, which opened Wednesday, is busy sandbagging the exposed waterfront where winds have whipped water onto parking lot and into storage warehouses. Ian Fraser of Toronto is working on bags. Once in place a layer of earth will cover the bags and later be landscaped for a greenbelt area between the parking lot and the water's edge.

Accident Victims Buried at Read

St. Charle Church at Read was filled to capacity Thursday morning for the funeral of three members of the Robert O'Brien family, RR 1 Corbyville, who died as result of a car accident on Sunday.

Killed in the accident on County Road 6, were Mrs. Jane O'Brien and eight-year-old daughter Kerri Lee. A second daughter Julie, aged three, died Wednesday in Kingston General Hospital.

The funeral for the mother and two daughters was held Thursday from the O'Brien Funeral Residence to St. Charles Church for concelebrated mass conducted by Rev. Gerald Bryne and Rev. Leo Byrne.

Present in the sanctuary were Rev. R. J. Ferguson and Rev. Walter Hamilton. Members of St. Charles' Catholic Women's League formed a guard of honor at the church. Interment was in St. Charles' Cemetery.

Bearers for Mrs. O'Brien were John Doran, Dennis Whalen, Ronald Cole, Leo MacDonald, Keith Hough and Bradley Chard.

For Kerri Lee the bearers were Patrick McWilliam, Patrick and Michael Walsh, Doug las Vader, Roger Smith and Roger Lanier, and for Julie, Gregory McKinney, Steven Walsh, Michael Garland and Pat Walsh.

The O'Brien family formerly lived on the fifth concession but several months ago had purchased the general store at Blessington Corners on the Shannonville gravel.

Surviving are the husband and father Robert O'Brien and two sons Robert and Bernie.

On the Job Today

Highway and sewer construction laborers, members of Local 247 of the Laborers' International Union of North America, are back on the job today pending settlement of a two-day strike which stalled projects between Trenton and Cardinal, east of Brockville. About 200 workers were involved in the strike called in support of demands for increased wages. Workers returned to work this morning pending completion of negotiations now under way today in Belleville. Picture shows union picketers Thursday at the West Dundas Street reconstruction project with idled road equipment in the background.

Aims for Five at Wimbledon

Billie-Jean King goes after her fifth singles title at Wimbledon today, matched against Chris Evert who will be out to become the youngest champion since Maureen Connolly who took the title in 1952—when she was 17-years-old. Chris is 18. (AP Photo)

Stage Set for Final

LONDON (AP) — Chris Evert was out to make tennis history today by becoming Wimbledon's since Maureen (Little Mo) Connolly.

Little Mo won her first singles here in 1952, when she was only 17 years, nine months old. Chris is 18 years, seven months.

Chris's opponent, the formidable Billie Jean King, was chasing a record, shooting to become the first woman since Helen Wills Moody to win five singles titles at Wimbledon.

"I really want to win this year," said Billie Jean. "A fifth title would be a big thrill: I am not going to say I haven't thought about it."

Chris and Billie Jean, seeded fourth and second respectively, have met once before on grass, in 1971. On that occasion, Billie Jean won handily.

Their total score over the years, however is four victories for Chris and two for Billie Jean.

This was Chris's third final on the European circuit this year.

She was beaten in Paris for the French title by Margaret Court, and in the Italian championships by Evonne Goolagong of Australia.

Both tournaments were played on clay, Chris's favorite surface.

Since coming to Wimbledon, however, Chris has played with increasing sharpness, dropping only two sets in five rounds.

Billie Jean has dropped only one set, but she had a bye in the first round.

The men's final Saturday will be between two players from Europe—fourth-seeded Alex Metreveli, the first Russian to reach the Wimbledon final, and second-seeded Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia.

Kodes had a tough fight Thursday in ousting Britain's Roger Taylor 8-9, 9-7, 5-7, 6-4, 7-5 while Metreveli had an easier victory over Alex Mayer, a U.S. law student, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Gar Hamilton In the Groove

WINNIPEG (CP) — Since Gar Hamilton decided to enter the professional golf ranks this spring he has managed to break 70 only twice.

But, at the same time, the worst round of competitive golf he has shot is 71, registered during the Ontario Open.

Take away those two scores and the 23-year-old Toronto native is a picture of consistency, shooting regularly between 70 and 72.

Thursday he burned up the back nine at the Niakwa Country Club registering his second under-70 round and taking the lead in a provincial tournament for the first time as a pro.

Hamilton fired four shots off par—all on the back nine—to finish with 68 and a two-shot lead on the field.

"I finally broke through . . ." the dark haired former Ontario junior champion said after grabbing the lead in the 54-hole $10,000 tournament.

His 36-32—68 scorecard sends him into today's second round with a narrow lead over Bill Tape of Kitchener, Ont., and Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont.

Norman was one-over-par on the front nine but he settled down through the final nine holes to cut three shots off par.

Dale Talley of Tecumseh, Stan Homenuik of Dauphini Man., and Bob Cox of Richmond, B.C., were grouped at 69.

Hamilton jumped onto the tour by winning the Canadian Professional Golf Association players school tournament by six shots.

Through the first four provincial tournaments he has yet to win but his consistency has earned him $2,827.

Of his first 18 holes at Niakwa, the free-swinging Hamilton said:

"I wasn't putting well on the front nine. I bogeyed the third hole then picked up a birdie to get back to par.

"Where I turned it around was on the 10th. I sank a 30-foot birdie putt and that got me going. After that my iron shots sat down and the putts were going in."

The veteran B.C. player Cox turned at two-under-par, slipped slightly but then eagled the 12th to move three under par.

Cox said Hamilton complained of his loss of two strokes on the final five holes.

"I hit an iron badly off the tee on 14 and took a bogey. The 16th I should have bogeyed but escaped and then I overdrove it."

"This is the first time I've played this course, having just arrived last night and I didn't realize the hole was that short."

Cox said the Niakwa course, a 6,582-yard, par-72 layout, is "a guy who chips and putts well."

Early in the afternoon, with 32 players still to tee off, officials suspended play because of a severe lightning storm.

High winds and heavy rains had hampered play almost from the opening drive but the tournament went ahead for five hours until lightning began streaking across the sky.

Play was suspended about one hour and although the winds continued through most of the day, there was little more rain with any brief periods of sun. The tournament ends Saturday.

Sabres' Harris To Whalers

BOSTON (AP) — New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association have signed Hugh Harris, a left wing for the Buffalo Sabres who had 12 goals and 36 assists for 36 points in 60 National Hockey League games this year.

Harris, a native of Toronto, is 25, stands six feet tall and weighs 180 pounds.

In 1970-71, Harris was the leading scorer in the International League with 39 goals and 47 assists.

Last season Harris played on a line with Jim Lorentz and Gerry Meehan for the Sabres.

'The Worm Turned' Says Leader Goalby

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Bob Goalby had a quick and easy explanation for his spectacular seven-under-par 65 that put him in front after the first round of the $130,000 Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

"The worm turned, and it turned pretty good," Goalby said Thursday after taking a one-stroke lead over Larry Ziegler, Buddy Allin and Mike Morley, tied at 66.

"It was just one of those days when I got a few breaks," said the 1968 Masters champion who has been fighting his customary slow start this season.

"I haven't been playing that well," said the veteran of 17 years on the pro tour. Then he paused and reconsidered. "I've been playing pretty well, but I haven't been scoring.

"I finally had a good putting round."

Homero Blancas was two strokes off the pace with a 67, while a group at 68 included Dale Douglass, Dekne Beman, Bob Dickson, Hubert Green, Jim King, Rocky Thompson, Ras Allen, Will Homemuk of Winnipeg and Roy Pace.

George Knudson of Toronto shot 37-36—71 and Ben Kern, also of Toronto, was two strokes further back, carding 36-37—73.

Jerry Heard scored the season's first double eagle. He holed a four-iron second shot on the 506-yard, par-five 12th hole.

Most of the game's glamour names are skipping this tournament. Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer, U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, Masters' titleholder Tommy Aaron are in Scotland for next week's British Open.

Goalby has had only one finish in the top 10 this year, and ranks 78th on the money winning list with $58,900. But a slow start is nothing new for him.

Goalby, who scored the last of his 11 tour triumphs in the 1971 Bahama Islands Open, has had to make a late-season rally—twice in the last tournament of the season—each of the last four years to retain his status as an exempt player.

He used his dominance of the par five holes as the key to his pace-setting effort Thursday.

Matuszak to Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers announced the signing Thursday of 280-pound defensive end John Matuszak, No. 1 selection in last January's National Football League draft.

An Oiler spokesman said Matuszak's lawyer, Bob Woolf of Boston, was here Tuesday and worked out final details for the former Tampa University star's four-year contract.

Matuszak, present at the news conference, is counted on to step right into a starting position for Houston. He was the No. 1 pick of the Oilers, who finished the 1972 season with a 1-13 record-worst in the NFL.

Two weeks ago, negotiations between Woolf and the Oilers appeared at an impasse when Matuszak announced he was going to Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League concerning a contract for Matuszak.

No details of the contract were disclosed immediately.

It was reported that Toronto, who hold his CFL rights on their protected list, were prepared to offer about $50,000 to sing the huge lineman.

Matuszak's agent, while the offer was generous, he would still prefer to play with the NFL club.

First Place Closer

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Peterborough moved a step closer to clinching first place in the Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A league Thursday by dumping Rexdale 16-8 before 883 spectators.

Peterborough stretched their first-place lead to 11 points in downing second-place Rexdale for the third time this season.

Peterborough led 4-1 after the first period and outscored Rexdale 5-4 in the second period.

Peterborough was led by Steve Plunkett with three goals. Bob Watson, Stan Jonathan, Guy Legault and Paul Evans each scored twice. Single goals went to Brian Evans, Jan Magee, Jim Johnston, Ted Floyd and Randy Bryan.

Blair Campbell scored three goals for Rexdale with Bob Bolitho adding two. Bill Bolitho, Dan Walker and Jay Douglas scored one each.

Peterborough outshot Rexdale 46-45.

BEARS MAKE TRADE

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bears of the National Football League announced Thursday that offensive lineman Rick Buzin, a six-year veteran from Penn State, was traded to Houston Oilers for an undisclosed draft choice. He was obtained from Los Angeles Rams prior to the start of the 1973 season and spent most of the year on the taxi squad.

FORMER CATCHER DIES

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Walter Schmidt, 80, a catcher for Pittsburgh Pirates from 1918 to 1924 and for St. Louis Cardinals in 1925, died Wednesday night after a brief illness. He had a .257 batting average for 774 National League baseball games during a 10-year career.

Forced Out at Second

Montreal Expos shortstop Tim Foli jumps high into the air to avoid collision with Tony Martinez of New York Mets during National Baseball League action at Montreal. Foli relays the ball to first base after Martinez was forced at second.

Golden Bat Tourney Is Underway Tonight

The drums and bugles of the Belleville Yardmen Bugle Corps will sound off to usher in the two grand champion-ship contestants at the 5th annual Belleville Golden Bat Tournament.

But before the flash of brass in the Sandy-an at Parkdale Park, two days of ball will have been played.

How do things look for Ontario's biggest bantam tourney starting tonight? "Everything is going beautifully," says Vi Christopher, tourney chairman. "I can't say enough for the volunteers who have become involved."

But when asked if she cared to make a prediction as to which teams will end up in the grand championship, Mrs. Christopher decided to play it safe with a "no comment—I wouldn't predict anybody".

"From what I hear, Scarborough is back this year with a strong team, and so is Guelph. As for Peterborough, they say they don't have a strong team, but you never know with them."

It doesn't appear that Peterborough will end up in the grand championship as they did last year. Their bantam club, according to team manager Doug Stenton is not nearly as strong as it was.

"We've improved from the beginning of the season," said Stenton, "but I don't think we'll beat them this year. Most of the team is first year bantam with only first team man Randy Edger back from last year's team."

In Eastern Ontario Baseball Association play, Peterborough holds a 7-5-0 won-loss tie record. Among the losses recorded, the Kawartha city team gave up a 22-3 game to Cobourg at the beginning of the season.

Peterborough will be testing their accumulated mettle against Belleville Legion 99 in a 6 p.m. game at Parkdale Park tonight. The seasoning the players received on the Peterborough Legion 32 peewee team will decide their future with regard to the big championship match.

See the Sports Calendar for tournament schedule.

Bardon Rolling, Devolin Closes Gap

Bardon Supply are still in the cellar in the Commercial Softball League but now they have some companions, and Rollins are still in first place but there's someone knocking at the door.

After a pair of games Thursday night the standings touched a little more with Bardon upsetting Trenton Auger 5-4 in nine innings for their second win in a row and Devolin Motors stopping the Ellis Jewellers 6-5. The Bardon win moved them into a tie with the Junkers in fifth spot six points behind fourth place Trenton and Howard and Roberts. The Devolin win put them one game behind league leading Rollin's Construction.

Bardon ended a tight pitching duel between Trenton's Scott Reid and their own Jamie Hunter with two runs in the ninth inning. Brian Hinman started the winning rally with a double. In the third of the evening, scoring on a fielder's choice and an error. Bill Dewey who reached base on the fielder's choice added Bardon's second run, racing home on a fly ball.

Bardons had loaded the bases in the fourth inning with only one out but failed to capitalize when Bill Dewey fanned and Ted Wallwork flied out. Trenton was stopped at every turn and couldn't materialize a threat.

Hunter wound up with a four hitter with seven strikeouts and no walks. Reid was touched for seven hits while fanning six and walking four.

Bardon's hitting was limited to three men with Hinman notching two doubles and a single and Sid Davies and Hunter stroking a pair of singles each.

Joe Theriault, Roger Drake, Al Bronson and Dave Henry had singles for Trenton

The Juniors were behind the eight ball before they had their spikes dirty, falling behind 3-0 after the first five Devolin batters.

Jim Horwood led off the bottom of the first with a single, reached third of a wild pitch and passed ball and then added insult to injury by stealing home. Wayne Woods was hit by a pitch, a two-base error on Marv Stacey's single and Rick Baseball's double gave Devolin the lead and started the Juniors on their ninth loss of the year.

A two-run triple by Jim Richardson in the third cut the margin for the Juniors but RBI hits in the third and fifth by Lyle Thompson, returning from a one game suspension, and a sixth inning run scored by Junior Hogan.

Don Holoway threw the win pitching up a five hitter, fanning four and walking none. Ron Hill lasted five innings for the Juniors before giving way to Dave Horwood.

Thompson had a double and a single and Jim Horwood two singles to lead the winners' hitting.

Ron Hill tripled for the Juniors.

Better Late Than Never

Mead Johnson did it the hard way Thursday night but any way will do if it means first place.

Meads had to score seven times in the seventh inning to grab a 10-9 victory over the Post Office in Industrial Softball League action.

In other games Brooke Bond moved to within one game of first place CN in the east by stopping the Independents 6-3 and UIC lost a game to Meads when they were held to a 5-5 tie by Consolidated Carpets.

The win gave Meads first spot in the western division and left the Postes mired in sixth spot in the east.

Sonny Holoway and Blaine Young led the Meads come from behind win with home runs while Jim Sopha had a double and single and Tim O'Connell reached base on two singles and a double.

Harold Wilkinson started for Meads allowing all nine runs on five hits and seven walks before Sonny Holoway blanked the Postes on one hit over the final three innings.

Ken Williams was touched for eight hits in his six and one half innings of work on the Post Office rubber and Jim Abrams was nicked for the final three Mead runs in relief.

Bill Pearce had two singles and Eric Tunnett doubled for the losers.

Too Much To Handle

Steve Bennett proved to be too much to handle for Sidney Inn Wednesday night as the Belleville Plaza hung on for a Belleville Minor Softball Association squirt victory.

Bennett punched a homerun and single and struck out 11 strikeouts in leading his Plaza team to a 5-4 win over the Inn.

Mike Miller doubled for the losers' only extra base hit.

Home runs by John Rickets and Chris Frankfield powered the Boys to a 15-5 victory in another squirt contest. Bowler hitting by Lloyd Olson led Complete Rent-Alls to a 21-7 pasting of Malcolm Masters in the final game of the night.

Olson swung for a triple, double and two singles and with the help of John Munro he had two triples apiece and a double paced the Rent-Alls to their win.

Frankford Hangs On For Win

The Belleville Yardmen Benefit Pool Tournament will start Thursday night and it put an end to say was segregations in the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association contest, with a third need.

Frankford scored four runs in the first inning against Belleville and then went on for a 4-3 victory at the new recreational baseball diamond.

Ben Dyer fired a four hitter for Frankford striking out 10 and walking but three. Dwight Mater had a double and Alex Eades and Jim Bain had the singles each for the winners.

Mike McCullough was touched for all four Frankford runs on the Belleville mound before leaving in favor of Rick Culkin who shut out the visitors for the final eight frames. Double and single and Bruce McDonell a pair of singles for the losers.

20 Is Lucky

The Thurlow Plane's Centre peewees were 20 for 20 Thursday night in an Eastern Ontario Baseball Association game.

The Thurlow nine hammered 20 hits in recording a 23-3 win over Frankford.

Troublesome Injury Doesn't Stop Taft

Striker Len Taft grit his teeth in pain during the second half of play in Bay of Quinte Soccer Association play against Belleville United Wednesday, but his stoic endurance proved beneficial to Whitley's Travellers.

After injuring his ankle in a collision with Colin Baillie in the first half, Taft went on three goal rush as Whitley's dyed in the 1973 season. Goalender Terry Hore shutout United 3-0 for his third scoreless game of four.

Just before Terry Blight was carried off the field with a severe muscle cramp in his leg, striker Chauncy Soderberg put Whitley's on the scoreboard. Attempted to get back to block Soderberg's shot United playing coach Jim Bryce had the ball glance off his shoulder and bounce into his own net.

Whitley's played with only eight men for the final 12 minutes but Henry Sonnerveld beat out Stewart Hadley in a foot race for the ball to give the Travellers their final insurance goal of the game. In United's net, Phil Sero failed to show the confidence of his club's third loss of the season.

"Wright" Foot Forward

The Legion Flyer mosquitoes put the "Wright" foot forward in taking a Belleville Minor Soccer Association victory Thursday night.

Mark Wright boated five goals to lead the Legion to an 8-1 stomping of the mosquito to Flyers 7.

Howie Dell fired two goals and Dwayne Barrett one for the winners with Randy Bolger netting the lone goal for the Flyers C team.

Dodgers Lose Again But No Good Lost

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Perhaps in preparation for their expected move to Washington next season, San Diego Padres continued hugging Los Angeles Dodgers Thursday night.

With Steve Arlin pitching a two-hitter for his second consecutive shutout and Fred Kendall tapping a home run, the Padres completed a three-game sweep by a 5-0 score. It was their sixth triumph in 10 meetings with Los Angeles and extended the first-place Dodgers' losing streak to six games.

Elsewhere in the National League, Cincinnati Reds topped San Francisco Giants 4-3, Atlanta Braves trimmed Houston Astros 7-4, Philadelphia Phillies downed Chicago Cubs 7-4, Pittsburgh Pirates edged St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 and New York Mets beat Montreal Expos 7-5.

Arlin allowed only a first-inning single by Bill Buckner and Bill Russell's one-out single in the fifth in becoming the second pitcher to blank the Dodgers twice this season. Kendall's first homer off loser Claude Osteen, whose personal seven-game winning streak was snapped as the Padres posted a four-game winning streak over the first-place club all year.

"It's about time the Padres got more notoriety," Arlin said. "It's not easy to beat a team like the Dodgers, but we came out swinging. I was hoping we'd win them 10-0."

But the Dodgers didn't lose ground, since their closest pursuers in the West Division—San Francisco and Houston—also lost.

Dave Concepcion's fifth hit of the game, a run-scoring single with two out in the bottom of the 10th off Steve Hoda, won the Giants. Relief pitcher Don Gullett started the winning rally against Elias Sosa with a one-out infield hit and Pete Rose also singled. Don McMahon struck out Joe Morgan before Concepcion's winning hit.

The Giants built a 3-0 lead on Bobby Bonds' two-run homer—his 20th of the season, tying him with Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell for the major league lead—and Chris Speier's solo shot. The Reds tied it in the sixth on Concepcion's run-producing single and Tony Perez' two-run double.

Home runs by Dave Johnson, Darrell Evans and Mike Lum powered the Braves over the Astros. Johnson's homer, his 20th of the season, was a three-run blast in the second inning. Evans' homer was his 22nd.

Bill Robinson and Greg Luzinski homered and Steve Carlton weathered a Chicago rally as the Phillies turned back the Cubs. Carlton was touched for 11 hit but finished the game. The left - hander, who won 27 games and the Cy Young Award in 1972, boosted his record to 9-8.

Richie Hebner hit a two-run single and a game-winning homer to lead the Pirates past the Cardinals. Hebner's single came in the first inning off Alan Foster and he hit his 11th homer in the sixth off Orlando Pena to snap a tie. Nelson Briles scattered seven hits and blanked the Cards after the first inning.

Rusty Staub and Wayne Garrett delivered two runs apiece with seventh-inning singles as the Mets rallied for five runs and snapped a four-game losing streak by beating the Expos. Staub, who homered in the fourth for the Mets' first run, tied the game with a two-out, bases-loaded single off Mickey Scott.

Montreal used an error to score three unearned runs in the first inning, two on Bob Bailey's 10th homer.

NICKLAUS FAVORED

TROON, Scotland (Reuter) — Jack Nicklaus, winner of the British Open golf championship in 1966 and 1970, was favored Thursday by a London bookmaker as 7-to-2 favorite to win the 1973 tournament, which starts here next Wednesday. Lee Trevino was quoted at six-to-one.

ISL All-stars Named

Mead Johnson placed three players on the Industrial Softball League's first all-star team in a vote of the 11 team representatives held Wednesday night. One of the top teams in the league's west division, Keeds saw second baseman Ron Sopko and shortstop Garnet Adams join right fielder Blaine Young on the first team.

The only other club to put more than one player on the first team was CNR, league leader in the east section. The Trainmen seemed to be spared are first baseman Bob Lloyd and third baseman Barry Tamblin.

Rounding out the team are Quinte Mall 'Leaders' pitcher Mark Sheridan, UIC catcher Clint Halliday (a unanimous choice), Brooke Bond 1 ert fielder Jack Walsh and Post Office centre fielder Gord Campbell.

Two more Leaders and a pair of AOCO players are included in the second team roster. From Leaders come catcher Norm Tellock and shortstop Herm VanDaalen. The infield corners will be manned by AOCO's Doug McKay at first and Doug Boonbower at third.

Brooke Bond pitcher Tom St. Jules who had a string of seven shutouts snapped recently was a popular choice. Stewart Warner's Bill Lynch will play second base with Mead's centre fielder Garnet Bird flanked by the Intell's Randy Derry in right and Robbie McMurter of CJOR in left.

CNR coach Cam McKenna who piloted his team to the playoff championship last season will handle the all-star squad. League officials hope to have the team play several exhibition games. Rollins Construction Commercial League front runner may provide the opposition for the select team's first test.

Not Much to Choose Between These Clubs

Belleville Yardmen Benefit making a two team race of the Belleville and District Ladies Softball League and their head-to-head clash Wednesday night indicated it might be a long hard battle.

The lead switched hands four times before BYBF pushed across four runs in the fifth inning to end the game 8-6 over the Yardmen's 13-12 win. The single point left the Yardmen girls one point up on the Grill atop the league standings.

Verna Hill led the Grill's 12-hit attack with a triple, double and single while Dorothy Caverly and Sandra Claus each added two safeties. The Yardmen managed only 13 hits led by Penny Hughes' four singles.

Claus whiffed eight in her seven innings on the Cozy rubber with Sue Morton cutting down half that number for BYBF.

Bailey Roofing lost ground to both the Yardmen and Grill when they were upset 11-9 by fourth place Bob Eland - Red Barn in the second half of the Alemite double-header.

The winners pounded out 22 hits to secure the win with Suzanne Fobert leading the way with four singles and a double. Liz Reid had three singles and a double and Sabron Lamunia a home run and single.

Suzanne Fobert linked the Roofers to 14 hits in recording the upset win. Nora Barnacastle and Donna Brant took the loss for the Roofers.

Lillian Berberstock snapped a homer, double and single, and was the loser's big producer.

Hits for Hitter Brown Does Job

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Frank Howard was the designated hitter, but he hit a home run.

But that was off a left-handed pitcher, Frank Howard does not bat against right-handers.

That's Gates Brown's job. So he pinch-hit for the designated hitter and unloaded a two-run shot of his own in the bottom of the 11th inning to power Detroit Tigers to a 7-5 victory over Cleveland Indians Thursday night.

In the other games on the abbreviated American League schedule, Boston Red Sox beat New York Yankees 9-4, Texas Rangers tamed Chicago White Sox 7-2 and Kansas City Royals outslugged Minnesota Twins 12-10.

"It's a garbage rule," Detroit Manager Billy Martin had said before the game in protesting the later experiment during spring training. "I'll love it when I win a game for us, but I'll still think it's a garbage rule."

Brown doesn't agree. "I like the rule and I've always liked it," he said. "Sure, I'd like to play in the field—but if I wasn't a designated hitter, I would hardly be playing at all."

Brown, who has played in the field just once this season, wasn't playing at all Thursday night. Southpaw Brent Strom was the Cleveland pitcher and the victim of Howard's second homer of the season.

He owned a 5-2 lead until the Tigers knocked him out in the sixth. That's when right-hander Tom Timmerman took the mound—and Brown picked up the bat, replacing Howard.

He grounded out in that inning when the Tigers tied the score on a bases-loaded walk and Ed Brinkman's two-run double).

But Timmerman was still around in the 11th inning—and was Brown, who came to bat following Bill Freehan's leadoff single.

Carl Yastrzemski of the Red Sox has spent most of the year in the mediocre .300 range. So he's been patting in extra time in batting practice. It paid off against the Yanks as he triggered a seven-run fourth inning—Boston's biggest of the season—with his 11th homer of the year and capped it with a run-scoring single.

Dave Nelson went three-for-three, scored two runs and drove in one to help Sonny Siebert gain five Rangers' victory over the White Sox.

The Royals had a plethora of heroes in their slugfest against the Twins. John Mayberry, Freddie Patek and Lou Piniella each had two - run hits, but Cookie Rojas outdone them all with a two-run double and a three-run homer.

Rojas' coming - back, Manager Jack McKeon said, "He's giving us the lift we need."

San Francisco Couple Flies Pollution Patrols

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lola and David Walker's plane shuddered in the strong winds that whipped down from the Oakland Hills and swept across San Francisco Bay. It was no day for flying.

But the Walkers were not flying for pleasure. Walker piloted his single-engine plane in a patrol sector defined with military precision. The Walkers were hunting polluters.

Armed with a 35-millimetre camera with a telephoto lens, Mrs. Walker was the observer. She photographed possible violations.

Among the targets this day were a tanker suspected of pumping bilges and a yacht harbor protruding—perhaps illegally—into the bay.

The Walkers are part of a volunteer group including pilots, boat-owners, photographers and scientists who pay $30 in annual dues. Their only benefit is that they sometimes can write off their expenses as tax deductible.

"We have people who love the sea—who love to fly, sail and scuba dive; most are willing to do a little more," says Clark Cameron, director of the Oceanic Society Observation Patrol.

While other areas have tried volunteer pollution detection, Cameron says the patrol is the first comprehensive and long-range effort. By year's end, he hopes to have a fleet of 200 aircraft and 100 boats —at no expense to the taxpayer—at work. Already, he says, about 16 air patrols are flown each week.

Working closely with such governmental agencies as the Environmental Protection Agency, the United States Army Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Coast Guard, the main focus has been the 400-square-mile San Francisco Bay. But there are some patrols along the northern California coast, and there are hopes of expanding.

"Hawaii looks like the first place to which we'll expand," Cameron said.

"The laws are on the books," he said at the headquarters in the city's Fisherman's Wharf area where he and a secretary run the patrol.

"But the various organizations simply do not have the manpower for detecting everywhere. That's our job—to act as the eyes and ears of those agencies.

"The other task is deterrence. A boater is less likely to pollute if he thinks that sailboat he sees nearby is one of ours and there is someone with a pair of binoculars aboard watching."

Members tell headquarters when they see a violation. Cameron then calls the appropriate agency, usually the coast guard.

The number of "kills" since the patrol began operating full-swing in March has been small, however. Walker got one when his observer spotted a tanker discharging oil into a harbor.

Pilot Louis Schmidt and observer Dick Apcar spotted a purple discharge flowing from a chemical plant. The purple turned out to be legal, but the coast guard found hydrofluoric acid being pumped into a nearby marshy area.

Dr. Saul Chaikin reported a discolored discharge from a fibreboard plant. The coast guard found 80,000 gallons of waste being pumped into the bay daily.

In another incident, pilot Ron Gordon spotted a marina dock extending into the ocean near Fort Bragg to the north. His photographs indicate the dock may be a navigational hazard, Cameron said.

None of these incidents has been taken to court.

"Legal action in the environmental field should generally be used as a last resort when all else has failed," said patrol lawyer Joe Forest.

Highlights Of Life

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Things that make life worth living:

The mind-blowing scent of clover on a summer day.

A puppy's first puzzled confrontation with a grown cat.

Reading Emily Dickinson's poetry when you're trying to get over a broken love affair.

Finding out that you're finally so important someone thinks it worthwhile to tap your home phone.

Getting an apology from your bank for making a mistake in your account.

Walking across a field near twilight and hearing the summons of the meadowlark and wondering from what small protection of grass they summon such superb assurance.

After 25 years of shopping and cheque cashing in a modern supermarket, to be recognized by name either by the manager or one of the elderly clerks.

Taking the wife to a place both of you know you can't afford and assuring her she looked twice as smart as the food served.

The miracle of seeing a child scrape its knee and a few days later, as the result of mysterious self-repairs, grin in glee over his self-renewal.

Knowing your father and mother better while they are still alive and you can still explain why you have a sudden realization of them.

Waking through a clearing fog that half confirms and half reveals the mystery and the commonplace of somewhere you may have been too often.

Leaving a poker game with $25 more left in your pocket than you were willing to lose.

Leaving a poker game with a small modesty and $200 more in your pocket than the other players in the game thought you had the mental capacity to part them from.

Just leaving any poker game with a few of your brains and some of your dress still left—and a hopeful feeling about the flo of man generally.

Catching a falling piece of soap in a shower before it skitters across the floor and the wter washes the suds off you.

Now and then to know in the darkness of a hard day the sodden sunlight of help that a prayer can sometimes bring.

All That Jazz

Jazz stars Dizzy Gillespie, top, Dave Brubeck, bottom left, and Ella Fitzgerald perform at a tribute to Louis Armstrong during the Newport Jazz Festival in New York Wednesday. During the performance the stadium they were playing in was named Louis Armstrong Memorial Stadium in honor of the famous trumpeter who died two years ago (AP Photo)

Second Shulman, Milton, Is Crusading Against TV

LONDON (CP) — Television does more harm than good to society, says Canadian-born Milton Shulman, a former television executive and critic.

Shulman, a native of Toronto who now reviews stage productions for the Beaverbrook-owned Evening Standard in London, today TV is a new book called The Ravenous Eye, published here by Cassell.

Subtitled The Impact of the Fifth Factor, the book — Shulman's second critical volume on TV within two months — argues that hitherto a child's development has been determined by four factors: home, neighborhood, school and church.

With the growth of the "telly generation" in Britain, Canada and the United States, Shulman sees the box contributing to a concurrent upsurge in violence, drug-taking, sexual permissiveness and rejection of established values.

He also links it with a marked decline in reading ability among British children which has lately been a subject of concern among educationists here.

Six years of working in TV as an executive with Britain's Independent Granada company and eight years of writing about it have convinced Shulman that "in its present primitive phase in countries like Britain and America it does, on balance, more harm than good."

The average Briton will spend 12 years of his life before the box by the time he is 65, says Shulman, adding "there is practically no aspect of human behavior not affected by its presence."

He sees a clear connection between violence and the TV-nurtured generation. He suggests that the 20,000 hours the average American child is said to watch TV before he leaves high school may encourage drug-taking, gambling, rejection of authority and even hatred of foreigners through sports rivalry.

Shulman, who has been dubbed "the Cassandra of the box," says it would be hard to show that TV has made society "more humanitarian, less cruel, more tolerant, significantly wiser, more than marginally better informed, more accomplished or more understanding than they would have been had television never been invented."

Whatever positive results it has achieved, he maintains, must be balanced against "the frightening confirmation it has made to increasing the pace of change and escalating its consequences."

Shulman also blames TV for concentrating on the trivial in politics and imposing the need for an acceptable TV image on political leaders. After Pierre Trudeau's first, electoral triumph, he says, he was trapped by his image as a swinger.

Elder statesmen like Gladstone, Churchill or Mackenzie King would probably not have been elected to the highest office when over 70 if television had ruled them; nor would they, have been likely to sustain periods of leadership lasting up to 22 years.

Shulman concedes that the institutions TV reveres most — the monarchy and the church — have actually declined in popularity. Polls taken in 1969 and 1971 showed a decline of 14 per cent in Britons who believe their country needs a sovereign — and this despite such unprecedented pepps into royalty's private life as Richard Cawston's acclaimed documentary, Royal Family.

Several reviewers have noted such inconsistencies and accused Shulman of being a man with one idea, delivered in the tone, as TV critic Peter Black of The Daily Mail put it, of "a bullying lawyer."

One reviewer noted in The Times that it is hardly significant to prove that most crime comes from the section of society that does most TV-watching because that section happens also to be the lowest-income group.

Shulman quotes Canadian crime statistics for the 1960s to back up his contention that the "telly generation" has made a "disproportionate" contribution to the crime rate.

Quoting an American professor who estimated the average U.S. child by age 14 would have been 18,000 persons killed on television, Shulman says: "Canada subjects its youth to only marginally less violence on the box than does the United States."

Turning to violence in the daily TV news diet and how the cameras inevitably seek out the peak of action in a riot or strike, Shulman quotes a former BBC reporter, Canadian-born Robert MacNeil, who once said that TV conveys such emotional intensity and can kindle such powerful reactions in its audience that "its responsibility to society . . . is greater than that of print journalism."

Shulman would set up a National Broadcasting Council to counteract the influence of entertainment-oriented TV. This would regulate content and also perhaps investigate "whether or not it would be in the national interest to try and break the public addiction to it," noting the Hungarian practice of one no-TV day a week.

But, says Sean Day-Lewis, TV critic of The Daily Telegraph: "Would the people then turn to elegant conversation, literature and the arts, domestic music-making and constructive hobbies? Cassandra wisely makes no such forecast."

Showbiz Shorts

LONDON (Reuter) — British actor Jack Hawkins, who underwent surgery for throat cancer in 1966, was reported in serious condition at a London hospital Wednesday night after another operation.

"He has had an operation for hemorrhage and his condition is serious at the moment," a hospital spokesman said.

Hawkins, 52, has had several operations since an attempt was made by New York surgeons two months ago to restore his speaking ability with an artificial voice box. They found it impossible to fit him with the instrument.

The actor has been able to speak only by using his stomach muscles and diaphragm. Since the original cancer operation seven years ago he has continued filming with his voice dubbed by another actor.

LONDON (Reuter) — Eight lots from an art collection owned by the late film star Edward G. Robinson were sold for $60,750 at an auction here of impressionist and modern water colors and drawings.

At the same sale at Sotheby's auction rooms Wednesday, a small pen-and-ink drawing by Vincent Van Gogh, entitled March with Water Lilies, was bought anonymously for $67,500.

NEW YORK (AP) — A 80,500-seat stadium where Louis Armstrong played for the 1964 World's Fair, was renamed in honor of the late jazz trumpeter Wednesday, the 73rd anniversary of his birth.

Mayor John Lindsay remembered that Armstrong picked the nearby Corona section of Queens to live in. After unveiling a plaque changing the name of the Singer Bowl to Louis Armstrong Memorial Stadium, the mayor presented a medal to Armstrong's widow Lucille and said:

"Now we'll all do what Louis Armstrong would have wanted us to do — listen to some great music."

A four-hour concert followed, with Dizzy Gillespie and the Latin Street Blues, and Ella Fitzgerald singing Satin Doll, The Man I Love, Cid Lemon Joy.

Miss Fitzgerald did Lemon Joy skat-style — the form of scat singing in which nonsense syllables which Armstrong is credited with initiating. He died July 6, 1971.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — As an experiment two Chattanooga A&I Seventh grid favorites like Glenn Miller, Artie Shaw and Tommy Dorsey on a jukebox at his downtown lounge.

Today, Swinney says he feels a little as if he had won the Irish sweepstakes.

In the last two months he has received letters and telephone calls from across the United States.

Swinney originally put 20 hits from the Second World War era on the music box in his Lamplighter Lounge as a service story then quoted him as saying he never had seen anything like the response his customers showed in playing them.

Since the story on May, Swinney he's been deluged with requests for information from music fans.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON
Saturday, July 7

Aries (March 21-April 19): Life as not, an unforseen occurrence suddenly upsets your schedule. Partnerships, whether personal or business, encounter stress.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Where you'd planned to spend your day, be prepared to do something else. Let people go readily; they'll be back when you need them.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Make everything tidy early, everybody should have everything to do. This is the way to a successful household.

Cancer (June 21-Jul 22): If you find yourself left out; don't let it bother you—you'll be the centre of something else later.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): A temptation for you is the impulsive change you make in matters everybody had accepted as settled. Surfaces are misleading.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It's a great day for skeptics, people who check facts before reacting. Children tend to require unusual attention.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What ever you've neglected in the way of how complicates matters. With prayer and strong resolve, you'll find the way.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your viewpoint is subject to drastic revision your what occurs at first a tiffed to you. Keep your statements simple and direct.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stay out of questionable places and activities. If on the wild side, stick to mate, home base, and be ahead in the final reckoning.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Draw no conclusions from a gay communications. Short cuts are not effective today. Avoid experiments.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An old plan loses its glamor in the harsh light of today's situations. Technical advice is necessary.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Your money has wings and is apt to go with the wind when you open your wallet—with little to show for it.

Fisticuffs are passe. Now it's crossed pencils and the News Quiz.

Oil Supply Pledged While Pipeline Built

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — The government now is ready to consider an application to build an oil pipeline through the Mackenzie district but there are no prospects for one in the near future, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald has informed the United States state department.

In reply to a questionnaire prepared by the state department for the information of the U.S. Congress, Mr. Macdonald repeated Canadian opposition to the proposed Alaska oil line because it involves the pollution hazards of tankers carrying oil along the west coast of Canada. Because of this concern, Canada is ready to guarantee the "total oil supply to the Puget Sound area during the period that a pipeline might be constructed through northern Canada."

Tankers taking oil from the southern end of an Alaska pipeline would deliver it to refineries in the Puget Sound area of Washington state, just south of British Columbia.

However, Mr. Macdonald added that if the Alaska line is built first, then a second oil pipeline through the Northwest Territories and Alberta had "little attraction" for the federal government.

He also said that while the government is determined to ensure just settlement of Indian and Eskimo claims in the north, it also is determined to go ahead with northern development, "in the best interest of Canada."

In reply to other questions from the state department, Mr. Macdonald repeated that it is the government's objective to to acquire 51-per-cent ownership of a proposed gas line in the North.

Parley Is Split

HELSINKI (CP) — Officials at the European security conference spent hours today haggling over the wording of a communique summing up its work.

But External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp of Canada, leaving the sessions for his scheduled plane departure from Helsinki, said that the week-long meeting had been "a most encouraging conference."

The last-minute disagreement over the wording of a communique reference to Friday's statement regarding a controversial Maltese proposal about involvement of Tunisia and Algeria in the conference was "of no significance," Sharp told reporters.

"We never needed a communique anyway," he said.

Despite the disagreement over the Maltese proposal, in which Canada played a prominent role, Sharp said there had been no bitter words at the conference.

"This is a remarkable development in international affairs," he said.

But he warned his listeners that "We are only at the beginning of our work."

This week's 35-state conference of foreign ministers was expected to set the stage for committee-level bargaining in Geneva on an actual agreement covering security and co-operation in Europe.

This bargaining, which begins Sept. 18, will be slow and tedious, said Sharp.

"But the longer it takes the better are the prospects for success."

Interprovincial and Westcoast Get Leave to Boost Capacity

OTTAWA (CP) — An application by Interprovincial Pipe Line Co. to increase the capacity of its crude oil pipeline from Western Canada to Ontario was approved Friday by the National Energy Board.

The company said the extra capacity is needed to meet the demands of increased Ontario refinery capacity scheduled to be completed in 1974.

Interprovincial plans to construct about 142 miles of 46-inch pipe in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and about 28 miles of 30-inch pipe in two separate loops in Ontario, along with other work.

The estimated cost of the work is $65.5 million.

The application was opposed by Pollution Probe which said the program was premature and should be rejected with provision for reconsideration after determination of Canada's longer-term oil export policy.

The board said the added pipe is required to provide greater assurance for deliveries of crude oil needed by Ontario refineries.

It was not for the purpose of increasing exports to the United States.

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Energy Board approved an application Friday by Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. of Vancouver to add 15 loops totalling 86.4 miles to its natural gas pipeline through British Columbia.

The project, to be completed by Jan. 15, 1974, will cost an estimated $28.3 million and will give the company the increased capacity it says it needs to meet growing supply demands.

The Westcoast pipeline carries natural gas from northern B.C., Alberta, the Yukon and Northwest Territories to customers in British Columbia and the United States.

It links with the El Paso Natural Gas Co. at the international border between B.C. and the state of Washington.

More Money Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Banks and trust and insurance companies have been asked to make more mortgage funds available to help stabilize rising mortgage interest rates, Finance Minister John Turner said Friday in the Commons. Mr. Turner told NDP Leader David Lewis that he had no authority under the Bank Act, however, to compel lending institutions to do so.

Praying Nuns Arrested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four nuns were arrested in the White House Friday when they left a regular tour just before it ended, knelt down and began praying. Members of the protective service said the women were booked on charges of unlawful entry. The sisters of the Notre Dame de N'mur teaching order from the Washington-Baltimore area have been fasting since June 25, when President Nixon vetoed a bill which would have cut off funding for Cambodian bombing. All four were freed on bail.

Attacks Planned

BELFAST (AP) — Irish Republican Army guerrillas are planning to step up their mortar attacks against British troops and security forces in Northern Ireland, reports from Dublin said today. The reports, quoting IRA Provisional sources in the Irish capital, said the guerrillas are planning hit-and-run attacks on army bases and police stations with home-made mortars.

Leaves Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A United States business executive who was freed in exchange for a $3-million ransom left the Argentine capital Friday on a flight to Brazil. He was released Thursday and immediately went to the home of a friend in Buenos Aires.

First Day Fruitless

SAIGON (CP) — A search party from the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) returned empty-handed to Saigon today after the first day's search for two Canadian truce observers missing in Viet Cong territory in a rubber plantation east of Saigon.

The team is composed of four Canadians and two Hungarians and was accompanied by three Viet Cong liaison officers. It travelled in two ICCS helicopters.

Informed sources said that the team returned to Saigon after eight hours in Viet Cong territory near Cam Tam, about 35 miles east of Saigon, where the two men were last seen.

But the sources could not say what the team had accomplished or where exactly they had been. The team will fly out again Sunday to continue the search for Capts. Ian Paiten of Toronto and Fletcher Thomson of Ottawa.

New Zealand Ship Enters A-test Zone

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — The New Zealand frigate Otago steamed into France's nuclear testing zone in the South Pacific today with battle pennants flying and shadowed by a French reconnaissance aircraft.

The 2,400-ton frigate entered the 130-mile danger zone around Mururoa Atoll early today but is under strict instructions not to penetrate the 12-mile territorial limit around the atoll itself.

It was reported that the large battle ensigns—emblems of signalling a ship going into battle were hoisted to facilitate identification of the Otago.

Ontario Price Of Gasoline Raised a Cent

TORONTO (CP) — An increase of one cent a gallon in gasoline prices over most of Ontario was announced Friday by Imperial Oil Ltd.

A statement from J. A. Armstrong, Imperial president, said the increase was an attempt to achieve a better return on investment in the province.

Dollar Hits New Lows

FRANKFURT (AP) — The United States dollar hit new lows for the ninth consecutive day Friday, bringing turmoil to European exchanges and rumors of a new realignment of major currencies this weekend.

The head of the Swiss national bank asked how long the U.S. was prepared to "watch idly" the continued dollar slump without intervening in the market to buy dollars.

The value of a dollar dropped three per cent in 36 hours on the Zurich market, to a record low of 2.705 Swiss francs.

In Paris, it dropped through its psychological barrier of four francs to an all-time low of 3.96 francs.

In West Germany, the price was 2.34 to 2.36 German marks to $1, almost one mark less than at the beginning of the year, and nine pfennings under Thursday.

This meant that U.S. travellers who, through most of the 1960s paid 25 cents for each mark, have to pay nearly 43 cents a mark.

Link Cut

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — The New Zealand dollar will be revalued upward by three per cent Monday and its links with the United States dollar will be severed, Finance Minister Wallace Rowling said today.

More Disclosures Likely On Nixon Fund Donations

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The admission by American Airlines that it pumped $70,000 into President Nixon's re-election coffers looked certain today to spur similar confessions from other major companies.

The disclosure by the airline's chairman, George Spater, also looked as though it might generate demands for a closer check on who provided the millions of dollars that went into the Nixon campaign fund.

Some of the money was apparently used to pay for the burglary and bugging attempt at the Democratic party's Watergate headquarters here last year.

Spater—whose airline is the second-largest U.S. domestic carrier—said he was treated by Nixon' former personal lawyer, Herbert Kalmbach, who said he expected $300,000.

Spater said the payments were made in five installments between November, 1971, and March, last year. Only the last payment came from corporate sources, he said.

Under U.S. electoral law, it is illegal for corporations to make contributions to election campaign funds. But payments are often made in the name of individuals, who are then repaid by their employers.

Nixon Feels China Wants To End War

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (Reuter) — President Nixon is satisfied that China is genuinely interested in a settlement of the Cambodian war, informed sources said today.

The message that China feels it has a big stake in a political solution to Cambodia and an ending peace throughout Southeast Asia and came through in talks here between the president and Huang Chen, China's unofficial ambassador in Washington, the sources said.

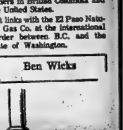
Nixon conferred Friday with the Chinese envoy and a decision was reached on the timing of a visit by presidential adviser Henry Kissinger to Peking for meetings with Chinese Premier Chou En-lai.

Rhodesians Hunt Abducted Children

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Rhodesian security forces scoured dense bushland today in a search for heavily-armed guerrillas herding about 70 Africans—mostly women and children—toward the Mozambique border.

The captives, including 58 girls aged between 13 and 15, are the remnants of a 250-member party abducted by the guerrillas in a raid Thursday night on the remote St. Albert's Roman Catholic mission station, about 50 miles from the border.

Security men recovered 193 children Friday in a clash that left one guerrilla dead. Another 23 pupils and three teachers returned to the mission late Friday night after escaping.



The guerrillas, numbering 25 to 30, dressed in camouflage uniforms and using sub-machine-guns, told German Jesuit priests running the mission that they came to liberate Rhodesia and were taking the children to guerrilla training camps.

A mission staff member, Rev. Lorenz Von Walter, said one guerrilla told him the children would be taken eventually to China for training.

The security men, lighting up the night sky with flares, have followed the guerrillas, now believed to have split into two groups, into the Zambesi Valley more than 12 miles from the hill-top mission.

Trenton Bureau

Town Hall Nearly Ready

By COLIN BRUCE

The word now is Trenton might have a new town hall by the middle of August.

Council's new home won't have an elevator for a while but town hall staff will be able to begin scurrying back and forth from the old to the new, loaded down with files and office bric a brac to add a personal touch to the much-discussed hall of municipal decision.

While only two members of town council had any part in preliminary discussions and the final decision to build, Councillor Bob Patrick queried two weeks ago if a progress report could not be made on the status of construction.

This past Wednesday night, Tony Lansing, principal of the consulting firm handling the project, came to discuss payment of an execution bill but could give no clue as to when the offices and parking garage complex would be complete.

As of Thursday, David Humm, member of Lansing's firm responsible for following the construction, says six weeks for completion but could not guess when the elevator would arrive.

Controversy has become the middle name of the new town hall, beginning with the cost, always a key factor in taxpayers' minds. The first design included all kinds of extras, such as a place for the general public to view council proceedings and carpeting. The lowest tender offered to build at a cost of approximately $425,000 which rose the hair on council's heads and the ire of ratepayers.

The scissors were brought out and after a snip here and there the price was brought down to a more digestible $364,000.

Council, if it hasn't already anticipated inflated costs since tender and unforeseen extras, may need a large-sized broom when a report is made.

Recently, members of council balked at having to pay $1,400 for the removal of a large slab of concrete uncovered during early excavation. Following Mr. Lansing's brief Wednesday night, council gave in and moved to pay up.

The progress report will ask council to dig a little deeper into the town's purse when Mr. Humm explains construction costs will probably escalate to about $380,000 by completion date.

Since the scissors were brought out, it seems now some of the clippings from the architect's floor are being pasted back into the design of things. Mr. Humm guesses another $2,000 or so will be spent on carpet, plus the cost of floodlighting and a $1,000 aluminum town crest to be mounted on the building's face.

And, unless someone is hired to sit high atop town hall in the belfry to crank up the clock, the town will have to pay about $2,000 to have the timepiece converted to a plug-in variety.

On top of all this will be the cost of furnishing the offices and council chambers.

Planning Board Study

More Mobile Homes Predicted

The mobile home has been gathering momentum as a new residential living style in the Quinte district.

Now, its growing impact — and status — has been accorded local official recognition.

The approving gesture has been signalled by the Quinte Planning Board which has adopted findings of staff planners who spent a year studying the significance of the mobile home.

The study reasons: Evolution from the travel trailer has tended to prejudice opinion about the facility as a housing form. Yet, modern mobile homes — and their owners — are no more transient than dwellers in a housing subdivision.

In fact, such facilities have emerged as a social alternative to high rents and costlier conventional home ownerships.

On such conclusions the study recommended:

—Mobile homes be permitted as a housing type within the Quinte Planning Area.

—Mobile homes be located in parks within urban areas.

—Such parks be a permitted use in serviced residential areas of a municipality, relative to local official plans.

There were some cautions written into the study, adopted Thursday night by the QPB.

Indiscriminate "mixing of mobile homes with conventional housing was deemed a "mutual disadvantage" to both.

For civic planning there is a redevelopment problem. Mobile homes, unlike conventional dwellings, depreciate. For municipalities this would mean regulations to ensure replacements as the units deteriorate.

The study, presented by QPB senior planner Richard Dansiger, predicted the growing popularity of mobile homes will continue to make an impact.

The number "used in Canada can be expected to increase significantly during the forseeable future." As a production industry in Canada it faces "excellent prospects" for future market expansion.

"Such growing popularity is the result of social change in North America, and these were among other contributing factors cited by Mr. Dansiger:

—Smaller families, making reduced living quarters feasible.

—Increasing leisure time which has boosted the attractions of a home needing less maintenance than traditional dwellings.

—Mobile homes are sold with furniture, appliances, minimizing moving problems.

The study also involved a survey of local mobile home sites.

It found dwellers are mainly younger families in middle income brackets.

It also discovered the "vast majority" of residents happy with their homes, although there was some dissatisfaction with the parks in which they quartered.

"Park residents indicated that closeness to job, convenience, economy and privacy were the best — liked features of park-dwelling," reported the planners.

The major complaint about park living was what the rent is too high for the level of services and facilities provided . . ." (Average monthly rental worked out around $30).

There also were complaints about the lack of standardized regulations for homes and parks and lack of any mechanism of application with managements concerning park conditions.

Residents also want to live as close as possible to urban areas. They would "prefer to escape the park setting and the added restrictions in a subdivision in either an urban area, or rural area near an urban centre."

Street Work Is Sought From Deseronto Council

DESERONTO — Reeve George Lyon has again called for town council to spend funds on a survey of street needs here.

What's required, he told council, is a five - year plan, outlining yearly stages of work.

The reeve's promptings followed remarks from John A. Layfield for council action on a broken drain at George and Thomas streets. The problem makes use of his driveway difficult and the only solution is complete street repairs including drains and catch basins, Mr. Layfield said.

Streets committee chairman James McVicker said there were not sufficient funds available for needed work.

Mr. Layfield later told council although taxes were reduced this year he would prefer them unchanged in order to fund necessary work.

try was a bridge linking the two great population centres of Mesopotamia and Egypt.

One king supported the Chal-
dean regime for a few years, but finally revolted. His successor, after a three-month reign, had to surrender the city of Jerusalem to the armies of Nebuchadnezzar in 598 B.C. Many Jews were taken into captivity in Babylon. A subsequent rebellion was crushed in 587 B.C.
Most of the remaining citizens of Jerusalem followed their co-religionists or co-patriots in to exile.

The heirs of God's promises ate the bitter fruit of slavery.
Their voices sank to silence as they tried to sing the Lord's song in a strange land. However, soon their thoughts were turned to the hair's need of survival.

It became easier and easier to forget the glory of Israel's past, the holy city, and the covenant that God had made with the Holiness Church near Newport, Tenn. One man was bitten during the ritual, conducted to show faith in Jesus. Several hundred persons from eight states converged on the church which had been ordered by the courts not to handle snakes. (AP Photo)

Secret of Assisting Needy
Is to Sit Where They Sit

By REV. GORDON C. SMYTH

their ancestors. And their cap-tors were shrewd. They picked out the best Jews who showed special ability. These were admitted into the social and economic life of Babylon. In addition to servitude, the process of assimilation was well under way.

With this background we are now in a position to read the opening three chapters of the book of Ezekiel. At this point,
Ezekiel heard the call of God.
"Son of man, I send you to a nation of rebels." The call must have grated on his aristocratic priestly ears. He had been sold to leave Jerusalem and go to people guilty of the almost unpardonable sin of forsaking the faith of their fathers. But it was a different matter when he reached Babylon.

The record says, "I came to the exiles who dwelt by the river Chebar. And I sat there overwhelmed among them seven days." Ezekiel learned that one is in touch with God by being in touch with God's needy children. Now he was fit to become a prophet. The record continues, "At the end of seven days, the word of the Lord came to me : 'Son of man, I have made you a watchman for the house of Israel'."

We learn here the secret of ennobling friendship. There are boys and girls feeling the mystery of life and yet unable to bring themselves to confide in someone who might advise them well about their sexual drives and religious doubts. Where is our sensitivity? Have we forgotten that we once sat where they are sitting.

We have here the secret of the Incarnation. I can think of no more precious reference to Christ than Hebrews 2:17. "He had to be made like his brethren in every respect, so that he might become a merciful and faithful high priest in the service of God." Name your situation. Christ understands, and, understanding, sympathi-zes, and, sympathizing, blesses or forgives. He sat where we are sitting.

We have here the secret of the function of worship. Although Ezekiel received a call from God, it was only when he identified himself with these exiles that he grasped an insight into what his life's work was to be. How effectively do you and I guard against the supreme hypocrisy of uttering before God words of ritual that have lost immediate and urgent meaning; of expressing in church a faith and purpose that are not seriously related to our daily affairs?

"The parish priest of Auster-litz
Climbed up in a high church
steeple,
To be near to God that he might hand
God's word unto the people.

"And in sermon script he daily wrote
What he thought was sent from heaven,
And he dropped it down on the people's heads
Two times each day in seven.

"In his time God said:
'Come down and die.'
And he cried from out his steeple:
'Where art thou, Lord?' and the Lord replied:
'Down here among the people'."

Missouri Synod of Lutherans Faces Broiling Controversy

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — A note of international intrigue—the so-called "Brazilian connection"—has been alleged in a broiling controversy in a big Lutheran denomination over doctrine and power.

The struggle comes to a head here in the ensuing seven days of the biennial starting tonight, governing convention of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, which has about three million members.

At stake basically is the issue of whether theology should be open or regulated from the top, and that, in turn, hinges mainly on a battle over the church's presidency.

Shortly before the 1,000 delegates began convening here, opponents of the incumbent president, Rev. Dr. J. A. O. Preus, said his backers have arranged for extra supporting votes from a Brazil church district.

Robert Madigan, a Darien, Conn., delegate, said church money from the United States has been funnelled into Brazil, including travel expenses for an "unprecedented number" of Brazil delegates, conservatively aligned with Dr. Preus.

"This shows just how close this election for the presidency is," Madigan said. Several opposing candidates have been nominated, and others can be nominated from the floor.

Ann Landers

Kids' Attitudes Questioned

Dear Ann Landers: I am 28 years old, not exactly ancient. I write this letter not to criticize but to ask a question. It's about California teen-agers. Are they different from New England teens? The way California kids talk to their relatives ruined my vacation.

My 15-year-old cousin tells her mother to shut up. Her brother, who is 14, says to his father, "You have rocks in your head." He then says to his grandfather, "And you are nuts, too."

When the mother asks these children to do something, they just sit. Tonight she asked the boy to bring the card table in from the storage room. He said, "Can't you see I'm busy watching my favorite TV show?" She said, "Oh, I'm sorry, dear," and got the card table herself. I sat there dumbfounded.

I have heard the same smart-mouth talk from their friends. Is it regional? Where I was brought up, such a thing is unheard of. Please comment.—Near Waldsea's Pond ....

Dear Waldy: Geography has nothing to do with it. Show me a smart-mouth kid, and I'll show you a home where the parents have abdicated their responsibilities. This happens in New England as in California.

Unfortunately, the kids pay the price for permissive upbringing. Nobody likes obnoxious, disrespectful behavior. These children take their smart-mouth, disrespectful attitude to school and have trouble with teachers. When they get out into the real world they results are sometimes disastrous.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband had an affair with my best friend two years ago. It was a cynical, cold business which left me shattered. It was very hard for me to forgive and forget. First, because there was no evidence he was sorry. Second, the woman and her husband belong to our social circle and we saw them often. (Divorce was out of the question. We have several children who need their father).

Fortunately for me, my husband was transferred out of town a year ago. My joy was short-lived, however, because I learned last week that we are moving back. I have made it clear that when we return I do not want to re-establish the friendship. He agreed.

Last night he started to push for "togetherness" again and I am beside myself. He tells me he has been asking the woman's husband for favors and professional advice and it isn't possible to ignore him socially. He wants me to agree to have them to dinner and to accept their invitation like old times. How can I get out of it?—The Other Woman's Friend.

Dear F.: Your husband could repay his obligations by taking the other fellow to lunch, but this isn't what he's after. I have a feeling you're going to lose the battle in the long run. So face up to it. You'll need an escape valve for your anger. Get some counselling and learn how to live with that which cannot be changed.

Dear Ann Landers: I was engaged for three years. My fiancé found someone else and broke the engagement last week. This morning I received a letter asking that I return the ring and all gifts "as a matter of integrity." Many of the gifts are in use (TV, radio, humidifier, sun lamp, etc.). What should I do? — Undecided

Dear Un: You are under no obligation to return anything unless you want to.

Successful Living

Grandmother Specializes In Life Saving Stories

By DORIS CLARK

Remember the story I told about Kim Adkins, the little Canadian girl visiting in Austria, who rescued a three-year-old from drowning in seven feet of icy ditch-water - herself treading water and holding him high until help came?

"After church Sunday morning our grandchildren change into play clothes and come here for dinner with their parents. They range from three years to nine. Four of them. Five-year-old Mary and seven-year-old Joan sit on either side of me at one end. Nine-year-old Bill and three-year-old Danny sit on either side of "Grandpa" at the other end with parents on either side in between.

"We make it a formal meal and expect the best of manners. My linen tablecloths are wearing thin but as long as they are snowy white who cares. They always notice the flowers in the centre. We try to make it a highlight of the week. The mother is an only child with no people now. I wish you could hear how happy the children's feet sound as they come up the kitchen steps.

"It makes a lot of work for me but Ivy husband gets home from church soon enough to help me with the finishing touches as he attends an early service near by. Our son lives across town.

"As soon as we get seated and I draw a big breath I always forget Joan will say, 'Grandma, tell us a story.' It is a great opportunity. I have had wide experience with children of all ages. Since I am in my seventy-sixth year recovering from a broken hip I have not too much time left to leave the rich heritage of stimulating stories of actual experience. So many wonderful things have happened to me.

"There is much discouragement in the air, I see children very much aware of trouble. When I read your article about Kim I knew what I would tell the children last Sunday. What made it additionally effective was that their mother specialized in languages and German was included. She gave us the German that the little girl used. Mothers get tired and at times they know all they do is taken for granted so it was a way of showing the children another side of their mother.

"Thank you again for telling us about Kim. It had great effect on Joan. Her eyes shone for the rest of the day."

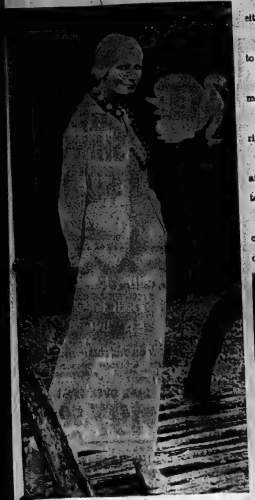
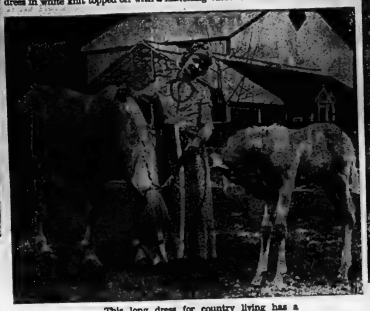
...And the Living Is Easy

TORONTO (CP) — The spotlight is on easy clothes for country living, either at the farm or the summer cottage.



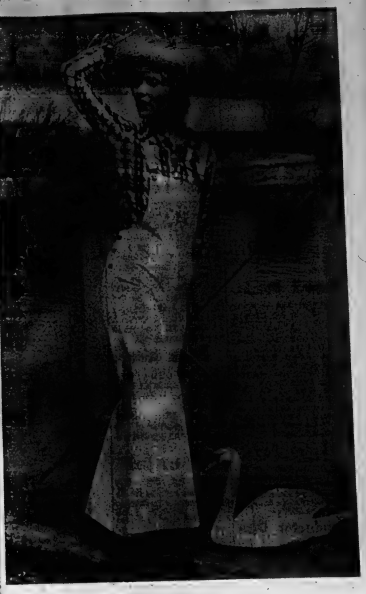
Fashions range from farmerette overalls in plain colors and floral patterns to long slinky dresses and suits with military pockets.

They are made of cotton, calico, dimity and knit and are the kind of clothes most women enjoy wearing throughout spring and summer.



Calico and dimity, old-fashioned fabrics with a nostalgic country look are right back in style again.

Fashions from Eaton's, Holt Renfrew and Fairweather were photographed at the farms of Brig. and Mrs. Eric Wallace and Mrs. Gladys C. Dillon at Georgetown, near Toronto.



Any woman living the country life can look pretty by daytime in floral overalls and a polyester crepe shirt. And for evenings switch to a slinky evening dress in white knit topped off with a matching turban.

Long slinky dress is for evenings in the country. The white knit dress has a turban to match. (CP Photo)

This long dress for country living has a calico top and print dimity skirt. It also has a ruffled hem. (CP Photo)

Farmerette overalls are in beige calico and adorned with gold studs. Straw hat and plaid seersucker shirt completes the outfit. (CP Photo)

Mitchell Won't Name President

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Senate Watergate committee hears testimony next week from John Mitchell, 58—a man who once had ready access to the president's ear but who now couldn't get within shouting distance of the White House.

But William Huntley, Mitchell's lawyer, said Mitchell "definitely has no information implicating the president in the Watergate bugging or the cover-up."

The main interest likely will centre on Mitchell's testimony about former presidential aides H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

TORONTO (CP) — Uncontested divorces obtained under Ontario's legal aid plan will be cheaper this fall when a new fee schedule on lawyers takes effect, Attorney-General Dalton Bales said Friday.

Decision Later

VILLE MARIE, Que. (CP) — Superior Court Judge Camille Bergeron withheld judgment Friday on an injunction against 10 citizens of Temiscaming, Que., for blockading the passage of plywood down the Ottawa River.

Upper Ottawa Improvement Co., an organization responsible for the movement of wood down the waterway to processing plants along the shores, had sought the injunction.

The hearings followed almost two weeks of attempts by citizens using pleasure craft to prevent a company tug from opposing a boom gap near Temiscaming.

Revise Act

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Dalton Bales announced plans Friday to amend the Juror's Act and replace the grand jury system this fall.

Under present law, firemen, doctors, dentists, nurses, clergy, pilots, seamen, editors, reporters and printers, along with railway and public transit workers, are exempt from jury duty.

Many of these will be liable for service when the new act is tabled this fall, Mr. Bales said in an interview.

New Penalty

TORONTO (CP) — Persons charged with minor traffic offences will come before Ontario's first informal traffic tribunal this fall where a new form of penalty will be imposed on the guilty, Attorney-General Dalton Bales said Friday.

Drivers found guilty of minor traffic offences will be fined and told to attend films, lectures and refresher courses in safe driving, Mr. Bales said. He did not elaborate further.

Prices Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices in the United States shot up at the highest rate in more than a generation last month before President Nixon froze prices for 60 days, the government reported Friday.

Teachers Balk

KENSINGTON, P.E.I. (CP) — Delegates attending the annual convention of the Canadian Teachers' Federation balked Friday when asked to approve policy statement calling for federal government involvement to alleviate educational disparities across the country.

Most of the 56 delegates protested they were not sufficiently aware of the background involved to support such a measure.

Instead, the meeting voted to turn the policy statement into a working paper for discussion during the next year. It will be presented at the 1974 annual meeting in Calgary.

Man Killed

PORT BURWELL, Ont. (CP) — A Petrolia, Ont., man was killed and several other men injured Friday when an explosion ripped through an offshore oil and gas drilling rig near this Lake Erie community about 25 miles east of St. Thomas.

Killed was Wayne Isaac Ferguson, 26, an employee of Halliburton Petroleum Services which was drilling for Consumers' Gas Co.

Returns Home

HAVANA (Reuter) — An 18-year-old Canadian woman left here today for home after spending a week in a Havana hotel with her father who is serving a 30-year sentence for smuggling arms into Cuba in the late 1960s.

Ruth Anne MacLean, of Waterloo, Ont., had not seen her father, Ronald Lippert, 40, since he was tried and sentenced for shipping arms to anti-Castro groups in 1963.

She was accompanied on her trip to Cuba by one of Lippert's sisters, Rosemary Lawrence, who said she is "reasonably optimistic" about her brother's chance of getting his sentence reduced for good behavior.

Flight Delayed

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Vancouver-bound Air Canada DC-9 with 94 passengers on board was delayed 20 minutes Thursday because 26 French-Canadian passengers refused to continue their flight without a French-speaking cabin attendant on board.

The French-speaking passengers had boarded the flight in Montreal, but the French-speaking crew was changed here.

Time Out On The Bay

The scenic Bay of Quinte is one of the natural resources available to young Mohawks now learning outdoor skills on Tyendinaga Reserve. Boating, fishing, campfire cooking are all on the program at Camp Gen'te a summer recreation project launched this year for youngsters of the reserve community.

Young Mohawks Take to Outdoors

TYENDINAGA — Young Mohawks on this reserve have been learning how to use bows and arrows this past week.

The practice is purely recreational.

Archery techniques are only one of the skills on the program at Camp Ben Gen'te.

Located on a scenic site on the Bay of Quinte shoreline, the camp is a community undertaking designed to involve reserve youngsters in an organized outing into fresh-air leisure.

The program got underway this week. Before it folds its tents, it will have provided a first-time summer experience for more than 50 young people.

The program is in keeping with modern trends which have made camping a widespread leisure-time activity, explains Doug Green, 19-year-old camp supervisor.

Many of the youngsters have never camped out before and the western part of town "is a chance to get acquainted" with the skills needed for closer enjoyment of the outdoors, says Doug.

Among other activities on the program are boating, swimming, hiking, fishing with equipment made on the spot, and campfire cooking.

Organizing the camp drew on support from a variety of sources.

The idea was first broached earlier this year by Rev. Cyril Betts, Anglican chaplain on the reserve.

A steering committee was formed to seek out support sources — including funding.

Financial donations came from the reserve's Mohawk Recreation Committee and the Mohawk Ladies' Guild. But for the major contribution needed the group applied to the federal government's Opportunities For Youth program.

OFY gave the plan sanction in spring — with a $4,800 grant.

Then a reserve resident, Johnson Hurst, donated the campsite for the month.

The armed services, says Doug, loaned a basic need — three 16-man Arctic tents.

Although campfire cookery is part of the program, a canteen was obviously needed. The organizers found one nearby — a shack once used in drag-racing programs on the nearby wartime training Mohawk airfield. It was hauled to the campsite and repainted.

Camp Gen'te, now in full swing, divides the youngsters according to age and sex, scheduling their stays at the camp at various time throughout the month.

Help Needed For Trail

By MIKE PATERSON
— staff Reporter

Unless help comes from somewhere, the Quinte district's most ambitious outdoor project will topple. The 351-mile Hastings - Prince Edward Recreational Trail faces fragmentation, disuse and final abandonment.

Launched as a $133,000, LIP, make-work program the crude basis of the trail was largely set, stretching from Lake Ontario to near Algonquin Provincial Park. Time was short, expenses were high and there were not even enough of the little metal markers to properly complete the job.

It was hoped local trail committees would establish themselves to care for the trail and maintain it. To take care of the small jobs that did not get done in the first place and, as time went by, undertake real improvements.

Not one local committee has been established.

Student memberships in the association cost $2 a year. Adult memberships are $5, family memberships $7 and supporting organization can join for $10 a year. Supporting organizations include a horseback riding club, the Ontario Trail Riders' Association of Scarborough, two snowmobile clubs and a motorcycle club.

Total membership? About 40, says secretary - treasurer Grant Harvey. The Belleville Employment Committee donated $200 toward the trail early on and recently another $200 came from the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association.

Fresh bids for government allocations, federal and provincial, have fallen flat. The association is left with a handful of enthusiasts who have no funds to work with.

Grant Harvey suggests root of the problem is the trail's availability to a range of interest groups. Hikers and motorcyclists, horsemen and snowmobilers, "in spending a large amount of public fund on the trail we realized we couldn't very well limit it to any one particular type of user as is the case with other trail systems," he said. Consequently, we have quite publicly indicated the trail is open for all kinds of users whose recreationalities and incompatibilities is something that has to be sorted out by the users themselves." This has inhibited the formation of local trail clubs, he feels.

Grant Harvey said the trail is still definitely in use. Scouts classes, militiamen, hikers, bikers, horse riders and others have travelled portions of the trail. "But we haven't even had the money to advertise it," he said.

A set of seven trail maps are available at $1.50 or 25c a map. The Belleville Chamber of Commerce has them but Mr. Harvey says the trail association has had no interest from other Chambers of Commerce and the Association, on its part, has not approached them. A general brochure prepared for the official opening has run out and there are no funds to get more printed.

Facilities along the route were researched in the initial stages of the work, but because of the pressure to create jobs in a hurry, researchers were tied up supervising work gangs and the task was never completed.

Horse-leasing stables, snowmobile rental outlets, motels, camping grounds and stores along the way have not supported the trail financially or through advertising. They have not even been approached.

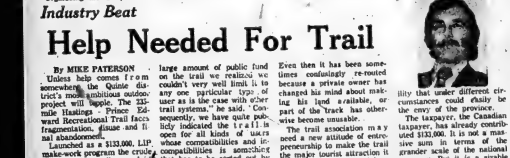
Mr. Harvey said the ultimate goal envisaged included loop trails to points of interest or special scenic beauty, campsites and so on. It only got as far as the basic trail. Even then it has been sometimes confusingly re-routed because a private owner has changed his mind about making his land available, or part of the track has otherwise become unusable.

The trail association may need a new attitude of entrepreneurship to make the trail the major tourist attraction it potentially is. Commercial assistance has to be thrummed up — and for commercial interests along the route the trail the bay-city should be blatantly obvious. Tourism is very big business and it is tending more and more toward the outdoors; to camping, hiking, riding and simply enjoying the fresh air and scenery of the wilds.

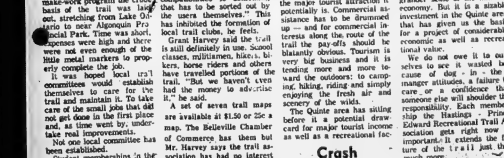
The Quinte area has sitting before it a potential drawcard for major tourist income as well as a recreational fa-

Crash Is Fatal

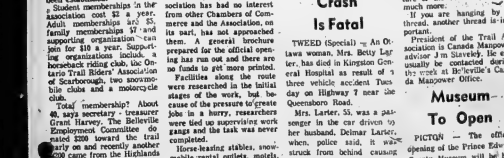
TWEED (Special) — An Ottawa woman, Mrs. Betty Lagler, has died in Kingston General Hospital as result of a three vehicle accident Tuesday on Highway 7 near the Queensboro Road.



Mrs. Larter, 55, was a passenger in the car driven by her husband, Delmar Larter, when, police said, it was struck from behind causing it to swerve into the path of an oncoming vehicle.



The Ottawa woman suffered head injuries and was transferred to Kingston hospital in critical condition.



A second woman, Mrs. Lillian McMahon, of Eldorado, driving the oncoming car, was admitted to Bellville hospital with chest and arm lacerations, while two children were treated and released.

Charges "Vendetta"

Cooperman Offers Resignation to UCS

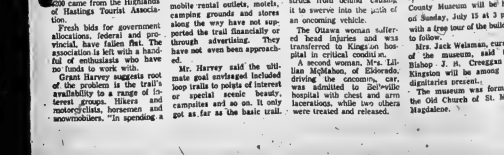
By MIKE PATERSON
— staff Reporter

Executive director of the Belleville and District United Community Services, Isadore Cooperman, has asked that he be relieved of his position August 31, "for the best interests and welfare of all concerned — not the least being that of my family."

"I think my usefulness has come to an end and I've never in all my professional life gone through such a vendetta of harassment and vilification," he said, today.

"It's unfortunate, but part of the realities of life that a small group of determined people can pursue their goals to whatever ends they have because others are apathetic."

He said he was convinced "this vendetta" would not let up. "The organization and the community could not help but suffer," said Mr. Cooperman.



"Mine is the satisfaction of having moved UCS forward during the past three years. I wish it well during the days and years ahead," he said in a letter to UCS acting president Lynne Wickson.

A recent letter from Alderman Jean Smith in support of Mr. Cooperman, who holds a Master of Arts Degree in social work from New York's Columbia University, said: "I know through our efforts to find a person qualified for such a position that we were very lucky to have Mr. Cooperman as an applicant."

Mayor Robin McFeey also volunteered support for Mr. Cooperman in a letter dated June 23. "There has never been one occasion when I have not been totally satisfied with his work or the assistance he gave me," she wrote.

UCS past - president R. J. Ord said it is unlike her that when Mr. Cooperman was appointed in 1970 UCS was "floundering in a very real sense.

"It was struggling from a lack of vigor and it's day-to-day operations were functioning only with difficulty," said Mr. Ord. "Isadore Cooperman restored a sense of purpose to the UCS and since his arrival it has answered an increasingly active role in the field of Social Planning."

He said if UCS had new leadership, replacing Mr. Cooperman, the agency would likely assume a less active role.

Similar letters of support came from Glynn Reynolds, president of the Quinte Club of Belleville, Ian McLennan, director of Queen's Belleville Legal Aid, Don Williams, Gerald Wishart and Loyalist College Dean of Faculty, Paul King.

"I am very proud of the friends I have made and the job I have been doing," said Mr. Cooperman. "But one of our board members hit it on the head when he said that over the past year he wondered how I'd been able to keep my sanity.

"But I don't want to get into a matter of names and so on — I don't want to add any bitterness to this situation," said Mr. Cooperman.

He said he was seeking another position.

"I don't see anything in Belleville to stay for unless something comes up."

Mr. Wickson, said he personally was not going to accept or reject Mr. Cooperman's request but that he believed of the directorship. "It's a Board decision," he said. "At all executive meeting on Monday it will be one of the items discussed."

He said a final decision would probably have to be made at a general board meeting.

"We met last Thursday to continue business carried over from a week earlier. It is our custom to meet monthly so it would be approximately a month before our next meeting," said Mr. Wickson. He declined further comment.

Seek 40 Craft For Canoe Race

TRENTON — More than a dozen crews have already registered for this community's annual 64-mile spring canoe race down the Trent River.

Trent-On Waterways Canoe Club, organizer of the event, would like to see 40 craft entered in the competition being held over two days — July 21-22.

This year's event will feature two segments to reach paddlers of all proficiencies.

The first two classes will begin the race at Serpent Mounds near Peterborough. In the first day there will paddle to Campbellford — a distance of 30 miles. After an overnight rest these classes will be joined by pleasure and junior classes.

The total fleet will then continue down to the river's mouth at Trenton — 32 miles to finish the race at Centennial Park.

The open and amateur, or pleasure classes, will be judged on total time for the 64-mile paddle over the two days with cash prizes for open competitors and trophies for the amateur classes.

David Camp, a race organizer, said the more serious, experienced paddlers, would be in these two classes.

The third, or pleasure class, will also be competing for trophies and certificates will be awarded to each of the junior classes of competition.

Entries are still open at $7, a paddler. Paddlers intending to compete from Serpent Mounds or Campbellford or use camp in Campbellford or use nearby hotel facilities, but must make separate arrangements for gear or reservations.

Complete information and race rules are available from the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, co-sponor of the event.

Thurlow PCs Name Slate

Thurlow township Progressive Conservatives have elected a new slate of officers for both men's and women's organizations.

Officers for the men's group are Grant Cole, president; Ralph Swan, 1st vice - president; George Beer secretary - treasurer.

New women's executive is Mrs. Peter Murray, president; Mrs. Henry Lentz, 2nd vice-president; Mrs. Grant Cole, secretary - treasurer.

Speakers at the meeting — held at Canniffon Orange Hall — were Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, Clark Robins, MPP Hastings, Kel Kincaid, Hastings riding president and Harold Thompson.

Service for Peace Park

MADOC — Senior citizens will be guests of honor at this year's annual community day and memorial service at the Lester B. Pearson Peace Park near here July 14.

A feature of the event — open to the public — will be an arts and crafts hobby show with local artists displaying their creations. Ceramics, watercolors, miniatures are among the displays and so far and space still is available for other exhibits.

The day's events are expected to be filmed for showing on Madoc's community television station.

Younger Drivers On School Buses?

Drivers as young as 18 years could be handling school buses in Hastings county if a request by the Ontario School Bus Drivers' Association receives approval from the Ontario and Communications.

At present, the minimum age for school bus drivers is 21 years.

The request for lowering the minimum age of school bus drivers was made in a recommendation before a two day Association convention at Kingston this week.

More than 80 per cent of the 350 school bus drivers in attendance were in favor of the move to reduce the age limit and encourage younger people as career school bus drivers.

Association president John Charlebois of Ottawa, said that studies have been carried out to come by.

"By lowering the (driver) age limit, thousand of course, with harder exams and better screening, we will then increase both the quality and quantity of drivers," he said.

Other major points discussed during the panel discussion were: proper safety of buses (a seat for every child) the lowerint of license fees to compensate for the two month school holiday, updating of present grant structure and escalating costs of operation.

Hastings county Board of Education Chairman Mary Smith, was unavailable for comment but John R. Bancroft, in charge of bus transportation for the Hastings County Board of Education, said he would agree with lowering the minimum age for school bus drivers.

He said the Association was made up of drivers 18 and 20 years of age, hoping to get younger people into the career for training to eventually become career drivers.

The request for younger school bus drivers was strongly supported by the big bus corporations having contracts with school boards for many years.

Mr. Bancroft said present welfare and unemployment insurance benefits make it difficult for these bus operators to hire part-time drivers.

In Hastings, while there is one operator with 23 school buses, the board still has about 85 contracts with single bus operators.

Museum To Open

PICTON — The official opening of the Prince Edward County Museum will be held on Sunday, July 15 at 3 p.m. with a free tour of the building to follow.

Mrs. Jack Weisman, curator of the museum, said that Bishop J. H. Creegan of Kingston will be among the dignitaries present.

The museum was formerly the Old Church of St. Mary Magdalene.

Teams from Canadian bases and a U.S. unit competed. With Major King are Chief Warrant Officer J. G. Flemming, national defence headquarters and USAF Capt. M. Parsons.

Mauch Not Surprised At Catcher's Heroics

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Catcher John Bocabella, according to Montreal Expos manager Gene Mauch, wasn't a quiet kind of leadership over our pitching staff."

His downfall was a pitching staff, though, was totally unsettling Friday night.

Bocabella became the 18th man in the history of major league baseball to hit two home runs in one inning when the Expos blasted Houston Astros for eight runs. He led off the sixth with a drive over the left field fence at Jarry Park, then hit an opposite-field grand slam to highlight the outburst as Montreal belted Astros 12-4. They made it a doubleheader sweep with a 14-4 victory in the second game.

Mauch, however, was unfazed.

"I know he's capable of doing that, so I'm not the least surprised when he does it. It's nice, but not totally unexpected," Mauch said.

"He's a very stoic individual. He leads a quiet life and nobleing is going to change it. He exerts a quiet kind of leadership over our pitchers. He's a very visible, but you know it's there."

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta Braves blanked New York Mets 3-0, Cincinnati Reds defeated Philadelphia Phillies 4-2, Chicago Cubs beat San Diego Padres 8-5, Los Angeles Dodgers edged Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 and St. Louis Cardinals trimmed San Francisco Giants 3-2.

Bocabella, as Mauch had predicted, was modest about his accomplishments—especially the grand slam.

"They were both fastballs," Bocabella said. "The first was inside and I pulled it out. The second was right over the middle. But the reason it went over the right fence was that I swung late on the darn thing."

Both more confident and relaxed out there, and that's the greatest feeling in the world—Bocabella said. "It's a great day and knowing you can do the job."

Atlanta's Ron Schueler held the Mets hitless until the ninth inning in posting his first major league shutout, allowing singles by Rico Hodges and Felix Millan to ruin the no-hit bid. Before the inning, he had allowed only one baserunner—Hodges on a third-inning walk.

"I knew about the no-hitter around the fifth, and I hoped for a while I could do it. I was getting a bit tired, but when you have one going, you try to keep going," the happy Schueler said later.

"Nobody on the bench said a word or even smiled during the last three innings."

So the smiles were reserved for after the game, when the shutout had been clinched.

"This was my first in the majors," Schueler said, "I'll settle for that right now."

Home runs by Bobby Tolan, Tony Perez and Bill Plummer powered the Reds over the Phillies. Tolan added an RBI single to aid the Reds' cause and help Fred Norman, 6-2, pick up his fifth victory in his last six decisions.

Chicago's Rick Monday, with some help from San Diego's Phil Corrales, drove in six runs with a grand-slam and a two-run single to help the Cubs. Corrales dropped Monday's pop fly with the bases loaded in the fifth inning, and Monday used the reprieve to drive his 21st homer of the season over the right field fence.

A two-out double by Jose Cruz in the seventh inning drove in Joe Torre and Ted Simmons to carry St. Louis to victory. Bob Gibson pitched a seven-hitter for his 23rd career triumph. The decision tied Gibson with San Francisco's Juan Marichal for the all-time winningest active pitcher.

Don Sutton carried a four-hit shutout into the ninth inning, then had to scratch out a 5-3 victory as Pittsburgh scored twice with two outs. Manny Sanguillen drove in Al Oliver with a double, then Dave Cash scored Sanguillen with a single. Sutton struck out Dave Parker to retire Reggie Stennett on a line drive to put out the fire.

Stockton Effort Best Yet

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dave Stockton, the latest pitcher-catcher combination to head round of his career, was asked to pencil in a winning score in the $130,000 Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

"I think I can shoot some pretty good scores," Stockton said. "I'll tell the other guys worry about it, I've been close to people at times and they don't can chase me for a while."

Stockton launched the nine-under-par 63—just one stroke off the best round of the season on the pro golf circuit—with a nine-stroke lead Friday with a 36-hole total of 132.

That's 12 under par for two trips over the 7,310 yard Tuckaway Country Club course. And the 32-year-old Stockton had a mild scare when the rest of the field going into the last half of this chase for a $28,000 first prize.

"I don't generally back off," he said.

Stockton, who has picked up five titles in his eight years on the tour, held a commanding lead over Larry Ziegler, along in second place at 134.

Bob Goalby, who held the first-round lead, fell to 138 but could do no better than a 71. He drifted back to third at 136.

Mike Morley was next with a 68 at 137, while Homero Blancas and Hubert Green were tied at 138. Blancas had a 71 and Green a 70.

Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg was best among three Canadians who qualified for the final 36 holes. Homenuik shot 72-70 for a 141 total; George Knudson of Toronto had 71 for 142; and Ben Kern, also of Toronto, fired a 70 for a 143 total.

Most of the game's top names are bypassing this event to get an early start on preparations for next week's British Open. Among them are Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player.

"It's a good feeling," Stockton said. "I really had it going."

Hamilton Retains Lead In Manitoba Open

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Open golf championship moved into the final 18 holes today with three young non-winners and a cagey veteran looking for top money and the exemption into the Canadian Open.

Gar Hamilton of Toronto, first-round leader by two shots, continued to lead the pack, but his margin was reduced to one by Bill Tape of Kitchener, Ont., and veteran Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont.

Another shot back is Dale Talbot of Toronto.

Winner of the $10,000, 54-hole event receives $1,800 and the low Canadian in each provincial open also receives an exemption into the Canadian Open. None of the top five scorers after the second round has yet received an exemption.

Playing under brilliant sunshine, warm temperatures and only a slight breeze, the 23-year-old Hamilton, a rookie on the tour, shot a par 72 for a 36-hole total of 140.

He failed to repeat the sparkling four-under-par round of Thursday and he got most of the blame on mediocre problems.

"I had two three-putt greens on the front nine and I missed a lot of good birdie opportunities.

"Hamilton went out in 37, one over par, but two birdies on the back nine enabled him to come in at even par.

Norman, a three-time winner of the event, cut two shots off par on the front nine to move ahead of Hamilton, at the par 35 mark playing in the same three-some.

But he faltered on the back nine, finishing with a bogey on the 18th, and settled for a 71.

Tape, a 36-year-old non-winner of any "event of any importance," almost holed all 18 holes before he ran into problems.

He was five under par when he stepped up to the 14th tee.

"I hit a perfect drive and hit a wedge to the green. But I left the ball on the green well. I had trouble with the speed and pushed my putt about six feet past the hole.

"The putt coming back was half in the hole. I couldn't believe it when it didn't fall."

Tape came right back and three-putted the 15th after lining him to three under par where he remained.

The Manitoba field was reduced to the low 60 scores and ties for the final round. The 60 golfers still in the running for a share of the money.

Bob Pitchford of Toronto had the day's best round, a three-under-par 69 for his first round total of 76, he was well back at 145.

Ron Laitar of Brantford, Ont., disqualified himself on the 13th hole after signing for an incorrect ball.

Top amateur going into the final round is Barry Chipko of Winnipeg whose 71 Friday gave him a two-round total of 142, two shots better than amateur Terry More, also of Winnipeg.

Orval Tessier Back With Cornwall Team

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Orval Tessier, who has coached two different junior teams to two successive Memorial Cup hockey finals, returned to the scene of his initial success Friday.

The one-time minor pro veteran who saw brief service with Boston before the National Hockey League, signed a one-year contract as general manager of Cornwall Royals of the Quebec Junior Hockey League.

Tessier coached the Royals to the Memorial Cup championship in 1971-72 then left to handle Quebec Remparts of the QJHL in the same capacity.

The Remparts reached the finals before losing in the deciding game of the best-of-nine playoffs to Toronto Marlboros.

Tessier was introduced shortly after, expressing disappointment with the club's decision Friday to comment on his brief fling with the Quebec City team other than to say:

"I can't say I regret going to Quebec, but I can say I've had better years. Most of the people in Quebec are fine but there are always one or two rotten apples."

Tessier said at a news conference—which was also called to announce that Ron Racicot, who replaced him as coach of the Royals, had been signalled for another year—that he had been approached by two other QJHL teams before accepting the Cornwall offer.

Beliveau Decision Expected

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Beliveau will decide during the weekend on a "very attractive offer" involving "a great deal of money" made to him by Quebec Les Nordiques of the World Hockey Association.

Beliveau, Montreal Canadiens' all-time scoring and captain retired after the 1970-72 season and this summer was selected to the National Hockey League Hall of Fame along with Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings.

He now is vice-president and director of corporate relations with Canadiens.

Bullpen—Some Escape Others Are Relented

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kansas City's Steve Busby and Jim Merritt of Texas are back on the track at Arlington while New York's unbeaten Fred Beene is back where he started—in the bullpen.

Busby, who has had his problems since he no-hit Detroit back in April, got another shot at the Tigers Friday night and blanked them until the ninth as the Royals pounded out a 12-1 American League baseball victory.

Merritt, who has been plagued with arm trouble since he won 20 games for Cincinnati Reds in 1970, reversed Busby's procedure. He shut out Milwaukee Brewers after allowing two runs in the first inning and the Rangers rallied for a 5-2 triumph.

Beene, meanwhile, made one of his rare starts and, although touched for 14 Minnesota hits, battled into the ninth inning before Sparky Lyle protected the Yankees' 5-2 win over the Twins.

Elsewhere in the American League, Oakland Athletics downed Baltimore Orioles 7-3 and 5-5 behind the eight-hit pitching of Rick Langford, Boston Red Sox beat Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians nipped California Angels 3-2.

Reggie Smith supplied three singles, including the 1,000th hit of his career, and Carlton Fisk also homered for the Red Sox.

Jimmy Jones.

Sonny Wade, Montreal's other quarterback, hit on 66-yard single in the fourth quarter for the other Alouette point.

Jones and Edmonton starter Tom Wilkinson were the only quarterbacks to generate touchdowns. Wilkinson's came on a seven-yard toss to rookie Calvin Thomas Cowan with less than three minutes remaining.

The hard-fought, defensive struggle, in which both clubs scored a safety, ended in a series of penalties.

99-yard Return Helps Dave Cutler's Toe Sinks the Alouettes

EDMONTON (CP) — An electrifying 99-yard interception return by Larry Highbaugh provided the impact Friday night and Dave Cutler's talented toe generated the most effect as Edmonton Eskimos stopped Montreal Alouettes 25-14.

The Canadian Football League exhibition game was played before 19,062 fans, the largest crowd to watch an exhibition football game at Clarke Stadium.

Highbaugh stepped in front of an Alouette receiver on his 11-yard line and dashed along the sideline past at least four would-be tacklers into the end zone with 2:30 p.m. left in the third quarter.

His heroics broke up what had been a kicker's duel between Cutler and Don Sweet of the Alouettes. Cutler wound up with four field goals in six attempts and converted Highbaugh's touchdown.

Sweet connected on both his field goal attempts and converted Montreal's only touchdown, scored by Tanker Brian Saima in the final minute of the game on a 27-yard toss from Chadwick, a flanker from Tennessee. Wide receiver Steve Harris of Tulane, guard Dan Klimek of Pittsburgh, and Canadian Football League veteran, defensive halfback Carleton Gene Wakefield, linebacker Greg Higson, defensive half, McMaster and Chris Jackson, defensive half, Western.

Meanwhile, Tony Moro, who was by Toronto to Edmonton Eskimos earlier in the year then regained by the Argos in another trade, was signed by the Eastern Football Conference team Friday to a two-year contract.

No financial terms of the contract were disclosed.

Dick Thornton Cut, Moro Signs Contract

TORONTO (CP) — Dick Thornton, 12-year veteran of the Canadian Football League, was one of 11 players the Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference released Thursday.

Thornton, 32, of Chicago had been with the Argos for six seasons after being acquired from Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Conference.

Other cuts were quarterback Jim Fassel of California State, defensive end Grady, a defensive back who performed part-time for years with NFL teams, Miami Dolphins guard Willie Epps from Kent State, Dennis Chadwick, a flanker from Tennessee, wide receiver Sam Harris of Tulane, guard Dan Klimek of Pittsburgh, and Canadian Football League veteran, defensive halfback, Carleton Gene Wakefield, linebacker Greg Higson, defensive half, McMaster and Chris Jackson, defensive half, Western.

Meanwhile, Tony Moro, who was by Toronto to Edmonton Eskimos earlier in the year then regained by the Argos in another trade, was signed by the Eastern Football Conference team Friday to a two-year contract.

Golden Bat Tourney Opener

Hall's Fastball Lasts For A 2-Hit Shutout

By RANDY DERRY

History may be repeating itself in the 15th annual Golden Bat bantam baseball tournament as Belleville Legion 99 is hoping that feeling of deja vu is but a passing phase.

The annual tournament started on three fronts Friday night with echoes of the past haunting those involved with the Belleville - Peterborough matchup.

Belleville started off on the right foot at Parkdale last night coasting to a 6-0 win over the Lift Lock City nine. The win brings memories of last year's tournament when Belleville opened with a 5-4 win over Peterborough but then fell to the wayside after losing to Guelph while Peterborough climbed the B side ladder and eventually captured the Grand Championship with a 5-4 13 inning win over Toronto East York.

Peter Hall turned in a neat two-hitter to record the shutout for Belleville. The first year bantam right - hander struck out nine and walked only three.

"I was throwing mostly fastballs tonight. They usually wears out after the third inning but I felt okay. I lost control a little bit and got behind 3-0 a lot of times but I had a good curve coming into the game and managed to get through," said Hall.

Rob Casben had both hits for the losers in support of Ron Lewis and Kevin Lefebvre.

Belleville's next round matchup will be against the Thurlow Kinsmen Yardmen Benefit Fund bantams who scraped out a 3-2 eight inning win over the Ottawa Central Expos last night.

"It was a good one to win tonight but now we've got to think of Thurlow. We've played them three times this year and beat them every time but you can never tell about them in a tournament. Everyone seems to play their best in a tournament so I expect we'll have to play well to beat them. If we play like we did tonight though we shouldn't have much to worry about," predicted coach Gary Gray of his 11 a.m. match with Thurlow this morning.

Thurlow's Brian Masterson scored the winning run in the first extra frame opening the inning with a walk, stealing second and racing home on Tony Latone's base hit.

Masterson saw pitching duties for the Thurlow nine, allowing nine hits and whiffing five.

Thurlow managed only four hits but it was enough for the win. Sandy Waterson, Tony Pascoe, and Paul Sullivan added hits to Latone's winning connection.

Bud Clouthier picked up seven strikeouts for Ottawa with Bob Clouthier punching three singles and Bruce Levine was a triple for the Capital City squad.

In the third game of the night 1971 Grand Champions from Cobourg started on another drive by stopping Toronto Legion 31 2-1.

Lyle Fontaine fired a two-hitter for the win, fanning five Legion batters. He also picked up a double and two singles in his own cause but Jeff Timlin provided most of the support with two runs batted in and a single to knock in four runs.

Ken Lazzaretto took the loss for Toronto.

Games continue all day today with the A and B championships scheduled for 12 noon Sunday at Parkdale and Centennial Secondary School respectively. The Grand Championship will be at Parkdale Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m.

Palmer's, Consecon Post PENSSL Wins

Belleville Gems had their hitting shoes on Thursday night but not enough of the hits turned into runs as they fell 17-14 to Palmer Pools in a Prince Edward North Shore Softball League contest at Ameliasburgh.

The Gems held the edge in hitting 17-14 but could not overcome a seven run Palmer third. The losers pulled to within two of their runs in the late innings.

In the other league game Thursday, a late rally by Bayview Orchards fell three runs short as Consecon posted a 7-4 win. The Orchards' squad, held scoreless for the first six innings, made it interesting with the four run burst in the bottom of the seventh.

Palmer's got a route going performance from Bill Hobbs who withstood the potent Gems' hitting attack to gain the win. He retired five on the third strikes and walked one.

Bob Boyle and Ken Kerik shared the pitching for Belleville and surrendered 14 hits. Kerik issued five and walked four.

Pete Pestinggli and Dennis Gale each respged three base hits for Palmer's. Hobbs helped his own cause with a home run and Brian Montgomery also connected for a three-bagger. Tops for the losers was Bob Reid with three safeties.

Art Earnest also fanned Consecon starter Gary Eardley to shut off the scoring rally by Bayview. Eardley was reached for only five hits in his six innings of relief. He struck out two and walked one. Luther Stone hit the ball in relief.

Don Bonter went the distance in defeat, allowing eight hits while fanning three and walking one.

Bob McLeod and Ted McDonald each smashed a home run for the winners. Bayview hits were shared by Steve Dunstaer, Bob Harrison, Dewayne Dunstaer, Craig Adams and Don Bonter.

Fastball is In Race For the Big Money

EDMONTON (CP) — Ten years ago, Bill Tainsh gave up curling and concentrated on the insurance business

"because somebody told me I was using a lot of energy that I could have used to become the best insurance salesman in the world."

Four years later, Tainsh went back to curling without any formal recognition that he had achieved his ambition.

But now he faces a task that tests his selling abilities to the limit.

He is founder and chairman of the board of the Western Major Fastball League, the newest entry in the race for the big money that goes these days to successful sports operation. Official of the new league are from left:

"It should take us three years," he said in an interview. "The first year—this year—we'll lose money. Next year, we'll break even and after that we'll be in the clear."

Tainsh's league is based in Edmonton, Calgary, Regina, Saskatoon and Winnipeg, where good-calibre baseball has filled many times in the past.

"That doesn't mean we'll fail," said Tainsh, a ruggedly-handsome 37-year-old who looks like a football player than a fastball official.

"The baseball clubs haven't had major league players," he said. "Fans will realize, if they don't already, that our league is as good as any fastball league in existence. Our players are the best."

"Besides, it's a different game."

The Western Major League developed after Tainsh introduced a fastball tournament to coincide with Klondike Days, Edmonton's annual midsummer festival, in 1970.

"I wanted to see whether fans would support high-level fastball. I got my answer.

"The first year, there were 1,000 fans for the final game; in 1971, there were 3,000 fans for the final; last year, the final game drew 4,000."

Besides introducing the Klondike tournament in 1970, Tainsh formed a Senior A club, the Red Sox, to chase the national championship.

Three of the players on that club, which reached the provincial final, now are members of Edmonton Monarchs of the WMFL.

"The fact that three players have stayed with us as the calibre improved from senior to professional shows me that we'll make it," said Tainsh.

"The supply of players is unlimited. In Edmonton alone, there are more than 70 teams."

"They're not all senior teams, of course, but the supply of players is there," he said, referring to a 16-year-old pitcher in Wetaskiwin, Alta., now playing in a league that is the equivalent of Senior B.

"I may be pitching in this league one day—maybe in Edmonton—but certainly in the league."

In the early stages of the inaugural season of 18 games for each club, despite appalling weather conditions, the Monarchs moved into first place in the five-team circuit.

"Don't give me the credit for that," he said. "I'm the majority shareholder and I did much of the scouting, but the organization is what makes it work."

Each "organization" includes former Canadian Football League great Johnny Bright as coach and Joe Jaleski, former quarterback with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, as head coach with Winnipeg and Edmonton of the CFL as general manager.

Warren Hansen, a capable Edmonton lawyer, is the public relations head. Tainsh's wife, Joan, is secretary-treasurer.

Tainsh runs back and forth from his chores as an insurance salesman to his duties with the ball club. He expect to reduce his curling this winter, "but I'm happy with what I've done."

He was a member of the Hec Gervais rink that represented Alberta and finished second in the 1970 Canadian curling championships and joined a rink skipped by Dr. Bill Mitchell of Edmonton in winning the national mixed title in 1969.

"I've announced my retirement from top-level curling," he said. "But that applies only to me. I'm still open to play on a good rink.

"It hasn't gone away from curling. Tainsh has plenty to keep him occupied.

"There's a possibility of a playoff between Eastern and Western champs in Edmonton but leagues this season, he said, "We've already received an offer to play against the winner of a league being organized by Eddie Feigner in the Western United States."

Tainsh believes the future of fastball, especially in the Prairies, is unlimited "if we keep the best players from pricing us out of the market."

Burke's Baseball Ballet

He's no Rudolph Nureyev but Belleville Legion 99's Mike Burke made with his own ballet jazz to snag a wild throw to first in the opening game of the fifth annual Golden Bat Bantam Baseball Tournament. Peterborough's catcher Mike Connelly was definitely safe on this play but he failed to score as the Belleville squad rolled to a 6 - 0 victory. Games continue today with the championships scheduled for Sunday afternoon at Parkdale.

FINISHES FIRST

AACHEN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany captured the Prize of Nations trophy at the Aachen International Equestrian event before 15,000 Friday. Great Britain finished second while Switzerland was third.

Lenders Slip, UIC Is First

The Quinte Mall Lenders had better instead of resin for Friday night's Industrial Softball League game at the Alemite, and because of it they slipped further out of contention division pennant race.

The Lenders, leading 2 - 1 after the innings, got a case of the slippery fingers and UIC banged at the chance to demolish the Bankers 11-2.

In the other half of the doubleheader Ontario Hydro stopped Steggert Warner 13-8. Seven runs in the fourth inning spilled the end for the Lenders who have now dropped six points behind division leader UIC. The win moved UIC into top spot in the west, one point ahead of Metal Johnson.

Joe Clark, Ron Jury and Ron Embury led the UIC hitting with two safeties each. Rick Sullivan was the victor for the winners allowing eight hits and striking out two.

Bob Stroh, Herb VanDaalen, and John Frazeherty each had two hits for the Lenders. Terry Murphy started for the Bankers with Mark Sceridan relieving in the fourth. Each hurler allowed four hits.

The Utilities scored in each of the first five innings to roll to their sixth win of the season.

Wilson Bulpit smashed a home run and single for the winners with Dave Middleton connecting for a triple, double and single and Jack Anderson three singles.

Bulpit was touched for 10 hits but whiffed eight. Werner batters to collect four hits and Dave Marvin on the losers' mound. The Warner dropped to 3-5.

Jim Heron pulled a homer and single and Ken Tracre a triple, double and single for the Warner.

Pinsent Bitter Over Rowdyman

By JACQUES HAMILTON

MONTREAL (CP) — Gordon Pinsent, embittered by the failure of The Rowdyman to break out in dollar signs after rave reviews, is on a one man crusade to reform Canada's film industry.

Here to sweat through a National Film Board production called The Heat Wave Lasted Four Days, the 43-year-old author-star of The Rowdyman says he is going to go on making films in Canada "no matter what."

Between shots in the 102-degree-plus heat of an apartment set Thursday, Pinsent found the relative coolness of a bathroom, and the time to puzzle over the failure of his film to make money.

Despite critics' opinion that it was the best Canadian film made, The Rowdyman has ended up with only the barest of chances to make back its $340,000 cost.

Pinsent blames most of the disaster on distributors. Poor theatre locations, short runs, the inability to line up proper distribution in the United States; his list of complaints is long.

"The distributors, he says, "try to go in cheap and come out rich on a film that needs all the help it can get. I think everyone needs to head over a little and help things along."

Pinsent wrote the script for The Rowdyman, played the title role and put up half the cost of the production.

The unconditional setting of the film is where he was raised, the characters in the film are from his own life, and so is the film that means a lot to me.

"You stay to yourself," I won't allow myself to think about it because I've got to move onto other things," but deep down I'm deeply hurt."

Since his experience with The Rowdyman, Pinsent says, he has spent a great deal of time trying to understand what has to be done to make films successfully in Canada.

The obvious solution, he says, is to go half-American and half Canadian, "but then we're back where we started with Canadians as second players."

"If the talent in this country can just go to bed with the money in this country, maybe it can all come together.

"Otherwise we're just going to be left on the sidelines with our dreams."

He has just finished turning the script of The Rowdyman into a novel, "Trying the Love Story trick," and has finished a second screenplay.

NEW YORK (AP) — Two generations of Brubecks kicked off a Central Park concert Friday, eighth day of the 10-day Newport Jazz Festival.

First there was the Darius Brubeck Ensemble, with two of the pianist-leader's brothers, Chris and Danny, on trombone and drums. Then Darius moved to electric piano and his father—Dave Brubeck—slipped in on piano.

The crowd of approximately 1,000 was the largest of the five concerts held thus far in Central Park's Wollman Amphitheatre.

Elsewhere, the Newport Jazz Festival in New York took to midtown city streets. Pals Houston, second mate, led the DeJeans Olympia Brass Band from New Orleans in some traditional marching and New Orleans sounds during the lunch hour.

NEW YORK (AP) — The three major television networks in the United States will resume retaliatory coverage of the Senate Watergate hearings next week.

Reserving the right to a day-by-day decision, ABC said it will open the rotation Tuesday. NBC takes over the live coverage Wednesday, and CBS Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rolypoly comedienne Totie Fields, reported in fair condition Friday at Polyclinic Hospital following a taxicab accident Thursday night, suffered a collapsed lung and three broken ribs.

The 40-year-old entertainer, her husband, George Johnston, 46, and two friends were in the cab when it collided with a car in midtown New York.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace's son, George, 21, released a recording through MGM Records Friday.

Wallace joined with his son in making the announcement. The governor said:

"It's a happy day for me and for my son. I'm very proud of his record. I like it."

The single features two love songs.

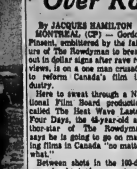
LONDON (Reuter) — The Independent Broadcasting Authority announced Thursday it plans to use a symbol on television screens warning viewers of approaching scenes of violence. The authority said a small rectangular outline will be superimposed at the bottom, left-hand corner of the screen.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor James Cagney, who made his last film in 1961, will come out of self-imposed seclusion next March to receive the American Film Institute's Life Achievement Award.

It will be Cagney's first major public appearance since he starred in One, Two, Three 12 years ago.

The award is presented to a person "whose talent has in a fundamental way contributed to the film-making arts."

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (Reuter) — Actor Peter Lawford Friday scoffed at reports of romance between him and Elizabeth Taylor, who is in hiding here following a separation from husband Richard Burton.



"There is absolutely nothing to it," said the 50-year-old actor, who recently was sued for divorce by his wife Mary, daughter of Laugh-In comedian Dan Rowan. "Take my word for it that nothing could be further from the truth."

Lawford said he is still in love with Mary, from whom he was separated last month, and that he hopes for a reconciliation.

The actor was formerly married to the late President John Kennedy's sister, Patricia,

Conductor's Death Won't Affect Sales

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Symphony's 82nd season will not feel any effect on subscription sales or programs as a result of the death Tuesday of conductor Karel Ancerl, symphony managing director Walter Homburger said Friday.

In a statement, Mr. Homburger said efforts are being made to engage guest conductors to replace Maestro Ancerl.

The symphony's summer season consists of 17 concerts of which Maestro Ancerl was scheduled to conduct only one. That concert Monday evening will be conducted by Seiji Ozawa. No guest conductors have been found yet for Ancerl's fall schedule.

Mr. Homburger's statement also announced that all soloists previously scheduled to appear would appear.

Mr. Homburger said subscription rates are running well ahead of last year and "we haven't seen any appreciable decline in the number of subscription orders since the Maestro's death."

The symphony's European tour, planned for 1974, has not been cancelled either.

"We have been in contact with our European sponsors and they will work together with us to find a conductor to undertake our fall European tour."

All Nude Way to End Hijacking

TORONTO (CP) — Airline passengers have made countless suggestions on way to stop air piracy ranging from sleeping gas to trapdoors, a spokesman for the government official told the International Air Transport Association Counsel's convention Friday.

However, the only cure all proposed is submitted by Mr. James M. Yohe, deputy director of the Federal Aviation Administration. "Is that all passengers would board in the nude so they couldn't carry weapons aboard."

One person said we should pump stewardess into the plane to put all the passengers, including the hijacker, asleep. He said, adding the only problem with the suggestion is that the gas might kill anyone with heart or respiratory ailments.

"Another one suggested we have a parachute at the cockpit," Mr. Yohe said. "He jokingly said we would press a button and out the hijacker would go."

He was quick to point out the John Doe who suggested this scheme were not as heartless as would appear. They also came in two versions — one by stringing of nets under the plane to save the ejected hijacker for trial.

Batista to Lift Veil Of 'Black Indians'

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — A team of experts from Brazil's National Indian Foundation (Funai) has begun the arduous task of making Ilha do Ava-Canoeiro nomad tribe of black Indians near the Goias state capital of Goeus.

The "black Indian" nomads have defied all efforts over the last 30 years to pacify them or establish regular contact.

Forever on the move between the Furnoso and the Araguaia rivers, the Indians, dubbed "black faces," have aroused curiosity over their origin. Some anthropologists think they may have descended from African slaves who escaped and mixed with Indian tribes.

Headed by Indian expert Israel Batista, the new expedition is determined to spend as long as a year if necessary to pacify the nomad tribe, which runs away whenever confronted by members of other civilizations.

The tribe constructs temporary shelters but abandons them after the rains. They use bows and arrows, and tip their arrows with iron.

Gifts left for them have been accepted but each time Funai has been made with the 50-family tribe, they have quickly vanished from the area.

Afraid of water (which they never cross) even for food or harassment, the tribe keeps away from jaguar lakes and backwaters but some of its members have shouted words in Portuguese.

Officials say the tribe was made by surrounded to trust while civilization this time a tract of land will be granted them for their own reservation.

But it is unlikely that after 50 years of dodging the white man the nomads will change their attitude suddenly.

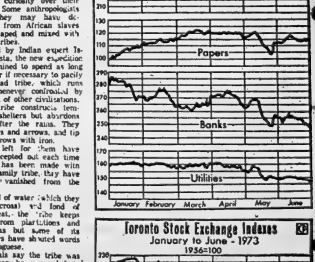
Officials say the tribe was spotted recently from an aircraft which discovered their "winter-village" near the Fumoso River and descended to 650 feet for a close look.

Immediately the tribe ran for cover into the bush, and next day they had moved on — after burning down their thatched roof huts.

However they can easily be rediscovered since, despite their nomadic existence, they are trapped between the two rivers by their unwillingness to cross water.

In another recent effort to attract the tribesmen, Indian foundation officials planted rice, maize and beans near their temporary abode. The Indians reaped the harvest, then abandoned the area.

The nomads carry their few belongings strapped on their backs. These include clay pots, mats and crudely made iron knives.



On one of their abandoned villages a Funai expedition last year found ceramics, arrows with iron points, flint and leather loincloths.

Their knowledge of working iron and leather has puzzled anthropologists, and enhanced the theory that the wandering Indians are descendants of sa-

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, July 9

Aries (March 21-April 19): Great others, your loved ones in particular, the right to be out of sorts. Money is a bit hard to spend effectively, all too easy to waste.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Be on your way early to carry your full share of the community's expression of faith. It's better to be calm.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): There's no such thing as keeping up with neighbors today. Be yourself and proud of what you've achieved.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Endless rounds of talk needn't touch you, but if they do, disregard them. Be moderate in your work and your pastimes.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Squabbles lead readily into lasting dissension—if you let them. You may as well spend the day keeping everybody pacified.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your basic tendency to having infinite plans must be countered in the hazzle of this noisy Sunday.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Bring current projects to perfection. Then check the external conditions before springing your ideas on the world.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may enter a phase of being in position to collect, to pick up the pieces from upset ventures.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Believe none of today's inspiring promises, nor make any. Moderate health habits are suggested.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Even though you start energetically early, you will complete your day's round before it's quite late.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): By pursuing theoretical or academic systems at the expense of others' time and convenience, you are being selfish.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Get extra rest by doing no more than the minimum. Let your career or criticism pass you by —it may not apply to you anyway.

Monday, July 9

Aries (March 21-April 19): Declutter your schedule, select feasible projects, postpone others. Put your accounts in order.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Personal cares get in the way of business, may be worth it. New dimensions in relations are discovered.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Assert yourself, but don't plunge into the general effort; make sure others are pulling their weight. Leave personal issues alone.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Today you can sell almost any reasonable idea. Travel could bring extra results if well planned.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Tactfully bring together conflicting factions at work. Expect interruptions, use any information you get.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Progress begins in increased efficiency, perhaps higher earnings. Be open to potentials of new acquaintances. Accept social invitations.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Collect what is coming to you. Try to take up with preparations tomorrow's a good launching date.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be bright and early. Bring existing projects to final stages, instead of opening new ones.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Money gets away from you with little to show for it. Economy models are unlikely to meet your needs. Forget your cares, gather friends for conversation.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Younger people are apt to bring some to take up your time. Some to conquer, and others to escape your reach. Your quiet mood is subject to misunderstanding.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Events move quickly, but generally in your favor. What happens now is a prelude to change.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Your workweek opening comes as a chance to correct a number of minor problems. Get your scheme set and into action.

Rural Ridings Get Too Large

OTTAWA (CP) — John Reid (L—Kenora-Rainy River) told the Commons Friday that MPs representing large rural ridings may someday have to decide whether to give full time to House activities or devote themselves almost exclusively to problems in their ridings.

The parliamentary secretary to Government House Leader Allan MacEachen said the growing workload in Parliament has diminished the opportunity for members to properly look after their constituents.

He spoke in defence of a government bill to defer a redistribution of federal electoral seats that will give urban areas more representation in the 264-seat Commons while subtracting seats from less-populated areas.

The bill is expected to get second reading when debate resumes Monday.

The debate has exposed a regional-urban split on the subject.

MPs from large districts such as Mr. Reid's say the new electoral boundaries, based on the 1971 census, will create such large rural ridings that it will be almost impossible for an MP to do a proper job.

MPs from the urban areas, such as Don Blenkarn (PC—Peel South) argued that the cities are under-represented in the Commons.

Mr. Blenkarn said members from the Yukon and Northwest Territories think that because their ridings are large, they should have more than one MP. But the northern population was small.

"I say that Wally Firth (NDP—Northwest Territories) represents about one third of Canada but I don't think he does not represent the tundra, he does not represent trees and rocks and he does not represent territory," declared Mr. Blenkarn.

Mr. Blenkarn said he represents 165,000 people in Mississauga, Ont., a Toronto suburb, and not the pavement, the office buildings and the expressways.

Mr. Reid replied that "there are people up among the rocks, the trees and the tundra who have a right to be adequately represented" in the Commons.

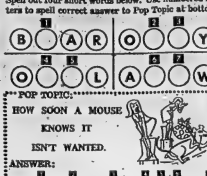
What was needed was a formula that would give each Canadian access to his MP and to his government.

Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) said the Commons spends too much time on rural problems such as national transportation and wheat at the expense of such urban problems as crime and pollution.

He said the government spent $1.3 million during the 10-cent-a-loaf boundary commissions to draw up the new ridings. But the government was ready to let this work go up in smoke.

The reason seemed to be that most provinces would lose seats while Ontario and British Columbia would gain some.

To stop the work of redistribution now was an injustice to these two provinces, he said.



He said the government introduced a red herring when Mr. MacEachen argued that the bill is required to prevent the possibility of not being able to call a general election in a year.

The chief electoral officer says he needs a year after redistribution to prepare for an election using the new boundaries.

Canadian Unions Urged to Unite

WINNIPEG (CP) — A national conference of Canadian unions should be given the highest priority in the fight to establish a Canadian trade union movement, Secretary-Treasurer Kent Rowley of the Council of Canadian Unions (CCU), said today.

In an address to delegates to the organization's fifth annual meeting, Mr. Rowley said there are more than 800,000 workers in Canadian unions that could be united around a common centre.

"Canadian labor must play its rightful role, denied it up to now, by uniting its ranks to win not only wages and union contracts, but to build a just and humane society," said the labor veteran from Brantford, Ont.

"Canadian labor must do its historic duty by turning Canada from an appendage of American big business and imperialist greed into a nation of peace and human progress."

Until now, the CCU has not made a great contribution in the councils of government, Mr. Rowley said, but the time has come to consider a legislative program.

Such a program should consider placing the resources industries under public ownership, he said.

The program could demand establishment of an equitable tax system, split fundamental projects to solve economic chaos and place housing problems in the hand of public boards, he told the meeting.

As for the CCU itself, Mr. Rowley said, action must be taken on organization.

He said the CCU, with a membership of more than 20,000 must consider a plan of union affiliation to avoid conflict in the future.

"The top leaders of the American unions in Canada do not really believe in the independence of this country. They accept the colonial status that their situation implies. In order to free this country from the American empire and all the exploitation that implies, we must establish our national identity."

Strikers Battle Police As Materials Are Moved

WHEATLEY, Ont. (CP) — Employees of strikebound Onstead Foods Ltd. clashed with police Thursday when seven truckloads of frozen vegetables and packaging materials were removed from a quick-freeze plant under police escort.

A spokesman for the provincial police said they had to form a wedge to drive the trucks—estimated at about 100—back to enable the trucks to leave the Wheatley Harrow Township industrial building.

He said the workers, members of Local 880, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, began gathering when the trucks arrived earlier in the day. He said the police who numbered about 30, tried to talk to the strikers, but then they were arming themselves with sticks, stones and bottles."

An order issued by the Supreme Court of Ontario allowed Libby, McNeill and Libby of Canada Ltd. to remove the goods from the plant. A Libby spokesman said they wanted to remove the goods to complete wrapping at alternate locations and deliver them to suppliers.

Libby has an agreement with Onstead covering packaging.

The 220-member local went on strike June 14. The contract expired April 11.

The workers, two-thirds women, are asking for a $2 raise in the lowest basic hourly rates of $2.77 and $2.95. They also are seeking full medical coverage, institution of a pension plan, cost-of-living increases and improved working conditions.

Western Economic Parley Viewed as Vitally Important

OTTAWA (CP) — The forthcoming Calgary conference on western economic opportunities is being regarded within government as the most important federal-provincial meeting ever scheduled.

"There is no doubt that it will effect the course of Confederation," says a source close to Prime Minister Trudeau. "We regard it as absolutely imperative that we succeed in eliminating long-standing western complaints."

Justice Minister Otto Lang has said on several occasions that the conference, featuring Mr. Trudeau and the four western premiers, is "crucial," French it, he hopes for a "new national policy." At this time geared to western interests.

Sources say the federal government has done more preparatory work for the three-day conference than for any other meeting with the provinces. Former cabinet minister Pat Mahoney, who represented Calgary South in the last Parliament, has been co-ordinating the federal preparations for the last six months.

While Mr. Trudeau maintains the conference is far above partisan politics, party officials are well aware that any breakthrough in eliminating western grievances could only assist Liberal fortunes in the West. Even with only seven Liberal MPs from the four western provinces, the party can use all the help it can get.

But Mr. Trudeau will be facing three New Democrats and one Conservative when he meets the premiers July 24—and they have political audiences, too.

"This is one reason we pressed for opening meetings," says a federal source. "Everyone can see what gets on, instead of depending on briefings from the different delegations."

Briefings at some earlier federal-provincial meetings have often raised doubts about whether the premiers were actually attending the same meeting. "This doesn't matter when we're dealing with some obscure constitutional issue," said the source, "but it is impossible that all our proposals in Calgary be clearly understood."

Unlike some earlier meetings, when Ottawa waited to hear a concensus emerge from the provinces, Mr. Trudeau and his delegation will go to Calgary heavily armed with specific proposals, backed up with intricate research. Every western complaint about freight rates and other transportation problem has been studied, along with the cost of correcting them.

"Tremendous research" has gone into a possible new industrial policy to encourage industry in the West," said the source. There will also be specific proposal regarding the decentralization of financial institutions.

"For the first time since the days of Sir John A. Macdonald," says Mr. Lang, "westerners are going to have the opportunity . . . to examine closely our position in Confederation."

And under the original national policy, which has not been basically changed, the West "was designed to be, in fact, a hinterland—a storehouse of primary resources to be utilized as required by the flourishing industrial east."

'Dissidents' Under Fire Of OMA

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Medical Association (OMA) has called a group of anonymous doctors seeking support to fight new regulations of the College of Physicians and Surgeons "a dissident group" and has condemned its activities.

The OMA said in a statement Thursday it has "disassociated itself of the opinions and activities of a dissident group calling itself the Association of Concerned Physicians in Ontario."

The OMA said the group is "operating in isolation" and none of its representatives has sought consultation with the OMA.

The concerned physicians have written to Ontario doctors asking for $100 or more to "support such legal and public action as is necessary" against college policies to limit doctors' workloads and eliminate conflict of interest among doctors owning profit-making diagnostic and treatment facilities.

Dr. D. R. Wilson of Kingston, OMA president, said his organization has supported the college's objectives and will "do everything in its power" to ensure the regulations become effective next year.

Dr. Wilson said, however, the OMA "would be vehemently opposed to the use of such formulas in arbitrarily controlling payments to doctors," which the Association of Concerned Physicians says is the result of the college.

Last January, the college published draft regulations prohibiting doctors or members of their families from having an interest "in any devices, products or services" associated with their diagnosis or treatment.

In May and June, a committee of the college announced formulas relating workload or gross payments from the Ontario Health Insurance Plan. The formulas are designed to ensure that the quantity of work by doctors was not achieved at the expense of quality.

Dentists Welcome New Law

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Dental Association (ODA) Friday welcomed proclamation of the controversial Denturist Therapists Act "as a needed step toward providing more dental auxiliaries to improve service to the public."

ODA President Dr. R. L. Moran of Toronto said in a statement that the dental profession would be able to police the available denturists therapists primarily in offices offering low cost dentures.

In announcing the proclamation of the legislation, Health Minister Dr. Richard Potter was critical of the dental profession for not moving quickly enough to produce false teeth for $180 a set for some members of the public.

Dr. Moran said that more than 600 dental offices in the province are providing the $180 dentures and the profession is committed to expanding this service.

Amin Frees Peace Corps Volunteers

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Uganda released 112 United States Peace Corps volunteers today, two days after they had been taken into custody on a flight from London to their posts in Africa, the U.S. embassy said.

The young volunteers—49 women and 63 men with five married couples among them—dined and danced Sunday night at a hotel on Lake Victoria while a few armed troops stood by. They had spent Saturday night closely guarded in a lounge of the Entebbe airport.

In Washington, the state department listed 111 as being held. There was no explanation for the discrepancy between the U.S. figure and the 112 listed by the Uganda government.

The Americans were bound for Zaire, the former Congo; and their chartered VC-10 jet had taken off Saturday after a refueling stop at Entebbe.

Amin ordered the plane back as it neared the border, threatening it with Ugandan air force MiGs that were in the air for a flypast in honor of visiting President Albert Bernard Bongo.

Radio Uganda said Amin suspected that the Americans might be Israelis or white mercenaries hired to soldier in tribal troubles that have neighboring Rwanda and Burundi in turmoil. The broadcast said the president sent messages to the presidents of Zaire, Rwanda and Burundi asking confirmation that the Peace Corps personnel were expected there. He would consider releasing them only after he got this confirmation, the broadcast said.

Observers in Nairobi speculated that Amin was retaliating for Washington's criticism last week of his July 4 Independence Day message to President Nixon accusing him of murder in Cambodia and wishing him a "speedy recovery" from the Watergate scandal. The state department rejected the message and said it would not send an ambassador to Uganda until relations improved.

Peace Corps activities in Uganda were ended this year as anti-Western feelings and civil disorder spread under Amin's military regime. However, a Peace Corps official said the refueling stop at Entebbe was a normal procedure and no incidents had occurred on previous stops.

Abortions' Thrill Gone At 30,000

DETROIT (AP) — A Detroit man who admits he performed about 30,000 illegal abortions says he does not perform them any more now that they are legal.

Frederic Shobe said recently he will end his 40-year career as an abortionist because the "excitement" has gone out of operations.

"Abortions don't hold any challenge now that they're legal," he says. "It seems like every doctor in Detroit has performed abortions and is doing them."

A United States Supreme Court decision Jan. 22 made abortions legal in the first three months of pregnancy.

Shobe says he plans a new career as owner of a Detroit abortion clinic and a salesman for his own medical inventions.

He says he is writing his memoirs describing his experiences as an illegal abortionist without any fear of prosecution.

A spokesman for the Wayne County prosecutor says Shobe could not be convicted if he tells all unless there is evidence to back up charges.

Shobe says he started performing illegal abortions in a Detroit clinic in the early 1950s.

An abortion usually cost from $500 to $800, Shobe says, but he claims he once received $7,500 for a single abortion and occasionally performed the operation free for girl-friends of politicians.

'Sex Shows' Used By Irish Snipers

BELFAST (AP) — British troops in Northern Ireland have been warned to beware of naked girls or torrid loving couples who entice soldiers into sniper sights.

The "sex shows" are being staged at night in lighted bedroom windows in ghettoes such as the Roman Catholic Ardoyne sector of Belfast, the army said today.

A girl stages a striptease—or couples make passionate love—while soldiers move by on night patrol against the Irish Republican Army.

If a soldier pauses to look, he becomes a target for a hidden sniper, the army believes.

"Look away—there could be a gunman about," is the slogan of a campaign among paratroop contingents in the Ardoyne, army headquarters said.

An officer said: "You can imagine what effect a girl appearing nude in a window or undressing in front of the men can have.

"Naturally the lads will look—but we have told them to immediately look round for an ambush."

He added that so far no known casualties have been caused by soldiers succumbing to the "sex shows."

Oil Firms Said Seeking Profits By Restricting Their Production

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Federal Trade Commission (FTC) staff study says the United States Petroleum shortage is the product of anti-competitive practises fostered by government regulations and manipulated by the major oil companies to protect their profits.

The oil companies "have behaved in a similar fashion as would a classical monopolist; they have attempted to increase profits by restricting output," the study says.

If the major oil companies attempt "is at all successful in diminishing the market shares of independents the consumer will pay dearly for this advantage," the study said.

The Associated Press obtained a copy from sources outside the FTC.

Also under study by the commissioners is a still-unrelated legal analysis of possible actions aimed at spurring competition in the industry. Industry sources have said the analysis recommends a concerted antitrust attack on the biggest companies' control over pipelines' refining operations and marketing.

The report noted that Arco, Exxon, Gulf, Mobil, Texaco, Shell, Standard Oil Co. of California and Standard Oil Co. of Indiana are tops across the board in the petroleum industry. As of 1970, the eight held 64 per cent of the proved crude oil reserves of the United States' accounted for 58 per cent of the crude refining capacity and sold 55 per cent of the gasoline that the nation's motorists bought.

A shortage of refining capacity has been cited as the root cause of present fuel shortages.

One obvious barrier to new refinery entrants is the estimated $250 million cost of a new refinery, the staff reported. It said there has been no new entrant in the refining field since 1958.

But the study said that even if a potential new refiner could raise the money, he would shy away.

One reason cited was the federal oil-depletion allowance, which provides a tax credit for a proportion of profits earned on crude oil. The purpose was to encourage oil exploration.

But the FTC staff said that because the allowance makes crude oil profits the least taxable of any phase of the majors' operations, the majors claim that most or all of their profits come on crude oil.

Viet Cong Has 2 Men

SAIGON (Reuter) — Canadian chief delegate Michel Gauvin asked the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) today to suspend routine business until two missing Canadian truce officers are returned.

An official Canadian statement said that the ICCS agreed at a meeting today to consider the request, and to make a decision Wednesday.

A spokesman said that Gauvin asked the ICCS to suspend transactions of normal business until the two men, Capts. Ian Pallen, 28, of Toronto and Fletcher Thomson, 27, of Ottawa, are returned safely.

The Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government confirmed for the first time today that they are holding the two who disappeared June 28 in a Communist-controlled rubber plantation 35 miles east of Saigon.

The Canadian statement said that Gauvin told the Hungarian, Polish and Indonesian delegates that although today's statement by the Viet Cong was encouraging, it is still uncertain how or when the two will be released.

Gauvin said that conditions which the Viet Cong attached to the men's release, such as a ceasefire over a 64-square-mile area, create considerable difficulties.

The Canadian statement said that the commission agreed to take note of the Canadian re-

30-Cent Beef Makes Police Suspicious

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A truck hijacked last week with 40,000 pounds of meat aboard was recovered after police received a tip that a roadside meat market was selling beef for 30 cents a pound.

Police said they received a tip Sunday that the market was operating outside the city at cut-rate prices. But by the time they arrived, police said, the operator had fled, leaving the truck behind with 20,000 pounds of meat inside.

Investigators said the truck was hijacked last Monday on a delivery run from Des Moines, Iowa, to Indianapolis, Ind.

A weather system bringing tropical, moist conditions from the southern United States has left the eastern half of Canada with extremely high temperatures and clear skies.

The system, stretching to the east coast from the Manitoba-Ontario border and north-south from James Bay to the Gulf of Mexico, produced temperature in the 90s in several areas Sunday.

A weather office forecaster said the system is drifting slowly eastward and will be joined by another high pressure area from the west, leaving the country, from Manitoba eastwards, clear, hot and humid for the rest few days.

guest, and today's regular meeting was adjourned until Wednesday when a decision will be taken.

In its statement, the Viet Cong said a report received in the capital today said two men calling themselves Canadians from a local ICCS team entered a Viet Cong zone in Long Khanh province June 28.

"Because they had received no advance notification from their superiors, the local administration thought these persons were sham ICCS member and they held them for investigation," a Viet Cong spokesman said.

Gauvin, who delayed his departure from Saigon to help recover the two missing men, commented:

"On the face of it, the ... statement is encouraging, particularly since it gives no grounds to hope that our two officers are alive.

"But we will not be satisfied until they are returned to us."

No Intervention To Protect Dollar

LONDON (AP) — The United States dollar recovered some ground on European money markets today after the continent's central bankers hinted their governments will not protect the U.S. currency but foil again when no intervention developed.

The dollar opened in Frankfurt at 2.3250 marks, 4½ pfennigs above Friday's close. Dealers reported "private sector" demand; and after an hour of trading, the price dropped to 2.3260 marks.

The rate opened nearly two per cent up in Zurich at 2.75-2.77 Swiss francs, then plunged to 2.695-2.71 by noon, below Friday's close of 2.706-2.72.

"Everyone had expected an intervention," said a Zurich banker. "That's why the dollar shot up in the morning. It did not come, so it came down again."

The volume of trading in Zurich was reported relatively large and hectic.

Food Rationing Possible in U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP)—Rationing of some types of food in the United States "might be necessary in one form or another" if the U.S. is to bolster its dollar and pay for growing imports of energy, a former agriculture department officials says.

Lester R. Brown, head of the department's international agricultural development branch in 1966-69 and currently on the staff of a private foundation here, said in an interview in U.S. News and World Report that President Nixon's curbs on soybean exports and other farm products are a "serious mistake."

He said the temporary curbs "will clearly aggravate this country's balance-of-payments deficit, further weakening the dollar."

"We must recognize that agriculture is one of the few areas where we have a strong competitive advantage," Brown told the weekly magazine.

"A limit on U.S. farm exports would further weaken the dollar. It would certainly limit our ability to import the vast quantities of petroleum that we must have from abroad to keep U.S. business and industry going.

Elegant Music in Stately Home

Strains of elegant chamber music wafted through Glanmore House on Saturday, as first-day visitors flocked through the painstakingly prepared museum, now officially open as a National Historic Site. Other musicians were Lee Stratton on piano and Mrs. Marion Stratton on violin. For story, see Page 3.

Tennis Star Tours Quinte

TRENTON — Jane O'Hara, Ontario's champion woman tennis player, continues her tour of Quinte municipalities today following a three - day stint here.

Miss O'Hare, a guest of the Trenton Tennis Club, said she was "very impressed with local junior players, rating them above their larger city counterparts. She attributed this quality to the facilities in town and what she considered "very qualified, complete tennis instruction and programming here".

Dozens of local tennis players took advantage of the opportunity to face a top-notch player on the court in a number of challenge matches Saturday on tennis club courts at Centennial Park. None were successful in their attempts to beat Miss O'Hara.

This week Miss O'Hara will visit several Quinte communities starting with Belleville, offering free instruction and "pointers to sharpen an individual's game".

Streak Ends As Car Burns

AMELIASBURGH — It was a sad day Saturday for the Ameliasburgh Fire Department. But it was even sadder for Dennis Hogue of RR1, Belleville.

The volunteer firemen saw their record-breaking string of 61 fire-free days end to an end when they were called to Massassaga Point at 11 p.m.

Unfortunate victim was Mr. Hogue, whose 1973 Jaguar XKI20 burned to the ground while he spent three-quarters of an hour looking for a telephone.

The firemen were last called upon May 7 to extinguish a chimney fire on Redeker-ville Road. A department spokesman said the longest previous stretch was three weeks.

Mr. Hogue, a body shop owner in Canadian, had just made arrangements to sell the classic sports car. It was demolished by the time firemen arrived.

Miss O'Hara is housed in each community by local tennis club members with the only cost to the town being her transportation. Belleville is the only centre which will not see Miss O'Hara play, with local recreation department officials having down her offer to come to the city.

As a member of Ontario's eight-member tennis team, she travels to Burnaby, British Columbia next month for the Canada Games.

Something of a surprise member, she won her berth by her win at provincial finals in Oshawa two weeks ago, the first tournament she entered in two years. Miss O'Hara's contrary to her peers, will not compete in any other tournaments until the games and says "I will come back with a medal."

A rare opportunity for novice players, Miss O'Hara has four times appeared at England's Wimbledon Tennis Tournament, giving the junior a taste of top calibre competition.

For information concerning each stop in Miss O'Hara's tour, contact local tennis clubs or recreation departments.

Still No Word On Helicopter

TRENTON — There is still no word as to the whereabouts of four fliers and their helicopter missing during a routine flight in the Lake Bay area of Northern Quebec.

Several aircraft from Canadian Forces Base Trenton remain at the search scene, combing the area for the helicopter missing since last Monday evening.

By today, unless precautions were taken, the four men and their aircraft will have consumed the seven days' emergency rations.

Weather has remained fair though it had hampered earlier searches and armed forces personnel are hopeful.

Several civilian aircraft are participating in the search for the helicopter, operating in the area on a Quebec Hydro project.

Dead is Marjorie Sherman of 301 Stanley Street.

Miss Sherman had been riding on the trunk of a car as it was travelling in mid afternoon. When the car, driven by David Lott, 19, of RR1, Shannonville, struck a mid curve, Miss Sherman was thrown from the trunk, beneath the wheels of a following car, driven by Thelma Sharpe of Newburgh.

The Newtonville car was pushing the Lott car.

Police said two other juvenile girls were riding in the Lott vehicle at the time.

A post mortem on Miss Sherman showed she died of multiple internal injuries. A spokesman for the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police could not say whether an inquest would be held.

Police are still investigating.

Three Cars In Collision

Four people were taken to Belleville General Hospital following a 4 p.m. accident on Highway 401 near Shannonville yesterday.

Nude Diver 'Rescued'

It took an undercover job to conceal a case of over-exposure in the city's south end Saturday.

Crowds began to gather around 8:30 p.m. when a young woman emerged from the Canadian Pacific bridge, stripped off her Mairs River.

Police were alerted and a Belleville fireman stood armed on the scene.

Boat operator Stu Meeks moved in nuts to haul the man into the craft but he kept swimming strong.

The man was finally dragged out of the water by Constable Garnet Goodrum dove in to lend assistance.

By this time spectators were occupying a 11 nearby vantage points and the rescuers had to find another escape route if they were to remove the man unscathed.

They finally settled on the overturned hull of a boat with the man there from the boat into a police cruiser for a ride to the station.

After being held overnight, Trenton Strand, 21, of no fixed address, was released. He is charged with intoxication in a public place and having liquor in a place other than a residence.

Passenger Injured

BRIGHTON — A Montreal woman remains in Trenton Memorial hospital this morning after being thrown from a motorcycle driven by her husband Saturday afternoon.

Micheline LaLonde received facial and leg injuries when husband, Leopold Lalonde, lost control of the vehicle while heading west on Highway 401 near here.

Sunlit Ceremony Opens Museum

One of Belleville's landmarks from the last century was set aside for posterity and the enjoyment of all with the official opening Saturday she said, including hundreds of 257 Bridge St. East.

The opening marked a "dream come true" for the Hastings County Historical Society, said Mayor Robin Jeffrey in her address. It culminated three years' hard work, she said, includ g hundreds of voluntary hours given by members of the society.

"There were two major reasons why the project did proceed," she said. "First, the trust fund given the City of Belleville by Ann Salamon and also the fact that on September 12, 1969, Jean Chretien, Minister of Indian and Northern Affairs, on the recommendation of the Historic Sites and Monuments Board, designated Glanmore of national importance for reasons of architectural design."

Few buildings in Canada, said Mayor Jeffrey, had been given such recognition.

Representing Mr. Cu tien, Judd Buchanan, MP Lorden and chairman of the House of Commons' Standing Committee on Indian and Northern Affairs, commented that architecture was becoming increasingly important to Canadians "as we piece together this country of ours.

"Its trends may be noted in the development of the style of our homes and public buildings," he said. "Homes and are of great importance in assessing the factors influencing our development. We know we are a nation of many cultures, but it is the mix that intrigues us more and more as we rediscover our heritage."

He said architectural historians had described Glanmore House as "a gentle mixture of Second Empire and Italianate architectural styles."

The sedate old home, the sunshine, the lawns, music by the Belleville Choral Society and the Concert Brass Group, the costumed hostesses from Kingston's Bellevue House and the official scarlet of Royal Canadian Mounted Police uniforms all combined to create an old-world serenity, specially fitting for the gala opening.

Mr. Buchanan unveiled the plaque that now marks Glanmore as a national historic site, and after a prayer of dedication by Rev. Harry Davis, Mayor Robin Jeffrey and Gerald Boyce, president of the Hastings County Historical Society, opened the doors to Belleville's new museum.

Mayor Jeffrey and Mr. Boyce then personally welcomed a stream of about 500 visitors who filed through the elaborately styled house and its painstakingly prepared exhibits. Many stopped to sign a visitors' book in the main entrance.

The museum features the Coudery Collection, legacy of the late Mrs. Anne Salamon of Victorian furniture, paintings, silver and books, a Hastings County Room of Canadiana and the unique Dr. William A. Paul Collection of lights and lighting artifacts that dates from 5,000 B.C. to 1900 A.D.

The Dr. Paul Collection, owned by the City of Belleville, is claimed to be unique in North America.

Through June till the end of September, museum hours will be Tuesday - Saturday 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. and 1 - 5 p.m. on Sundays. For the rest of the year, the museum will be open Tuesday - Sunday from 1 p.m. till 5 p.m. It will be closed every Monday.

Guests of honor at Saturday afternoon's opening included Jack Ellis, MP Hastings-Frontenac, MP Prince Edward - Hastings, Dr. R. H. Potter, MPP Quinte, Clarke T. Rollins, MPP Hastings, Warden of Hastings County Horace Casey, Ontario Region chief of Visitor Services for Parks Canada Frank Stevens, Ontario Region Director for Parks Canada Donald Forster, Ed Friel, Area Superintendent for Bellevue House National Historic Park at Kingston and Rev. Dr. Harry Davis (retired) Bridge St. United Church.

Chairman for the opening was Dr. J. Maurice S. Careless, Ontario Representative on the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada.

At the reception, prepared by the Bridge Street United Church Women that followed the opening, Mayor Jeffrey said we have a national treasure that's going to attract people from all over Canada and the United States.

"It's going to bring tremendous tourist growth to this area," she said.

"We are committed to a philosophy of maintaining it as a living thing," added Mayor Jeffrey. A Victorian Christmas Party was being planned already and it was hoped she said, that string concerts would be held monthly in one of the large drawing rooms. "We'd also like readings for children in the library," she said.

Municipal, federal and provincial governments gave Glanmore for entertaining, said Mayor Jeffrey, and it was hoped it would be used.

"Our idea is that the house be used — if there's wear and tear we will have to set money aside for it," she said.

The present budget for Glanmore House in 1973 is $15,500, which the City will come from the city, a further $8,700 from Hastings County with the remainder to be raised by the Hastings County Historical Society.

Turtle Interest

While everyone else at the opening of Glanmore House on Saturday showed most interest in the opulent antiques and priceless p collections, young Robert Martin of Stockdale spent much of his time poring over the display cases of turtle species. "Yeah, I like turtles," was his comment.

In the Mood at Glanmore

Director and treasurer of the Hastings County Historical Society, Cecil Becker, and his wife Rita donned period costumes to mark the opening of Glanmore House Saturday as a museum and National Historic Site. About 500 people took the opportunity to view the old home's interior after the opening ceremonies. The plaque that identifies Glanmore House as an historic site of National importance was unveiled by Judd Buchanan, MP, on behalf of Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien.

Nation's Recognition for Glanmore

The future of Glanmore House on Bridge St. was assured when it was officially opened Saturday as a National Historic Site. J. Judd Buchanan, MP, above unveiled the plaque on behalf of Jean Chretien, Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. After a prayer of dedication by Rev. Harry Davis, Mayor Robin Jeffrey, chairman of the Glanmore House Management Board, and Gerald Boyce, president of the Hastings County Historical Society, opened the doors to the old home's new role and were on hand to personally welcome the streams of first-day visitors.

Museum Tour A Trip Through Hastings' Past

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

Saturday's inaugural view of Glanmore House bore a distinct resemblance to a journey along a Grand tour mid of Victorian Europe.

But around every corner was a glimpse into the lives of early Hastings County settlers.

The apparent contradiction, hardly noticed amid the new county museum's display trappings, results from the harmonious blending of Victorian era extravagance that dominated tastes in the last century and hand-been artifacts preserved during the mansion's 80-year existence.

Inspired by elaborate French chateaux, Glanmore House was completed in 1883 for a wealthy Belleville b a n k e r, John Philpot Curran Phillips. A lover of books and fine arts, the staunch Imperialist called on a Montreal architect, Thomas Hanley, to design the home that remained in his family until only a few years ago.

Inside the house are grand rooms faithfully refurbished to their original opulence, large stone fireplaces enhanced by marble mantels and ornate carvings, a sweeping staircase, shuttered bay windows and displays transporting history into the present.

There's even the traditional ghost story to accompany Glanmore's panelled hallways and servants' quarters. Legend has it Phillips, the original owner son who died at the age of 21, returned to be one of the house's permanent residents.

Curator Marion Lewis described the building that should guides a focal point in Hastings County for y e a r s to come.

"It has hanging spaces, the restored Victorian house effect, thematic displays," he said, "all so people will come back."

Starting at the top of three exhibition floors, he gave a guided tour of Glanmore's 18-rooms housing items on view to the public.

— Marley MacDonald Gallery: It features paintings and sketches from around the Quinte area made by the Point Anne artist until his death in 1971. There's also the first public exhibition of paintings by his wife, Beverley, who died six years earlier.

— Susanna Moody Library: Schoolbooks and drawings of past county wardens dominate what is hoped will become a research centre into the life and times of the early Belleville's most energetic residents. Susanna, who lived here for 27 years, was co - editor with her father, T h o m a s Moodie, of the Victoria Magazine, published in Belleville in 1847-48.

— Gallery: This room on the west side contains Dr. William Paul's lighting collection, reputed to be one of the finest collections of lighting devices in North America.

Five distinct areas occupy the main floor.

— Drawing Room: Lavishly decorated, Glanmore's most impressive display room makes extensive use of articles that accompanied the house and the city - owned Coudery Collection, a potpourri of pieces amply reflecting the liberal taste of their period. In an appropriate setting for the first time are Jacobean chairs, vases of British Parian ware, Louis XVI sideboards and clocks and candles suitable for the finest entertaining salons.

The long room is cordoned, giving visitors a comprehensive look at Victoriana at its eclectic best. Similar exhibits can be found in display cases in the Breakfast Room for those who want to make a closer inspection.

Music - Card Room: An after-dinner spot, this room still houses an organ. There's also a marvellous highboy with a pullout butler's desk.

— Games Room: Mr. Phillips' pool table dominates the room where men retired for gentlemanly competition while their wives took tea. "Everything is in place and everything in its place" was the Victorian motto employed by the house's decorators.

Breakfast Room: The area at the rear of Glanmore is fitted with display cases representing definite Hastings County orientation, although the general Victorian theme also spills over. You'll find everything from commemorative ribbons and badges from old country fairs to Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee pieces — all inches away in glass-covered cabinets.

Dining Room: Original tables, chairs, s i d e boards, mantels and paintings create an appropriate environment for the high tea service bor rowed from the Coudery Collection.

Downstairs has not been neglected although it has been a saw the former dirt floor and exposed bedrock can testify.

—Hallway: At the foot of the staircase, visitors a r e greeted by a bright corridor dotted with 50-year-old signs and early teaching charts, for light browsing.

Canadiana Room: Here, the accent is definitely on life as it was lived by the majority of Hastings residents early in the county's settled history.

At one end is a barnyard scene incorporating building sites and tools fashioned as far back as 100 years ago.

In the centre are more antiques, including two prize-winning over-and-under plough first constructed in Belleville. Also exhibited are oils by Rev. Bowan P. Squire depicting life in the Tweed and Hastings counties.

Mrs. Margaret Simpson's kitchen — copied from the recently-demolished tavern on the corner of Front and Dundas streets — makes an interesting re-creation at the south end. Two fire tongs and a serving platter are all that survived a fire that destroyed the woman's home in 1813.

More exhibits are stored in the attic and in Mr. Lovell's office are four filing cabinets containing archives on "anything and everything you can name about Hastings County".

Visitors to Glanmore will be greeted by either volunteer guides posted in each room or persons who will conduct tours through the museum, depending on attendance. Admission is 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for unaccompanied children, and free for members of the Hastings County Historical Society and their accompanied children up to the age of 18.

Drive-in Robbed

Two men wearing balaclavas held the drive - in restaurant on the corner of A and W Drive-In at gunpoint early Sunday morning before fleeing with the night's receipts.

The men, who appeared to be about 20, are still being sought by police. They were last seen running in the direction of St. Paul Street.

Bruce Edgerley told police he had just locked the restaurant and was about to get into his car, Suddenly he heard a noise and turned around to see a man approaching carrying a black revolver with an eight-inch barrel.

The man told Mr. Edgerley to lie d o w n or he would shoot. He then grabbed the money bag and tossed Mr. Edgerley's car keys toward the A and W roof, only to have them fall to the pavement.

Mr. Edgerley said the suspect with the gun called to an accomplice, standing nearby, "Let's get to the car." At last both men took off on foot in a south-easterly direction.

Mr. Edgerley said the male's faces were covered with masks and both had on blue jeans. He estimated their ages at about 20.

Police were called to the scene shortly after 3 a.m. but found no clues. An A and W spokesman said this morning $900 was taken.

Youth Is Missing In Lake

TRENTON — An air search has failed to find any trace of a Mississauga, Ont. youth who fell from a training brigantine in Lake Ontario near Oswego, N.Y., Thursday night.

Missing from the brigantine Pathfinder and presumed drowned is Malcolm Collins, 16.

A spokesman for the armed forces rescue centre said the fall from the Toronto-based sailing vessel occurred in five-foot swells and the youth was not wearing a life jacket.

Helicopters from Ottawa and three United States Coast Guard cutters as well as police boats took part in the search which was concentrated five miles east of Oswego.

Building Developments

Every now and again we hear of the development of some new building material or other whose durability is greater than anything know previously.

One of the latest in this category is a plastics-based substance which is not only fireproof but matches steel in structural strength while also being light in weight. It is the raw material being used by Skylight Homes, a new Picton firm which expects to begin production shortly of inexpensive new housing units.

Initially production will be concentrated on filling export orders, including a very substantial one from Indonesia.

Some pressing needs could also be met in underdeveloped areas here in Canada, as we suggested recently in describing the plight of Indians living in appalling habitations in a place called McDougallville on the fringes of Red Lake in Northwestern Ontario — a suggestion which actualy drew a request for information on the Picton firm from that quarter.

The firm's housing units are said to withstand all climatic conditions, the walls being harder than brick and as already mentioned, fireproof.

To dwell again briefly on the material being used, it seems a similar discovery by a teenage genius in Australia can be used not only for building purposes but for a wide variety of other uses.

The newspaper, The Australian, noted last March that Gary Cox, a 16-year-old who dropped out of school in Melbourne the previous year because his teachers described him as a "disruptive influence," has come up with a base product which can be used as a building material as well as a soap, a cosmetic cream, and a cleaning substance, to mention only a few of its potential applications.

Young Cox, whose now affluent family could not afford their own home before, has also invented a distance measuring instrument which could revolutionize the aviation and building industries. It allows a pilot or builder to calculate distances or angles in a second and costs a mere $70 in Australia. These are undoubtedly fascinating developments, here in our own midst and "down under," and bolh as can be seen, have something in common.

Transportation Needs

With all those young hitchhikers in mind, we were talking recently about the vold that exists in Canada's overall transportation system. Unless you have a car — and there are many who do not — the problem of getting from A to B can be quite formidable.

By comparison, Europe's extensive buirall networks, running on time and on frequent schedules, leave us standing, which of course is what those hitchhikers are doing as are people in communities no longer served.

For years now our passenger trains have been undergoing a gradual phasing out, to the point where certain communities have no rail service at all, and no public transportation of any kind.

Between Toronto and Montreal we are dependent on equipment that has not changed all that much in years and frequently runs behind schedule. The one attempt to get into a non-stop service, with the Turbo, is once again embroiled in cristis through mechanical failure.

As the over-dependence on cars and highways increases so does the accident toll which is now so routine that the personal tragedy and economic loss it represents is barely noticed.

We wonder if the whole issue of transportation and the need to bring it into line with today's country-wide needs should not be made the subject of fresh investigation at Government level. For in a very real sense we are standing still.

No Move to Refurbish 'Canada House'

Ottawa's Indifference to National Image in the U.K.

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA William O'Connello of Ottawa, who recently complained in letters to the editors of The Journal and the Toronto Globe and Mail about what he described as "the appalling state" of Canada House in London has written another letter.

The second missive, dated June 18, was addressed to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

In it, Mr. Costello, himself a former federal public servant familiar with Canada's overseas establishments, and now an excellent English firm which expects to begin production shortly of inexpensive new housing units.

Apparently it is one that the External Affairs Minister can refuse, for Mr. Sharp has not even bothered so far to acknowledge Mr. Costello's letter.

His proposition:

"Possibly the Canadian High Commissioner in London, (Jake Warren, former deputy minister of Industry Trade and Commerce) has asked for funds for renovation (of Canada House).

"If it has not been possible for him to have the request approved, or if you have pursued the matter with your colleagues from the Treasury Board to no avail, I should be glad if you would advise me.

"I am pleased that given 90 days, I can raise the required money through public subscription from Canadians who like myself still have sufficient pride in our country to do whatever is necessary to have it represented from more becoming quarters.

"I look forward to your reply, yours truly, (signed) William O'D Costello."

It could be that Mr. Sharp's non-response is due to irritation with Mr. Costello's first blast in The Ottawa Journal and The Globe and Mail which subsequently received far wider publicity.

It was just last May that Mr. Costello complained on a score of editorial pages across the land that:

"During a recent visit to London, I was appalled by the shabby state of Canada House on Trafalgar Square.

"Its grimy exterior contrasts embarrassingly with those of other high commissioners and embassies and projects us as rather a dreary country which has become indifferent to its relationship with the United Kingdom.

"The need for external clean ing is so apparent that I cannot but wonder whether its neglect is not part of a systematic and deliberate policy of the Canadian government to downplay our traditional ties with Britain."

In a closing paragraph at that time he publicly urged Mr. Sharp to take immediate measures to see that Canada House is brought up to standard which will allow Canadins to take pride in at least the visual aspects of their representation in the UK."

Canada House is not only grimy on the outside but grubby inside, where reception and only the minimum of services for Canadians is grudging in its chilly impersonal indifference.

Since his letter of early May, Mr. Costello has found some reason to suspect that perhaps High Commissioner Warren has asked for funds to restore Canada House to some semblance of acceptability.

And since either the resuscitation appears to have been refused, ignored, or at best "filed" for future action, Mr. Costello now has addressed himself directly to Mr. Sharp.

In it he covers some of the points previously raised in his earlier letter-to-the-editors.

But he does touch a new point that just might give Mr. Sharp a twinge.

"The citation," writes Mr. Costello, "in the most recent report of the Auditor General regarding the wastage of money in the abortive attempt to refurbish the office of the Canadian Consul General in New York has done nothing to diminish my conviction that Canada House must be brought up to a decent standard in watch pride.

The now-retired Auditor General said that External Affairs planned renovation of its New York offices, paid $3,000 to architects' fees and then cancelled out.

The project was "practically" related the AG, but again after this time spending $25,000 in architectural fees, External Affairs changed its mind.

But by then furniture costing $67,000 had been purchased, which had to be stored first in Toronto at a cost of $6,000, and later in New York for $5,000.

The AG called it "non - productive" spending.

Mr. Costello suggests in his letter now to Mr. Sharp that if the department can afford to frittter away that kind of money in New York with nothing to show for it, External could surely find a few thousand dollars to clean up Canada House.

And if, out of the $280,818,800 External lists as its spending money in the current Estimates, it can not spare enough to clean and lift its face in Britain, then Mr. Costello will pass the public hat.

So much money wasted, for nothing in New York, so much to put on a big, flashy, nothing, but dolled up office in Paris, and so little for London.

It makes Mr. Costello, as he will tell you, "slightly nauseated".

Greek-Born Lawyer Is Veteran of the UN Scene

By GEORGE BRIA

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — For a quarter of a century, Constantin A. Stavropoulos has handled and settled some trail-blazing UN disputes. Now aged 67, he wants to retire with his wife to an island off his native Greece.

Palestine, Korea, The Congo were major battlefields in a career that linked him with Count Folke Bernadotte, Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Wasa Hammarskjold. But Stavropoulos also spent countless hours on those little issues of people brought up by touchy nations.

Stavropoulos has the title of legal counsel, the rank of undersecretary-general, a staff of 32 lawyers and a salary of $43,000. At his level, there is no mandatory retirement age, but he would like the United Nations to name his successor by the end of this year.

"Usually, we create law," Stavropoulos said as he reminisced in his office suite high in the UN skyscraper. "We try to make a decision that stands on the basis of the rules and principles of international law. We don't have books dealing especially with the law of the United Nations."

Stavropoulos is faced with such unprecedented questions as the recent bid by the Viet Cong to send an observer to the United Nations, where the Saigon government already has one. The United States was strongly against the idea.

"It would have meant that we had observers of two governments from the same state. It was next to impossible to insist that the Americans give them a visa," Stavropoulos said. But he has left an opening for the Viet Cong to apply for a liaison office when the question of UN aid for Vietnam comes up, "making it necessary to have contact with all the parties."

In 1972, Stavropoulos was under fire from the press because of a decision that barred correspondents of Taiwan's news agency from the United Nations.

He explained that the ruling was based on the premise that the ouster of Chinese Nationalist government "included journalists working for that government. We felt that the General Assembly had that in mind. No one has ever denied that the China agency was a governmental agency."

He added that the United Nations does not bar nongovernmental Taiwan newspaper men.

Stavropoulos says he spends hours sometimes dealing with "Felinismus" problems such as where to rank a country in the UN book of statistics—"very silly matters, but involving prestige, status."

Both Stavropoulos' father and grandfather were lawyers in Athens, where he was born Aug. 15, 1905. He became interested in international affairs while serving as a legal adviser to the Greek embassy in London during the Second World War. He joined the UN staff in 1946.

He was on Count Bernadotte's team when the Swedish mediator was assassinated in Jerusalem in 1948, but Bernadotte had sent him to Paris because of the illness of another aide. Otherwise, he'd be going next to Bernadotte when the bullets hit.

Stavropoulos met MacArthur while serving as the personal representative of the UN secretary-general in Korea during the war.

"He had extraordinary authority and charm, but he believed in himself too much," Stavropoulos says.

Thbombe, the Katanga secessionist in The Congo, was "another one who believed in himself very much," says Stavropoulos, who served as legal adviser to Katanga at its request early in 1962.

Investment Act Lacks Percise Definition

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The Foreign Investment Act which the Government is rushing through the House of Commons has many unanswered questions.

The concept of the Act is to allow only foreign investments which will be of "significant benefit". The Act does not define what a significant benefit is, nor does it define what benefit is not significant. This lack of definition leaves it up to the civil service and the party in power, to decide at its discretion, what is significant. The interpretation can therefore change with changes of parties in power and political climates. There are those who will say that all investments are of significant benefit to Canada inasmuch as it will provide employment jobs or have the potential to provide future jobs.

Even if the new venture does not provide jobs and the investments go bad, then the mere introduction of capital into the Canadian economy can be beneficial to Canada.

Even a take-over has a potential of benefit to Canada, because of the talents of new management. These new talents can do much for a new company in regard to expanding their operations.

In order to judge whether a benefit is significant, the government will need the ability to predict the future and evaluate the potential of business people as well as the feasibility of their proposals.

With all due respect to civil servants and politicians, I frankly doubt whether there is anyone in Canada woo can truly judge whether most new investments or take-overs will be of significant benefit now or in the future.

If this Act is to pass, then it is imperative that it should spell out in no uncertain terms what a significant benefit is.

Another point which needs clarification is the legality of this legislation. The Ontario Government in November 1971, published a study called "Report of the Interdepartmental Task Force on Foreign Investments". This report was a combined effort of their Departments of Treasury and Economics, Trade and Development, and Financial and Commercial Affairs. The report implies that Ottawa may not have the full legal authority under the British North American Act to pass effective legislation. The report also implies that the various Provincial Governments are also going to have to pass legislation to make the Federal legislation effective. If the government passes its legislation, then where does its jurisdiction lie? It would appear to me, that if the Ontario report is correct, then each province will have to pass legislation as well. Without this, the legislation will be meaningless.

A company incorporated in a province is a legal entity created by the province and obtains its powers from the province. Unless the Federal Government has the legal authority to dictate the powers that a provincially incorporated company has, I cannot see how it could be possible to do so.

Federal Government to stop a foreign investor from setting up a provincial company whose purposes are: (1) make a new investment, (2) take over an existing company.

Motorist Thanks 'Good Samaritan'

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am an aging businessman, and on the evening of June 21, I was returning to Toronto from Montreal, driving via Highway 401. Between Belleville and Trenton, the "alternator" indicator flashed on, and I realized that something must be wrong. I turned into the first exit ramp and coasted down the hill before reaching any sign of a gas station the "hot" indicator and oil lis warning. I finally reached a gas pump where the lone attendant confirmed that I had only sold fuel, and could be of no assistance.

I was wondering what to do, when a young man waiting for a customer overheard the information that it could be a broken fan belt. A brief inspection confirmed his diagnosis. He then offered to get his car and take me to search for a replacement fan belt. After taking me to three distant service stations we succeeded in obtaining one. He then drove me back to my car, mentioning that he once operated a service station. He found some tools in his car, and although it was late and quite dark, he insisted on doing the necessary work. This happened to be a very difficult process, as the bolts involved had rusted and were almost immovable. After laboring for more than an hour he managed to complete the job, enabling me to continue home rather than having to search for overnight accommodations.

He had spent at least two hours of his time, and all absolutely refused payment of any kind, saying that he appreciated assistance himself whenever he was in trouble. From our rather brief snatches of conversation I gathered that his name is Jack Belanger, that he is in the process of moving his family from Sturgeon Falls, and that he is now building a "Drive-In" restaurant near the Trenton Air Station.

I feel that the least I can do is to take this means of thanking him once again for his extraordinary kindness and for reviving my sometimes faltering faith in the goodness of my fellow men.

I wish him the success he deserves.

Permanent Memorial Proposed

Plans for a new permanent memorial "embracing all religions and denominations" at the Belleville Cemetery were announced at Sunday's Decoration Day ceremonies by Envoy Brent Hamphries, Padre of Branch 99, Royal Canadian Legion.

"If all of us would do our part, Decoration Day next year would see the unveiling of a permanent memorial here," he said, calling for public participation. It was 100 years ago, he said, that a group of interested citizens banded together to buy the site of the cemetery and appointed nine directors to administer it.

About 100 people turned up to pay tribute at the Decoration Day ceremonies in addition to the veterans of the Royal Canadian Legion and Army, Navy and Air force on parade.

New County Home Awaits Province

PICTON — Prince Edward County council now is awaiting a government decision concerning additional aid needed to construct a new county home for the aged.

A delegation of council including warden Russell Thompson, of Ameliasburgh; chairman of the social services committee Allan Anderson; county clerk Thomas Walker, home administrator George Ross and architectural representatives has met with Minister of Social and Community Services Rene Brunelle.

Mr. Brunelle has promised an early decision regarding the feasibility of increased provincial aid.

The lowest tender of $1,748,000 for the new county home submitted by Kenvcy Construction, Markham, was received by the ministry at a higher sum than they had planned to approve.

The provincial government ordinarily would pay one half the cost of a new home.

Should the government decide it cannot contribute additional funds, the county would be forced to seek tax needed money from ratepayers if present plans for the new home proceed.

It is believed a difference of roughly a half-million dollars would have to be financed locally if the government refused aid and plans continued.

The Prince Edward County home for the aged has been the target of numerous grand jury reports which found it hazardous in the event of fire. It is a two-storey building, built in 1905.

Warden Russell Thompson has stated: "This is the oldest home in the province and the only one not built since the Second World War."

The ministry reportedly claimed the cost per square foot of the proposed new home was too high compared to others.

Architects for the county in this project are the firm of Somerville, McMurrich and Oxley.

Do Your Pictures Look Like This?...

Summertime. It's vacation-time and family picnic time and often picture-taking time.

If your family album is chock full of headless aunts and squinting cousins and red-eyed children, avoid disappointment in the future by taking a few tips from some experts.

But first...a word about cameras.

Cassette - type 126 cameras, which accept only a cartridge film, are priced from $8.95 up. Experts say they can last two to six years with proper care. Film for this type camera ranges from 69 cents up for black and white film and 89 cents up for color film.

These cameras, just right for the novice, come with fixed focuses, fixed shutter speeds and fixed lens aperture or opening. Some have built in flashes. Some models have several adjustable features. To be good, you won't have to bother with f-stops, focusing, adjusting shutter speed, light meters, flashes and several lenses. If you want to "fool" with all these things, you'll have to move up to a different and more complex camera. See your dealer for best advice.

Whether you're snooting with an instant - type camera, a self-developing camera or an outfit worth several hundred dollars, once you get the subject in focus and you're sure the light is right, composition is...

...cerned with. Remember to — —Move in closer to eliminate unnecessary background detail.

—Keep your lens clean with lens tissue or a lintless cloth and lens cleaner.

—Hold the camera steady and squeeze — don't jab — the shutter release.

—Take care of your film by storing it properly.

Mike Manthorpe, of Rolaf's Camera Centre, explains how to take care of film. Make sure it's fresh to start.

"Don't store your film in the glove compartment," he warns. Heat and humidity are bad for film. Any temperature above 70 degrees can harm film especially color film.

If you buy film in large quantities, Mr. Manthorpe suggests refrigeration. But remember to warm the film before placing it in the camera.

Flash cubes and small flash bulbs have a fixed light output. Best picture range is from four to 10 feet from your subject.

Those "red eyes" results from having the flash too close to the lens. On many cameras, of course, the flash position is fixed. You can however purchase flash extenders. It's also helpful to brighten the room generally and try to divert your subject's eyes from the direct angle of the camera.

Mike Manthorpe says these suggestions will solve 90 per cent of the "red eye" problems.

Candid photography is nice but with a group of people—a children's birthday party, for example — take a moment to arrange your subjects. Arrange kids in a semi-circle or a v-shape. Or stand on a chair in front and above them and shoot down.

When photographs come back from the developers' headless, handless or footless, you'll wish you'd taken extra minute to check before clicking the shutter. Many cameras have squares or rectangles marked on the viewfinder. It's easy to be sure all important parts are within the lines.

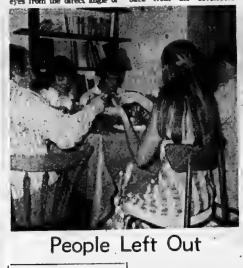
Some quick tips:

—Never shoot towards the sun.

—If pictures are too light, usually you've been too close to the subject. If pictures are too dark, your subject was too far away.

—Photographing moving objects — or people — only when the object is moving towards or away from the camera. If the subject is moving "across" the lens, move with the subject.

—If you photograph a subject closer than four feet, remember your lens and your viewfinder have a different perspective. The closer you get to the subject, the more allowance you must make.



Finally, remember that not all photo-finishing is alike. Compare developing firms. Your pictures might be better than you thought.

Woman Enjoys 100th By Keeping Busy

TORONTO (CP) — "The art of living is keeping busy," says Zoe Free who will be 100 years old in July.

In her centennial year she's busy taking the chair at society meetings working for several organizations, including the Conservative party and travelling.

She makes only one concession to age by taking taxis instead of public transport.

"As long as I have the price of a cab I shall remain a gadabout," Mrs. Free said.

The first thing she does every morning is touch her toes without bending her legs. This helps ward off stiffness, she claims.

She has monthly medical check-ups and reports that her doctors "are delighted by my physical condition."

The only thing wrong with me is my eyesight," she said. "Reading is out and I need dark glasses to go out in the sunlight, but at least I can see and get about myself."

She also eats well and occasionally enjoys a cocktail.

But predictably, this Victorian lady, born in Oxford, England, and an emigrant to Canada in 1881, is not enchanted with the youth and lifestyles of today.

"Life is too easy for them and there is far too much freedom," she said. "It was harder for us when I was young, but we were all the better for that. I think we had a higher standard of values."

For 25 years Zoe worked as a wardrobe mistress at Shea's Theatre in Toronto. She knew the theatrical great Lily Langtry and also met Toronto Mary Pickford when Mary was six years old.

Zoe was honored for her public service in Canada when she attended a garden party at Buckingham Palace in 1936.

Today she is grandmother to five, great-grandmother to 10 and to anticipating being a great-great-grandmother.

"Mother has always had a sharp sense of humor," her daughter Marjorie said. "She still likes dressing up, playing the mimic and getting up to mischief."

Before her July birthday, Zoe is planning to visit England and Scotland with her grandson Paul and his family.

After the centennial celebrations she's off to Miami "if God spares me," she says.

In many ways Zoe Free was aptly christened—in Greek the name Zoe represents life.

Successful Living

'Get Him Out of Your Life'

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I've been going with this man-friend but he is very possessive and would like me sit at home and act like a husband instead of a boy friend.

He is a married man.

I just don't like him any more. I think he is mentally sick or something. Couldn't you put me in the kind of life he has planned and neither could my two children. When I try to tell him it is all over he threatens all kinds of things about what he will do to me and to him.

I am older than he is - nearly 34. Sometimes I feel like a mother to him. When I try going out with somebody else he follows and accuses me of everything I don't do. — All Nerves.

Dear All Nerves: Your so-called loving boy friend is really off the beam. If he is married, has been told you don't want him, follows you when you go out.

Aside from the fact that he already has a wife and children, a legal arbiter could invoke legislation against him for "restraint and benefiting". Nobody has a right to follow anybody and inflict themselves into their lives.

Obviously you haven't the emotional strength to tell him once or start throwing things when he gets near. Get to a lawyer - the toughest one you know - and get this unstrung parasite out of your life before he ruins things for all three of you.

Dear Doris: My son, 36, is on the shy side. Couldn't you put me if he is ever going to get married?

Boys his age are married and have families but he doesn't care to have a girl friend. I tried to push him to think about it but he gets mad. All he is interested in is sports.

I'd like to see him married before he gets like his thirties. I buy his clothes. He's got a car and enough spending money. I can't see why he has to be like that. — Worried Mother.

Dear Mother: When are you going to remove the heavy hand of the over-loving, over-possessive mother?

Anybody who is still buying her son's clothes at 23 can hardly hope for him to think of something as adult as getting married. You haven't had a life, whether it is working or whether the car, too, is the result of your generosity.

Once you remove the apron strings and he discovers himself as a grown man then he will have to decide whether or not he wants to marry. Right now you alienate him from the whole idea.

If he decides he would rather go it alone, that's up to him. Has it occurred to you that he may dread the idea of taking on another woman in his life - somebody who will continue to oversee every last thing he does and auction all the bumps which would help a person reach maturity?

Confidential to A Quarter Century of Marriage: Sounds like a gorgeous 25 years you've had and worth celebrating! A buffet supper at home is good. People often revisit and have more fun in somebody's happy home than in a hired hall - even if it is crowded.

You don't need a special program. If you've got talented yours for to sing or recite give them a spotlight. If talent is a sing song just might be the thing to make for a heart-warming and hilarious time.

(Please make letters to Doris in care of this newspaper) as brief as possible - not more than two pages. And remember that stamped envelope.)

Woman Achieves Wheelchair Triumphs

HAMILTON (CP) — Twenty-six-year-old Hilda May Binns of Hamilton has won 12 gold medals in international competition and holds three world records.

With such credentials she isn't she a celebrity? Hilda May is crippled from the waist down as a victim of polio—and her athletic triumphs have come in wheelchair sports.

She spent a year in hospital after contracting polio at the age of nine-year-old. When she returned home she was treated to "just another one of the six" May children.

"My mother didn't spoil me," Hilda recalls. "She forced me to crawl around the house to develop my leg muscles. I had to climb up and down the stairs on my bottom to get to my bed to town.

"Dad built me an exercise bike and I pedaled miles in the basement."

She entered her first wheelchair meet in 1958 and, competing against men, won the 600 metre slalom wheelchair race and a swimming event.

Her triumphs followed quickly.

At the International Stoke Mandeville Games, commonly known as the Para-Olympics, later that year she won four gold medals and set a world record in the 25-metre freestyle swim.

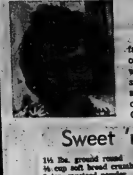
In 1959 she won five golds at the Pan-American Wheelchair games.

Last summer she was part of the Canadian team at the Para-Olympics at Heidelberg, Germany. Although she did not win a medal, the Canadian team won nine gold, finishing sixth among the 46 competing nations.

Mrs. Binns now has retired to concentrate on coaching and on drawing more paraplegics into these competitions.

She and her husband, David, who is also a polio victim, promote sports activities for handicapped persons through their Tube Steel City Wheelers.

"There are many young paraplegics," she said, "who've got to get them out."



Mrs. Binns feels that wheelchair sports, as well as giving a person a sense of worth, provide an outlet for pent-up emotions.

"Wheelchair sports is an out," she says. "If you're uptight, you can wheel it out on the track. It's good for the body and the mind."

Harder Workers Than British? Canadians, Australians Prove It

By DAVE THOMAS

LONDON (CP) — Canadian and Australian office workers can usually find jobs here within hours, partly because employers find them harder-working than British girls.

There has been such a shortage of secretarial skills in London for the last few years that wages have rocketed, though not yet up to the level of Canada's, and an immediate choice of dozens of positions is available to qualified applicants at each of the placement agencies dotted throughout the city. The situation is so desperate, from the employer's view, that one such agency offers a three-week paid vacation to Mediterranean sites to lure workers to stay with them for six months.

While the evening newspapers are packed with pleas for permanent office help, most Canadians here have discovered more variety and a better pay with the temporary-job agencies. The disadvantage is the absence of holidays and paid sick leave, benefits of minor importance for those in relatively short stays.

Maureen O'Brien of Toronto has been working here since January and, aside from the home sickness problems — that she hasn't enough work at the office to keep her busy. But, all in all, she is happy to have some and recommends such a working visit for other Canadian women wanting an overseas break in their routine.

"I think working here is quite an experience, and probably the only way to get to know a city like this," she said.

Now at her second job, found through a "temp" agency, Maureen left her first permanent position because "I was bored—there just wasn't enough to do."

The girls I've worked with are very nice, but I don't think they work as hard as us."

Maureen is paid directly by the employment agency which collects 8¢ fee from the employer. Her weekly salary is $26.76 (about $23). After tax and health insurance deductions she is left with about $70 which is five as a means of supporting a lengthy stay but quite a bit less than she earned as a fully-qualified secretary back home.

The manager of a large agency chain said employers prefer Canadian or Australians because of their efficiency and the high proficiency rate of British office workers means they are quite willing to hire foreigners here for only a short time.

Most Canadian girls are much more flexible, while the so said Canadian stenographers would find working conditions here somewhat different because of generally-outmoded office equipment and a much stronger reliance on shorthand rather than taped dictation. The company's shorthand requirement is 100 words per minute with no more than five errors in the five-minute test.

The major problem is housing. Maureen, for example, pays £8 a week for a single bed-sitting room and spends nearly half her take-home wage. Sharing a flat or apartment is much more common here than in Canada and can cut housing costs to a more reasonable $20 or so a week.

Canadians entering Britain are usually permitted to work until the expiry of the visitor visa which is stamped in their passports upon arrival. Normally, the visa is good for six months but if the immigration officer suspects the visitor intends to remain here illegally he can shorten the period or add a prohibition against employment.

The best way to avoid such a restriction is to visit a British High Commission or consulate in Canada before leaving to apply for a one-year "working holiday" visa.

The "working" part of the working holiday must officially be "incidental" to the vacation itself, but a home office spokesman here said the regulation is applied liberally.

Ann Landers' Get the Facts Straight

Dear Ann Landers: If my memory serves me, last year you were at the head table at a dinner in Washington, D.C., given by the American Kidney Fund. I always believed you were on the level and I had a lot of respect for you. That's all gone.

I see where the American Kidney Fund raised $9M in its first year of operation and spent only five per cent on the patients. The rest went for administration and fund-raising. The United States Senate Committee now is investigating the organization for fraud.

Before I write you off completely I'd like to give you a chance to offer some explanation—if you can think of one. That was you, wasn't it? — Former Admirer in Richmond

Dear F. M.: Yes, that was I. But the dinner was for the National Kidney Foundation, not the American Kidney Fund. These are two separate and distinct organizations. I am not now nor have I ever been involved with the Kidney Fund; in fact I never even heard of it.

Your letter is an excellent example of how misinformation can do serious damage because they didn't get the facts straight.

My name is very precious to me and I don't lend it to any cause or organization that I have not investigated thoroughly. Thank you for writing and giving me the opportunity to set the record straight.

Dear Ann Landers: I was touched by the letter from the 14-year-old girl who signed her letter Born Loser.

Who I was a teen-ager I read the life story of Eleanor Roosevelt. The Ugly Duckling endures impression on me and I've

I'd like to share it with Born Loser. "No one can insult you without your permission."

Whenever I get the impression that someone is slighting me, I should be on the receiving end of a petty or painful remark, I tell myself, "Ignore me as if it never happened." I remain pleasant and unperturbed and it works like a charm.

This is a wonderful approach for another reason. When I stay around, instead of going off in a huff or feeling hurt, I often discover that the remark came out in a way the person did not intend. — Just sign me—Beneol Of The Depot

Dear Beo: Your letter was especially meaningful because I, too, read The Ugly Duckling and loved it. Eleanor Roosevelt was one of my early heroines. Thank you for your reference.

Dear Ann Landers: I have some information that might be useful for the woman who was wondering if she should tell her prospective neighbor, a recent arrival to this country, to shut her hairy legs.

When I was travelling in Italy and France last summer I noticed many attractive women on the beach had hairy legs and armpits as well. Others, however were clean-shaven. I inquired about it from a cultivated and sophisticated gentleman. He told me that the women who shaved their hair from their bodies were prostitutes. It was their euphemism for "Keep off, mister!" — Traveler New

Dear Friend: That's a strong generalization and I'd be careful about applying it to every girl. But cosmetic customs do vary from country to country. Thanks for the info.

Old Hero Budenny In Ninety

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Marshal Semyon Budenny, feted as a hero by both the Czarist and Red armies and the last surviving Soviet commander of the 1917 revolution, turned 90 this year.

The squat officer, who has a flowing mustache and was a favorite of both dictator Josef Stalin and former premier Nikita Khrushchev, still fits the popular image of back-slapping hard-living Cossack cavalry officer.

Budenny was a sergeant-major in the Czarist army in 1917 and formed a band of guerrillas on horseback to fight for the Bolsheviks.

Operating in the northern Caucasus, they were much feared by White Russian troops in the civil war which followed the revolution.

Early in the war, Budenny urged the Bolshevik war commissar, Leon Trotsky, to form a Red cavalry unit.

Trotsky at first rejected the idea, but later agreed and Budenny was made commander of the First Red Cavalry Army in 1919.

Budenny went on to serve in the Russo-Polish war of 1920 and became a hero of Soviet folklore, praised in songs and military marches.

But he remained an individualist. His disregard for orders was reported to have contributed to a large extent to the defeat of another Soviet commander, Marshal Mikhail Tukhachevsky, in his attempt to capture Warsaw in August 1920.

Budenny, another Soviet commander in the south, Alexander Yegorov, and their political commissar, Stalin, were ordered to switch north to protect Tukhachevsky's southern flank.

But they ignored the order and continued to forge ahead with the aim of capturing Lvov, now in the western Ukraine.

Meanwhile, the Poles counterattacked and by the time the southern commanders changed their minds and rushed to Tukhachevsky's aid, the Red Army was in disorderly retreat from Warsaw.

Budenny was out of his depth in the mechanized warfare of the Second World War. When the Germans attacked the Soviet Union in June, 1941, Stalin divided the front into three sectors.

Budenny was given command of the vital southern sector, but was removed after a major defeat in which the Germans took nearly 500,000 prisoners.

The son of a Cossack farmer in the Don Basin, Budenny was conscripted into the Czarist army in 1903 and fought with distinction in the Russo-Japanese War and the First World War.

Lenin, the founder of the Soviet state, had once said of him: "Our Budenny . . . must be considered the most brilliant cavalry leader in the world . . . He shares the harshest deprivations and the greatest dangers with his horsemen."

In 1922 Budenny graduated from the Frunze military academy and he was appointed a marshal in 1935.

Two years later, during Stalin's military purge, Budenny was a member of the tribunal which sentenced Marshal Tukhachevsky to death.

Although never active politically, Budenny has been a member of the presidium of the Supreme Soviet since 1938.

From 1939 to 1941 he was a deputy and later a first deputy people's commissar of defence. For a time he was also deputy agriculture minister in charge of horse-breeding.

The Soviet press, in an article about the marshal on his 90th birthday April 25 presented a picture of a man bard at work on his memoirs and still in good spirits.

In a recent interview with a Tass news agency correspondent, Budenny said: "They say that I used to be young and handsome. Now I am only handsome."

Bylaw Enforced

CALGARY (CP) — Truckers or anyone else leaving a trail of dust and litter behind them on Calgary streets this summer, will find obstacles in trouble with bylaw enforcement officer Al Macpherson. Stricter enforcement of by-laws requiring all refuse and demolition material to be covered when transported now are being actively enforced as part of the city's anti-litter campaign, he said.

Montreal Fiddler Surveys 40 Years

MONTREAL (CP) — Two generations of Montrealers have danced and sung, swung and swayed to the violin music of Gilles Dupuis, a tall, silver-haired musician who has been part of the Montreal scene for nearly 40 years.

Mr. Dupuis' repertoire includes the national anthems of many smaller, newer nations, which were until recently unknown. He played them at the Montreal world fair—Expo 67.

"I've lost count of how many times I've played Expo, Expo, but a few experiences stand out in my memory.

"Princess Grace personally shook hands with each musician. So did Haile Selassie. The time we did the Marche Lorraine for General de Gaulle . . . he stood at attention."

Mr. Dupuis started his professional career as a country fiddler.

"I was a teen-ager when I began playing country music at fairs and barn dances. Not everyone is aware of how seriously these country fiddlers take their craft or that their sound of music has always had an enthusiastic following."

Mr. Dupuis fondly remembers when Montreal was a nightclub city in the 1940s and 1950s, and he would play to full houses at the Copecabana, El Morocco, the Samovar and the Bellevue Casino.

In 1958 he was with the late Denny Vaughan's orchestra when that band became the first house orchestra at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel, where it entertained patrons at the Salle Bonaventure for five years.

The band accompanied such guest singers as Nelson Eddy, Hildegarde and Carmel Quinn.

About the Irish Miss Quinn, Mr. Dupuis said: "She was a gracious performer and I got to know her well. I remember once hearing her being interviewed on radio by Arthur Godfrey, just before coming to Montreal for a return engagement.

"Godfrey asked her where she would be singing in Montreal and she answered, 'I don't know how to pronounce Salle Bonaventure properly but there's a violinist in Montreal who's working on my French.'"

The only musician in his family, Mr. Dupuis was born in Lagrarie, seven miles southside of Montreal, but moved to this city as a small child.

"I always liked the violin and was fortunate to have parents who were able to give me lessons with good teachers. I studied for a time with Maurice Onderet, a concert master of the Montreal Symphony and a superb teacher."

Discussing the relative merits of different violins, Mr. Dupuis said the label doesn't necessarily make the instrument. Not all Stradivarius violins or those of other old masters are what they are said to be.

Still, he recalls with great pleasure handling the violin which belonged to world-famous Canadian violinist Kathleen Parlow.

"It was an early 18th century Guarnerius which once belonged to Vizzi and was said to be one of the five best violins in the world. It was a great thrill for me.

"Old violins need to be played to keep the life in them. Those kept in glass cases . . . can get cracked or dried out with age and the tone is not as good as that of modern instruments."

His own is a German Hopf violin—"nothing wonderful, but satisfactory."

Today, Mr. Dupuis' engagement pad is still comfortably filled—with a few hotels, Indian shows, weddings, bar mitzvahs and graduation dances!

This still leaves him with enough time to reminisce. "I look over scrapbooks occasionally but I've no desire to return to the old days. The era of the big bands and crowded nightclubs was great and I enjoyed every bit of it, but it was a young man's game.

"I think orchestras with a lot of strings will return and there will be good young musicians to fill the place."

Charisma Chosen As Topic

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dr. Irvine Schiffer lists among world leaders with the quality of charisma Franklin D. Roosevelt, Winston Churchill, Napoleon Bonaparte, Lord Byron, Dylan Thomas, Moose Dayan and Adolf Hitler.

Characteristics of charisma are a touch of foreignness, some subtle stigma, the calling to public service, an attitude of romantic polarized action against a human adversary, an aura of social station, a diffidence of sexuality, a touch of doom and an allure of lifestyle innovation.

Dr. Schiffer, research professor in the department of psychiatry at the University of Toronto, lists these eight elements as making up charisma.

He discusses the ingredients in his book Charisma, subtitled A Psychoanalytic Look at Mass Society. He contends that all leaders, including those with charisma, are to a significant degree creations of the people.

Dr. Schiffer tends to present his arguments in technical language, which may make the book more understandable to psychoanalysts than to people in general, but he uses a number of homely similes to enliven his text.

Handcraft Industry Promoted

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The Prince Edward Island government has initiated a program designed to develop the province's handcraft industry.

The minister responsible for the industry department's campaign, Dr. Jon Maloney, has described the program as an effort to restructure the handcraft trades into a viable industry.

Under the program, the department will provide assistance to craftsmen in the form of forgivable performance loans to a maximum of $2,000 a man.

Under the scheme, craftsmen will receive loans for new, used and reconditioned equipment and machinery used in production.

The loans may also be used for renovations and modification to work premises. Recipients may also use up to 15 per cento f the total capital cost for purchasing raw materials and supplies.

Aid Librarians

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government has approved grants totalling $304,827 to 20 regional and municipal public libraries, Cultural Affairs Minister Larry Desjardins said. The grants are being provid i for the first time under amendments to the Public Libraries Act which came into effect in 1972.

Golden Bat to Toronto Squad

By RANDY DERRY
Staff Sportswriter

There seems to be an almost mystic dislike of anything that comes out of Toronto as the minor baseball level by those other than Torontonians. Be it the big city confidence they emit or the fact that their teams are extracted from a larger population base and so are usually quite strong, other centres take great pleasure in seeing a Toronto team go down to defeat by a smaller city.

There is that underlying feeling in Belleville ally but the Grand Championship of the Golden Bat Bantam Baseball Tournament garnered nothing but respect from the fans and those involved with the three - day extravaganza even though it was an all-Toronto affair.

Toronto High Park and Toronto Legion 21 displayed a competitiveness and level of baseball skill that had the spectators at the Parcdale diamond soon forgetting where the two finalists were from.

High Park took the Grand Championship with a 3-2 decision inning thriller from Legion 21 to return the Golden Bat to Toronto after a two year absence. Legion 31 who were hoping for a repeat of last year's drive up the "B" side by Peterborough almost made history repeat itself but fell short in their bid.

Manfred Fischer proved to be the major antagonist to the Legion play for the championship as the blonde pitcher won his fifth game of the tournament with a six hit, 11 strikeout performance.

"I felt pretty good today," my shoulder was a little sore from pitching last night but after the first couple of innings I loosened up and was working good," said Fischer, the tall righthander whose pitching heroics earned him the MVP award in the Grand Championship game.

The game went according to the expectations of High Park coach Andy Gou and manager Frank Plamenyes as their ranks scored once in each of the first, third and sixth to offset a pair of Legion tallies.

"Legion will give us trouble," predicted manager Plamenyes after High Park's 15-6 A championship victory over Waterloo and in the anxious moments before the Grand Championship. "They have a good defence and their pitching is really good. Weve played them twice this year winning 6-3 at the Stratford Tournament and losing 2-1 in an exhibition game."

The Grand Champions who play in the High Park house league, combine a tight defence with timely hits in support of their pitching staff who they know will limit the opposition to few hits.

"We concentrate on our defence because we don't expect many runs. We play as a team with good cohesion between the outfield and infield. Our pitching held up for us today, they really came through when we needed them," praised coach Goin.

High Park made their first appearance at the Golden Bat Tournament a weekend to remember, sweeping through six games undefeated. They knocked off Dovercourt 12-3 in the first round, Birchmount 3-1 in the second round, and then in quick succession defeated Hamilton Mahoney 3-1, Scarborough 4-0 and Waterloo 15-6 to reach the Grand Championship.

Toronto Legion had dropped their opening game 8-2 to Co-

Ellis Juniors Nipped 1-0

GRAFTON (Special) — An eighth inning walk followed by an up the middle base hit decided an exhibition softball game between Belleville Ellis Juniors and Cobourg Merchants here Sunday night.

Merchants held on to shade the Belleville club 1-0 and hang the loss on Ellis lefthander Ron Hill who went the distance on a four-hitter. He had 12 strikeouts.

The losers managed three base hits but could not cause home a run.

A large turnout of fans was treated to an entertaining brand of ball dished up by the two squads.

bourg but then swept aside Agincourt 5-1, North York 2-1, Peterborough 10-3 and Hamilton Tigers 16-3 to make the finals.

Dan Russo sparkled in High Park's 'A' championship run over Waterloo and earned himself the MVP of that game, while Jack Jabrol equalled that performance in the B championship by Legion 21.

"We're mostly second year players and they have the experience which is what you need in a tournament like this. It is really hard to win against competition like you see in this tournament with first year players," added coach Goin.

Inexperience might have been the underlying cause of Belleville Legion 86's early exit from the tournament though nine errors seems the more obvious explanation.

"Errors cost us the game," was the blunt answer from manager Ray Hall after Belleville's 10-3 loss to Waterloo on Saturday left it 1-1 at round.

"We have five second year players and the rest are first year so we did all right but our problem is that we don't have any real competition in this area. We toured the Toronto teams anyway. We haven't played Peterborough for two years and Kingston didn't sign an EOSA card."

Belleville was two for three in its own tournament season losing Peterborough 6-0 in the opening round and outslugging Thurlow 14-9 in the first round before dropping the game to Waterloo.

As every year, the fifth installment of the Golden Bat Tournament received nothing but praise for the smooth running organization the committee hosts and the huge calibre of competition which has combined to make it the top bantam tourney in Ontario.

"A great Tournament. The hosts — everyone were just beautiful. We'll be back," ended stated High Park coach Goin, as a tired but happy chairman Vi Christopher and all those involved breathed a sigh of relief.

A Pair of Big Wins For Thurlow Peewees

Bill Sullivan and Doug Vader were the heavy hitters for Thurlow Plane's Concrete Sunday as the two pitchers connected for seven safeties as Eastern Ontario Baseball Association play against Oroono.

Sullivan's homer, triple and single and Vader's four singles led Thurlow peewees to a 15-5 victory Saturday against Lindsay, Rick Woodward and Garry Badgley combined work from the mound to allow two hits, while fanning 18 batters, to earn an 11-4 win.

Badgley was again pitching to Sunday's game as he worked Orono's batters along with Steve Meeks to allow five hits. Nine walks, while reuring 13 on strikes.

Taking 12 hits from Lindsay's pitchers, Sullivan knocked out a double and two singles for the winners. Gerard Cole and Vader each hit two. Rick Woodward and Badgley connected for triples.

Ted Soule to Manage Eagles

By DOUG WALSH
Sports Editor

The youth movement underway in senior hockey these days has been inserted a step further by the Belleville Screaming Eagles. While most of the attention has focused on the infusion of young blood into the ranks of the players, Eagles have adopted the same policy at the management level.

Thirty - eight - year - old Ted Soule has signed on to manage the club. And he brings the enthusiasm of youth to the position. One of the group of interested hockey enthusiasts who have been boosting the game at the senior level for months now, Soule was offered the job some time ago.

He finally said "yes" to club president Gary Rock's offer and while he views the future of senior hockey in an optimistic light, Ted recognizes the fact that his will not be a simple task.

"We've got a major selling job to do but I'm certain Belleville fans will support a club that provides entertaining hockey and this is exactly what we plan to give them," vows Soule.

"All we ask from the fans in Belleville and the Quinte area is a chance to prove we can deliver the goods. There's no question that changes have to be made and it is evident that senior hockey people in the province realize this and are making efforts to make sure Joe Fan gets his money's worth beginning in the 1973-74 season.

"I've seen senior hockey in Belleville at its best and at its worst. Last year, the team had the players but except for the game with the touring team from Russia, I can't say the club provided good hockey entertainment.

"It seemed that large crowd for the Russia game brought out the best in our team but it wasn't the same before or after that one all-out effort."

While he admits the selling job will not be an easy one, he is sure that "the dedicated people we have working will accomplish what they have set out to do."

One of those workers is club publicity director Dave Lucas who has had his problems lately. He is alarmed over the fact that some hockey followers appear to have doubts regarding the certainty of there being a senior club in Belleville for the new season.

"We want to eliminate those doubts right now," says Lucas.

"Already we have wiped off the debt created by last season's operation and are busy making a concerted effort to raise funds for 1973-74.

"An objective of $10,000 has been set and with the support of industry and individuals, we feel the target will be reached.

"We are aiming for $200 from each of 50 sources. As well as helping the team financially, the donors will receive a pair of season tickets."

While Dave and the other members of the clubs executive concern themselves with getting the financial picture in a clear light, Soule is preoccupied with plans of a different nature.

According to the new manager, it is planned to open training camp early in September, "wherever ice is available."

"There are two men in the running for the position of team coach but we are not prepared to mention any names until one or the other reaches a decision on the matter," confides Soule.

"We have several announcements concerning club player personnel and, we think will definitely give us a boost but again, we do not intend to divulge any information prematurely.

"The accent will be on youth when it comes to players, not just in Belleville but in all the centres where senior hockey is located. Naturally, we are optimistic of our chances of landing two or three top notch players from Kingston now that there no longer is a senior team there.

ice majors had an excellent record in league play and Ontario Minor Hockey Association playoffs last season.

But when it came to moving up to peewee minor with his club for the coming season, Ted found the door closed in his face.

Without getting into the whys and wherefores of this turn of events, it may prove helpful to Ted to know that he is not the first sportsminded person to have one seemingly lumy into failure through no fault of his own.

A kick in the teeth seems to go along with the rewards one receives from a job well done in sports. Why? I'd the answer to that one I'd be dished some light on a subject that has for years baffled people involved in sports. For some reason, it goes with the responsibilities of running a team. Happily, most of the people involved realize what they are up against.

As it turns out, the Eagles have benefitted from the turn of events. Had Ted been accepted as the peewee minor coach, it is doubtful he would have considered taking over as manager of the senior team. Minor hockey's loss is senior hockey's gain, so to speak.

However, Ted still insists minor sports is his first love. If, somehow, he can offset the job as coach of the peewee minors, he would probably find a way to combine his new duties with those of piloting the BMHA team.

"Kids are the greatest," Ted will tell you. And he means it. He has many fond memories of his days with the youngsters, his matter what the adults running things may decide, here is one man who finds it impossible to sever the ties that bind him to sports at the minor league level.

So what the Eagles have is a born, brought up and educated in Belleville manager.

He's spent much of his time for the past 23 years in the Belleville Memorial Arena. He has been interested in the sport and he will work at the senior hockey regain the status it once enjoyed.

All the senior hockey people ask is an honest effort. And it is obvious they'll get that and more from their new manager.

They have their eyes wide opened and if hard work will pull it off, they're a cinch to do the job.

"But this does not mean the choice for the job as manager of the Eagles. While it is also argued that he does not have the experience usually found with one who accepts such a position, it is a safe bet he will more than make up for that with the get up and go that is necessary.

Ted spent some years coaching Belleville Minor Hockey Association teams at the tyke and novice (now atom) levels. It is unfortunate that he leaves the minor ranks with a bitter taste in his mouth.

His Towers Food City Novices, after finishing 18 batters, to earn an 11-4 win.

Badgley was again pitching to Sunday's game as he worked Orono's batters along with Steve Meeks to allow five hits. Nine walks, while reuring 13 on strikes.

Taking 12 hits from Lindsay's pitchers, Sullivan knocked out a double and two singles for the winners. Gerard Cole and Vader each hit two. Rick Woodward and Badgley connected for triples.

'And Now for Riggs' Says Billie Jean'

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The old lady of tennis, after wrapping up the fifth Wimbledon singles title of her career and capturing two other crowns at the event, now would like to wrap up Bobby Riggs.

Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., who at the age of 29 calls herself the "old lady" of the sport she continues to dominate, said Sunday after her 6-3, 6-3 Wimbledon championships concluded: "That's three more Wimbledon titles . . . and now for Bobby Riggs."

The 55-year-old Riggs, winner of the Wimbledon men's crown in 1939, easily defeated Australian Margaret Court earlier this year in a $10,000 challenge match.

After the victory over Mrs. Court, he said he could beat any woman player in the world, including Billie Jean.

Mrs. King, who in addition to claiming the women's singles for a postwar record fifth time by doubling 18-year-old Chris Evert 6-0, 7-5, also won a sixth women's doubles crown and recorded her third Wimbledon mixed doubles championship, said she is ready for Riggs whenever he gives the word.

"I've received tons of challenges from men, and I've challenged him, too. The sooner the better."

She teamed with Rosemary Casals of San Francisco to beat Francoise Durr of France and Betty Stove of the Netherlands 6-1, 6-4, 7-5 in the doubles final Saturday and paired with Australia's Owen Davidson on Sunday to capture the mixed laurels with a 6-4, 6-3 win over Raul Ramirez of Mexico and Janet Newberry of La Jolla, Calif.

Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia took an easy 6-1, 9-8, 6-4 score from Alex Metreveli of the Soviet Union to win the men's final, and the men's doubles went to Jimmy Connors of the U.S. and Ilie Nastase of Romania after a marathon match with the Australian team of John Cooper and Neale Fraser, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 9-8, 6-1.

Mrs. King's three victories sent her past Suzanne Lenglen into the 15 Wimbledon titles. Mrs. King now has 17.

Mrs. King, who had a long layoff from tennis earlier this year, said her first set against Evert in the women's single final Saturday was the best she had ever played.

She still needs to win the Wimbledon singles crown three more times to equal the record of Helen Wills Moody, who took it eight times.

Wimbledon was the usual scene of milling crowds Saturday, fans sleeping all night on the sidewalks to get into the centre court.

Although the men's singles lacked the usual quality in depth, some of the lade round matches were worthy of the best Wimbledon traditions.

Winning the title for the first time was Kodes, 27-year-old Czech star who beat Metreveli—the first Wimbledon final between two players from Communist Eastern Europe.

Evert, 18-year-old star from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., toppled the favorite here, Mrs. Court' in a memorable women's semi-final before losing to Mrs. King of Hilton Head, S.C.

Doghouse For Leon

TORONTO (CP) — Leon McQuay, the talented Toronto Argonaut running back, spoil Monday could John Rauch's doghouse so fast during the weekend he almost went unnoticed.

The 22-year-ole speculator from the University of Tampa left the Toronto dressing room shortly before Friday night's practice session complaining of a bruised shoulder and returned of his own volition Saturday morning.

"We were in the warm - up passing drill when he said his shoulder was bothering him. He wanted to take off and that's just what he did" Rauch said.

"I didn't take any action at that instant, but it's obvious something has to be done," Rauch added. "A suspension and fine are possibilities for starters."

The new Toronto coach made it clear he was not ready to put up with McQuay's temper tantrums. Last season Leo Cahill had to suffer for two years at the expense of a blazing several Argo veterans.

Dave Stockton Hangs On

Win Worth $76,000

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A three-foot par putt, which he said was a little bit dia courteous, nailed down Dave Stockton's victory Sunday in the Greater Milwaukee open golf tournament.

"The courteous thing." Stockton said, "would have been to let Homero Blancas putt first. He had he was playing second.

"But it was my option. I can't say those 3 feet weren't. And I wasn't of a mind to stand around and look at that. I'm a footer while somebody else lined up a putt."

It preserved a one-stroke victory, the sixth of Stockton's career and first in two seasons and was worth a $38,000 first prize in this event that was boycotted by most of the game's glamor names.

Stockton won with a one-over-par 73 in the muggy heat of the final round and had 276 total. It under par on the 7,018-yard Tuckaway Country Club course. Blancas, who made a five-footer on the last hole after Stockton had dropped his winner, and Robert Green tied for second, just one back at 277. Blancas and Green each had 68s, but it wasn't close until Stockton holed the 17th hole from a bunker.

George Knudson of Toronto, with a 67 and 278 total was fourth while veteran Bob Goalby took a 74 and 279.

The finish was worth $8,100 for Knudson, compared with $26,000 to the winner.

Will Homenuik of Winnipeg, among the first-round leaders with a 68, faded to his second straight 75 Sunday and a 284 total worth $299. Ben Kern of Toronto finished with a 76 Sunday and 285 total.

Goalby, the first-round leader, stayed within two strokes of the leader through the first seven holes Sunday until he took a five-triple bogey all on the eighth hole.

Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller and Masters titleholder Tommy Aaron were among those who topped this tournament to get an early start on preparations for the British Open, which begins Wednesday in Troon, Scotland.

"This was a big win for me," said Stockton, the leader since the first round. "I've been under-par 63 in the second round.

Stockton, long noted as one of the game's best scramblers, opened play with a two-stroke lead and had a big lead as he turn, then watched both Green and Blancas whittle it down to two strokes.

When he bogeyed the 17th from a bunker it was one.

Adds Three More Titles

Billie Jean King added three more jewels to her crown on the weekend, capturing the women's singles title and teaming up with partners to take women's doubles and mixed doubles honors at Wimbledon. It was the fifth singles title for the Long Beach, California star.

Famine Is Over

BUFFALO (AP) — Mary Lou Crocker, a non-athlete in eight years, fired a five-under-par 66 Sunday to win the $35,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Buffalo Golf Classic.

Her 54-hole total for three days of play on the par-72, 6,377-yard River Oaks Golf Course on nearby Grand Island was 210, nine under par.

Mrs. Crocker finished four strokes ahead of Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., who had a final-round 69.

Pat Higgins with a 72, and Judy Rankin with a 71, tied for third at 215.

Mrs. Crocker, 28, of Louisville, Ky., earned $5,250.

Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., soared to a 74 Sunday and finished at 12 strokes behind the leader. It was worth $975.

Super Star Is Tops

OTTAWA (CP) — Jim Sypherd of Norristown, Pa., captured the Festival Canada trophy Saturday with a victory in hydroplane Super Star won the grand prix event on the Ottawa River.

After running second to defending champion Bill Muncaster in the elimination heats Saturday, Sypherd won the top prize for after that, I was worried coming to 17."

Dale Tallon of Toronto was the only other player within four shots of Hamilton going into the final round. Tallon began at two strokes off the pace and had nothing but trouble from there on.

Playing with Norman, Tallon took 40 strokes on the front nine. His disastrous round climaxed on the 18th, where he took 10, including one penalty stroke, that left him with an 84. His tournament total of 228 was out of the money.

Plays for Exemption, He'll Take the Money

WINNIPEG (CP) — Gar Hamilton of Toronto ran in a five-foot putt on a sudden-death playoff hole to win the Manitoba Open golf tournament during the weekend and immediately turned his sights to bigger stakes.

Hamilton, 23, second - leading money winner on the Canadian tour, was presented a cheque for $1,800 top money. But the exemption into the Canadian Open was "what I was playing for all along."

The playoff Saturday came after Hamilton and three-time Manitoba Open winner Moe Norman finished the regulation 54 holes at 212, four under par for the 6,562-yard par-71 layout.

Norman, of Gilford, Ont., three-putted the first playoff green. Hamilton, who sank a tricky eight-foot putt on the 18th hole to tie Norman, made no mistake on the playoff putt. Norman got $1,350 secondplace money.

It was Hamilton's first win as a professional, giving him Peter Jackson diamond ring and increasing his winnings on the Canadian tour this year to $6,027.50.

Hamilton had an up-and-down final round at Niakwa Country Club, racking up five birdies and five bogeys en route to the 18th hole. He reached 4 four under par, the total that Norman had taken into the clubhouse after 54 holes.

On the 18th hole, Hamilton pulled his second shot into the rough but chipped to within about eight feet of the pin and dropped the difficult putt.

Hal Tape of Kitchener, Ont., playing in a twosome with Hamilton, had missed by two inches on a 14-foot putt on the 18th that would have sent him into the playoff also. His 213 stroke third - place finish was worth $900.

Hamilton, a tour rookie, didn't let up the pressure after Norman had putted through on the playoff hole.

"If you let yourself relax and think you can miss and still go in, it's poor. You've got to keep

Record Time for Ridley Crew

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (CP) — The heavy schoolboy crew from Ridley College of St. Catharines, Ont., captured the Princess Elizabeth Challenge Cup in record time at the Henley Royal Regatta and in the process set a course record for the event.

In Saturday's final race under perfect conditions, the Ridley crew rowed to an early lead over St. Paul's School of London, Engl., without steering, crossed the finish line in the 2,112-yard course in a time of six minutes 43 seconds, six lengths ahead of the United States entry.

Ridley set a record time for the 37-year-old sprint event. Previous best was a time of 6:49 by Shiplake College of Henley, England, in 6:38.

Ridley was considered the strongest of the 13 crews trying for the prize. The 168-pound average weight of the varsity eight was exceeded only by that of Russia's Trud Kolmna crew of the Grand Challenge Cup, and the only real worry of coach Fred Dorland was that its misfortunes of the last two years would be repeated.

The Canadian school won the Princess Elizabeth prize in 1970 but was disqualified the next two years when an oarsman fell overboard, once because of exhaustion and then due to a broken oar lock.

At the quarter-mile point of the final against St. Paul's, Ridley was ahead by one length, more times of equal the record house to greet the winning crew and recalled the performance of the professional spectator of rowing events during his days as a sports broadcaster in Canada.

"I've been covering regattas since 1924 and I think this is the best schoolboy crew I've ever seen," said Cornell.

The Ridley oarsmen are Ross MacLachlan, New York City bowman; Richard Fraser, Toronto; Braul. St. Catharines; Tim Powell, Niagara Falls, Ont.; Peter Chancellor, Toronto; Larry Cooper, Toronto; David McElderry, Grand Island, N.Y. and Dorland.

Potomac Is Outrowed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Vesper Boat Club outrowed Potomac of Washington, D.C., by one length to win the elite eight-oar race in the Independence Day regatta on the Schuylkill River Saturday.

Vesper timed in 6:08.1 and Potomac in 6:12.7.

The best time of the day on the 2,000-metre course was made by the Cambridge, Mass., crew in taking the lightweight elite eight-oar competition in 6:07. St. Catharines, Ont., was second in 6:14.1 and Potomac third in 6:18.

Syracuse, made up of graduate students, won the senior eight in 6:14.6. Vesper was second in 6:23.5.

The Penn Athletic Club of Philadelphia captured the elite single-scull race in 7:29.7. Dietz and Dr. Larry Klotzsky, also of New York AC, won the elite doubles in 6:51.1.

Frank Pisani of New York AC captured the senior singles in 7:25.

Cambridge won the lightweight four with coxswain in 6:35. Potomac took the elite four without coxswain in 6:31.9.

Aaron Slugs No. 696 Off Former Teammate

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For the last six years, George Stone was in the best possible place when Hank Aaron went to the plate—on the Atlanta roster.

Stone, now a New York Met, turned up in the worst possible place Sunday when Aaron went to the plate—on the mound.

The 39-year-old Aaron hammered home runs Nos. 695 and 696 (21 and 22 on the year) off Stone and the Braves defeated the Mets 4-2.

HANK AARON
Is Behind Ruth

Elsewhere in the National League Sunday, Cincinnati Reds blanked Philadelphia Phillies 4-0, Houston Astros topped Montreal Expos 9-7, San Francisco Giants edged St. Louis Cardinals 5-4, San Diego Padres beat Chicago Cubs 4-2 and Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 in 12 innings.

In Saturday's contests the scores were: Atlanta 9, New York 8; St. Louis 6, San Francisco 1; Cincinnati 3, Philadelphia 4; San Diego 4, Chicago 3; Montreal 8, Houston 1 and Los Angeles 8, Pittsburgh 6.

Happiness for Aaron is playing baseball.

"I enjoy playing baseball," said Aaron when now is the day of Babe Ruth's 714 career homers.

Twenty years ago, no one paid much attention to a skinny kid named Aaron who batted cross-handed playing Class A ball.

Bobby Thompson, who broke the Dodgers' backs with his pennant-winning homer in 1951, broke his ankle, then filled his spot on the Braves' roster and in the outfield and Bill Bruton later, he's still there.

"Kid, the position's yours till you play yourself out of it," said the then Milwaukee Braves' manager, Charlie Grimm.

The fourth time Aaron went to the plate Sunday, he was facing Jim McAndrew. The hurler, pitcher, who had been walking Aaron from the bullpen, doesn't have a psychology degree from Iowa for nothing out of it," said the then Milwaukee Braves' manager, Charlie Grimm.

The fourth time Aaron went to the plate Sunday, he was facing Jim McAndrew. The hurler, pitcher, who had been walking Aaron from the bullpen, doesn't have a psychology degree from Iowa for nothing.

This is the era of audience participation and Montreal fans are getting into the act.

They stopped the show in the top of the fourth by panning the performance of Houston left fielder Bob Watson, who had collided with Tim Foli at the top of the inning.

The six-foot, 175-pound Foli was carried off on a stretcher with a broken jaw after attempting a tag play on Watson, a five-foot-three, 205-pounder who was moving to second on Doug Rader's ground ball.

The left-field critics provided their instant analysis, shower-ing Watson with soft drink cans. Umpire Shag Crawford warned that any further ball striking the debris would be ruled an automatic out.

That stopped the unconventional fan explosion but not the unconventional one. When Watson came to the plate in the ninth, he was booed.

Singer Claude Raymond, who is the star of the game, being a native son, led the Astros' come-from-behind victory.

Pepe Frias, Foli's replacement, had given the Expos a 7-5 lead in the seventh with a two-run single. But the Astros came up with one run in the eighth and three more in the ninth to win as Cesar Iielms' two-run single did the most damage.

On the damage he inflicted on Foli, Watson said: "Foli ran into my elbow. I'm sorry he got hurt like that."

Cincinnati shut out Philadelphia on Jack Billingham's four-hitter and Phils' manager Danny Ozark, in turn, shut out the press.

Ozark invoked his form of freedom from the press after the game for 30 minutes, blasting his club for "lazy play."

Willie McCovey, who has been relegated to the role of pinch hitter during Charlie Fox's youth movement, entered the game in the fourth after Gary Maddox was hit by a pitch and went three-for-three with two RBI to key the Giants' victory.

Cincinnati's Johnny Bench connected for his 20th homer in the fifth inning off Padres' starter Steve Arlin.

Willie Davis ended a 12-inning contest with the Pirates with his 13th homer of the year.

YOUTH NOT SERVED

TORONTO (CP) — Youth was not to be served Saturday when former hockey player, Herb Carnegie, 53, outclassed youthful Dave Gardner in 80-degree heat for the Summit golf club's championship. Gardner, 22, who hopes to nail down a berth with the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens next season, ended a two-year golf retirement three weeks ago when he joined the Summit club.

Wannamaker Pitches Oshawa to the Top

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Orhawa walloped Niagara Falls 9-1 in Ontario Fastball League play Sunday to move into first place in the western division while Toronto, previously setting the pace in the division, fell a half game behind the lead with two straight losses.

St. Catharines edged Toronto 4-3 while in the third game Sunday, London whipped Welland 7-1.

In play Saturday, Niagara Falls blanked Toronto 2-0, St. Catharines whipped Kitchener 6-1, London squeezed by Welland 7-6 and Newmarket downed Woodstock 8-2.

During the weekend play, London moved into third place in the west, only one game behind Toronto.

Oshawa tagged three Niagara Falls pitchers for nine hits in the Sunday game, including a double and single from catcher Bob Solaman who drove home three runs.

Paul Wannamaker of Trenton notched up the win, striking out 16 and allowing only four hits.

Larry Foxton's eighth-inning single drove in the winning run as St. Catharines downed Toronto. Toronto had a 3-0 lead in the top of the first before St. Catharines got in the first third and fourth tied the game.

Dick Balint was the winner, scattering five hits.

Follmer Carling Winner

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — George Follmer, the 1972 series winner, stormed past the unlucky favorite, Mark Donohue, and won the $75,000 Carling Grand Prix Challenge Cup race at Road Atlanta Sunday.

Donohue, driving the Roger Penske Porsche, had established a 72-second lead during the first 40 laps of the 100-lap race Saturday. But he fell behind at the start of Sunday's finale and eventually went out of contention with two early pit stops forced by stalling fuel in his cockpit.

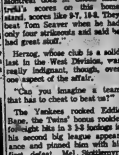
Follmer, a veteran driver from Arcadia, Calif., drove his Porsche into the lead at the start of Sunday's action and went almost two laps in front as Donohue fell into fourth place. Jochen Cords of Hunstville, Ont., finished 12th, completing 91 laps. He won $1,500 in prize money.

Follmer earned $15,000.

Do They Steal Signs To Beat the Rangers?

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Texas Rangers usually get their man, and manager Whitey Herzog of the baseball Rangers version is no exception.



Herzog also got a double defeat Sunday at the hands of Milwaukee Brewers, 6-4 and 7-3, but thinks he may have caught a couple of varmints in the act of stealing the Rangers' signs from a small chalet high in the centre field bleachers.

Umpire Bill Haller ordered a man with binoculars out of the chalet and told manager Bernie Brewer to take off the glasses.

"I suspected something Saturday when they got those 17 runs," Herzog said. "Hell, this is the same team as last year and they didn't hit like that then. That Bob Coluccio looked like Joe DiMaggio.

Elsewhere Sunday in the American League, New York Yankees trounced Minnesota Twins 7-0, Boston Red Sox whipped Chicago White Sox 11-2 in 10 innings after dropping their doubleheader opener 8-1, Oakland A's nipped Baltimore Orioles 6-5 on Gene Tenace's 10th-inning homer, Detroit Tigers blanked Kansas City Royals 3-0 and California Angels took a pair from Cleveland Indians, 10-4 and 5-3 in 10 innings.

Oakland edged Baltimore 5-4 Saturday while Kansas City topped Detroit 3-2. Milwaukee swamped Texas 17-2, Boston downed Chicago 7-2, California walloped Cleveland 7-1 and Minnesota thumped New York 8-1 and 6-2.

After a 18-hit assault Saturday, the Brewers got home runs from Johnny Briggs and Dave May in Saturday's opener, two from May and George Scott in the nightcap.

Herzog, though, wasn't overly harsh on the Brewers.

"I can't complain, he'd said, but we have no place to put a guy like that," he said. "Hell, let

Veterans Dominate

Port Credit (CP) — Veterans continued to dominate the men's rankings in the Ontario closed tennis championships during the weekend while the women's players set moved ahead in the women's playoffs.

Veterans Davis Cuppers Harry Fauquier and Keith Carpenter, both of Toronto, hooked up in the men's finals with Fauquier running up 6-3, 6-3 victories Sunday.

Twenty-five-year-old Barbara Brzakowska of Toronto captured the women's title with a hard-fought win $1,500 in la-bels. Deu-Ann Monkhist, 17, of Barrington.

Mazuzler, 31, captain of this year's Canadian Davis Cup team after seven years as a player, outlasted Mayfair teammate Peter Pospisil 6-3, 2-6, 6-2, while Carpenter dropped the opening set, 6-3, to club-mate Dale Power before posting 7-6, 6-0 wins.

Miss Brankovska, recently returned from Europe where she was a member of Canada's Federation Cup team, crushed Brenda Dixon of Toronto 6-2, 6-1 Saturday while Miss Mustafian romped 6-1, 6-4 over Toronto's Jane Bonsels.

House Faces Busy Week

OTTAWA (CP)—Members of Parliament today start their second overtime week of the summer facing a stack of legislation with no firm indication how long they will have to stay.

The government normally tries to wind things up by the end of June but this year, weighed down by minority-position restrictions, it seems resigned to a far later recess than usual.

Debate resumes today on a bill to suspend operations of 19 electoral boundaries commissions—one for each province—and put off for another 18 months the thorny question of how to redraw boundaries for Commons constituencies.

While generally supported by all parties, the issue touched the raw nerve of political survival and has already produced two full days of debate.

It is expected to take at least today, and perhaps longer, to complete a second reading and send the bill to committee for detailed study.

After that, the House will begin debate on legislation to limit election expenses and force public disclosure of all campaign donations over $100.

Both the Liberals and New Democrats have agreed to give the bill quick passage but Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin said Monday that members want to speak and he would like up to three days to discuss it.

He said the issue is particularly sensitive in the light of recent reports on Liberal campaign financing tactics and the Conservatives may have new ammunition to use during the week. He would not elaborate.

This debate will be followed by third reading of legislation to legalize the status of the majority of immigrants living in Canada against the law, and to clear a massive backlog of appeal cases facing the immigration appeal board.

It is expected to get through with little difficulty but will be followed by contentious stamp-and-exit legislation to help finance the 1976 Montreal Olympics.

After that MPs will return to one of the most controversial bills of the entire session—third reading debate on the proposed five-year extension of the partial capital punishment ban that expired last December.

Ronning's Peace Missions Undermined States Paper

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Canadian envoy Chester Ronning's two peacekeeping missions to North Vietnam in 1966 were undermined by skeptical United States officials and doomed to failure by Washington's persistent military escalation.

In a copyright story by Charles Taylor and S. J. Noumoff, the newspaper says the fact the missions were undermined is made clear from the Pentagon papers, including a previously unpublished chapter which describes attempts by Mr. Ronning, a retired Canadian diplomat, to arrange a negotiated settlement.

The Ronning missions were arranged by the Canadian government partly because the then external affairs minister, Paul Martin, was determined to show the Canadian people that Canada was not a U.S. satellite, the papers were reported as having said.

They tell how a North Vietnamese offer of informal talks—which Mr. Martin regarded as significant was rejected by Washington at a time when U.S. defence secretary Robert McNamara was recommending stepped-up bombing of the North.

The papers also relate how Washington began bombing oil storage depots in Hanoi and Haiphong immediately after Mr. Ronning's second visit, despite Mr. Martin's warning that this would make it appear that the U.S. had used the Canadian's trip as a pretext to justify further escalation.

Mr. Ronning, born in China, speaks Mandarin fluently and was the Canadian charge d'affaires in Nanking when the Communists came to power in 1949.

He was a strong advocate of Canadian recognition of China and had hoped to visit Peking after Hanoi. But he was informed by the Chinese that this would be "inopportune."

Not Failure Says Ronning

CAMROSE, Alta. (CP) — Former Canadian envoy Chester Ronning said Sunday his peacekeeping mission to North Vietnam in 1966 did not fail, but took 2½ years to bring results, partly because the United States was seeking a military victory rather than a negotiated settlement.

He was commenting on a story in the Toronto Globe and Mail which said his missions was undermined by skeptical U.S. officials and doomed to failure by Washington's persistent military escalation.

Canadian Unions Broaden Plans

WINNIPEG (CP) — Delegates to the fifth annual convention of the Council of Canadian Unions broadened their future Sunday, changed their collective name, and refined their organization machinery.

With speeches kept to a minimum, the more than 70 delegates from Manitoba, British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario, Quebec and Yukon Territories, had ample time to chart a course for developing an independent national labor movement.

Adoption in principle of a resolution for the executive board to design a national organizing program followed a plea Saturday by Secretary Treasurer R. Kent Rowley of Montreal for the more than 200,000 workers in various Canadian unions to unite around a common cause.

Manitoba Labor Minister Russell Paulley applauded the efforts of the CCU in organizing labor.

He said Manitoba's rules for organizing labor are possibly the most favorable in Canada, but added that with the exception of teachers and civil servants, only about 35 per cent of the Manitoba labor force is organized.

Mr. Paulley is retired as a railway worker but the former Manitoba NDP party leader still carries a union card as a member of the International Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, an affiliate of the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC).

He said some might feel it is heresy for a member of a CLC affiliate to be friendly to the CCU, but there were larger problems to solve.

"I enjoin you to go into areas where the unorganized are working under conditions that are intolerable," Mr. Paulley told CCU members. Later he told reporters the farm and retail areas particularly need organizing.

Wiretap Controls Planned

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government is considering setting up a code governing use of wiretaps to fight organized crime but including safeguards to protect privacy, Premier Robert Bourassa said Saturday.

"It is obvious wiretaps must be used with discretion," Mr. Bourassa said. "It is not surprising that we are thinking of setting up a code in view of the nature of this instrument when used to provide evidence."

The premier said he had had discussions with Justice minister Jerome Choquette about the preparation of the code.

The discussions were preliminary and it would be wise to wait to see first what happened to proposed federal privacy on the protection of privacy, he said.

Mr. Bourassa, in an interview with Le Devoir, avoided any mention of a furor over wiretapping which lasted three weeks in the national assembly.

It led to the resignation Thursday by Mr. Choquette that a now-deceased Liberal minister, Pierre Laporte had been linked in police files to organized crime.

Mr. Laporte, labor and immigration minister in Mr. Bourassa's cabinet, was murdered Oct. 17, 1970.

"There is need for a code for wiretap use which results from all that," Mr. Bourassa replied when asked whether he recognized the right of regular or special police forces to put wiretaps on his ministers' telephones.

"Mr. Choquette is in complete agreement with me on that."

Substitutes

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Researchers at the Ontario Agricultural College, University of Guelph, said Sunday they have worked out livestock and poultry feed compounds to replace increasingly expensive soybean meal.

In a statement Sunday, the researchers said the compounds, which have lower protein counts, would slow the growth rate of animals but farmers could expect greater profits because of the lower costs.

The researchers recommended non-protein nitrogen sources as replacements for soybean. They include amino acids, urea, meat meal, rapeseed meal and high-protein grains such as barley.

The cost of soybean meal has increasd to $490 a ton from $125 one year ago.

Parks Full

TORONTO (CP) — Thousands of city-dwellers, seeking relief from 90-degree temperatures Sunday, forced five Metropolitan Toronto region conservation parks to close their gates early.

Albion Hills, Edmund Boyd, Heart Lake, Bruce's Mill and Claireville conservation areas were barred to visitors Sunday afternoon, but people kept coming—climbing gates and crawling under fences to get in.

Orange March

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — More than 4,000 Protestants, members of the Loyal Orange Order, gathered here Saturday to mark the 83rd anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne in Ireland.

Highlight of the celebration was a parade which included groups from 75 lodges in western Ontario, including Toronto, London and Midland.

Leading the parade was the Owen Sound Legion pipe band, followed by a group of women from lodges in Scotland.

Pilot Missing

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The pilot of an F-101 jet fighter apparently died when his plane crashed into Lake Ontario Saturday, a military spokesman said Sunday.

The weapons system officer of the two-man craft was rescued.

The United States Coast Guard called off the search for the pilot, Lt.-Col. Joseph Fell, 45, Saturday afternoon.

Odor Noted

KINCARDINE, Ont. (CP) — A faith odor of rotten eggs from the Bruce heavy water plant raised a brief but false alarm Sunday night about a leakage of deadly hydrogen sulphide gas.

Donald MacKenzie, foreman of nearby Inverhuron provincial park, said there was "a little odor" in the air, but it "was certainly not serious."

He said a meter in the park designed to detect the gas did not register its presence.

Hydro officials said they knew nothing of the incident but said hydrogen sulphide is occasionally burned off at the plant and produces an odor.

Air-tight gas shelters were installed in the park last year in case a major leak did occur.

Police Drown

MONTREAL (CP) — Two Montreal policemen drowned Sunday in Dolphin Lake at Man and His World, site of the 1967 World's fair, after rescuing a woman who had fallen into the lake.

Police identified the victims as Constable Andre Desilets, 25, and Constable Claude Sarrazin, 30, a 12-year veteran of the Montreal police force.

The woman, 20, had removed her shoes to soak her feet when she slipped off the dock into the water.

A friend's cries brought the two constables to her aid.

Contable Desilets grabbed the woman's arm but he fell into the lake. He managed to push the woman into a position where she could cling to the dock, but in so doing he pushed himself farther out into the lake. Then, witnesses said, he seemed to "get sick" and start thrashing around.

Contable Sarrazin, a non-swimmer, jumped in to help him. He quickly disappeared beneath the surface.

Police said the two were weighed down with about 10 pounds of regulation equipment.

Boats Race

KINGSTON, Ont., (CP) — The Great Steamboat Race Saturday was akin to the match of the tortoise and the hare, with a little help from the handicapper.

The Eagle, chugging along at less than two horsepower with owner David Conroy of Lron, N.Y., at the helm, finished the final round out in front of the two remaining qualifiers.

But it took a 13-minute head start to provide the 20-foot, 1915 propane-burner with enough of a lead over the more powerful The Queen, owned by Donald Beckner of South Lancaster, Mass., and Whippoorwill Queen, captained by Jim Grayson of Bristol, Tenn.

The Queen left second with Whippoorwill Queen departing third, 17 minutes behind the Eagle.

Meeting Ends

VANCOUVER (CP) — A five-day assembly of more than 50,000 Jehovah's Witnesses ended Sunday night and caused what officials at Canada-United States border points termed the worst area traffic jams in history.

Cars were backed up for seven miles at the main British Columbia crossing 30 miles south of Vancouver, leading to Blaine, Wash.

At border points farther east, in the Fraser Valley, lineups were up to three miles long.

A U.S. customs officials at Blaine told 70 per cent of the traffic was Witnesses returning home.

Exports Boost Farm Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — A huge export drain on United States farm products, mainly wheat, corn and soybeans, is adding an extra $2 billion to consumer food bills this year, says the agriculture department.

Even with the freeze announced by President Nixon last month, retail food prices are expected to climb at least 12 per cent this year. Department analysts say at least 1.5 to two per cent of that increase can be linked directly to farm exports.

In all, food spending may rise to $135 billion this year from about $125 billion in 1972. Higher prices are the main reason for the $10-billion boost, but there are more mouths to feed too. And they are eating more.

Retains Control

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A square-jawed Lutheran leader, Rev. Dr. J. A. O. Preus, fought off sharp opposition Saturday night to retain command of his religious denomination, reinforcing his drive to tighten controls on its teachings.

Withholding Papers Costs Nixon One Probe Backer

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon's refusal to submit White House documents to the Senate committee investigating the Watergate case has cost him the support of at least one committee member — he thought he could count on, Senator Edward Gurney (Rep. Fla.).

Gurney aligned himself against the president Sunday, saying he thinks the committee should be allowed to see any White House documents directly bearing on the June 17, 1972, bugging of the Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate office building.

Of the four Democrats and three Republicans on the Watergate committee, Gurney was the lone supporter the White House felt it had, said former White House counsel John Dean.

Dean told the committee in testimony two weeks ago that former White House aide John Ehrlichman told the president Gurney could be relied upon to support the administration without being asked to do so or told what to say.

The four Democrats, Dean said, could be considered hostile, and of the two remaining Republicans, Senator Lowell Weicker of Connecticut has been a leader in efforts to uncover the Watergate cover-up and Senator Howard Baker of Tennessee, described by Ehrlichman as an "unknown," has been putting pressure on Nixon to meet with the committee.

This, the president has refused to do, rejecting Baker's efforts at a compromise meeting not before the committee but in the White House.

Nixon wrote to the committee's chairman, Senator Sam Ervin of North Carolina, Saturday that to appear before the committee would violate the principle of the separation of governmental powers and to submit White House papers would lead to the destruction of the confidentiality of presidential decisions.

"If he has nothing to hide, why does he refuse to appear?" asked Senator Herman Talmadge, a Georgia Democrat who is on the committee, on a television program Sunday.

Gurney, appearing with Talmadge, said he believes the president should be regarded as innocent until proven guilty and said it would be premature for Nixon to appear before the committee prior to refuting accusations of a single witness, Dean, who testified for five day that Nixon knew of the Watergate cover-up.

But on Nixon's refusal to release the papers, Gurney said: "I think we probably ought to be able to get any documents that have a direct bearing on this Watergate affair and who is involved and what happened."

Ervin said Saturday that he would prefer not to subpoena the papers and the matter appeared to have dropped there—until Gurney's statement.

Now the way may be clear for a direct constitutional challenge to the president's right to keep the papers from the committee.

Senator Robert Byrd of West Virginia, the Democratic majority whip, said on another television program Sunday that he thinks the full Senate would support the Ervin committee if it decided to subpoena the papers.

Newport Festival Stays in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — As the last notes of the 16-day Newport Jazz Festival in New York fade, impresario George Wein is thinking that he probably bit off more than he could chew this year—and lost money. But he enjoyed himself and he's making plans for next year.

The last concert, a sellout at 16,000-seat Nassau Coliseum Sunday night, starred Aretha Franklin, Duke Ellington and Ray Charles.

After 16 years in Newport, R.I.—all but the first few years run by Wein—and two years in New York, Wein says the festival will be back in New York again next year.

Profits from jazz festivals he presents in other cities around the world will have to offset this year's losses here, Wein added.

But there'll be some changes made. Next year the jazz festival won't compete with itself. During this year's festival, there was just too much happening at the same time.

And Wein won't be booking afternoons and outdoors.

"We lost over $100,000 alone in Central Park's Wollman Amphitheatre," Wein said. The amphitheatre holds 8,000 persons and the largest crowd at seven concerts—six in hot sun and one in rain—was 1,800.

More tickets were sold for Carnegie and Philharmonic Hall than last year, Wein said.

The two midnight jam sessions, in 6,000-seat Radio City Music Hall, were sold out and nearly sold out.

Concerts at the Apollo Theatre in Harlem, the impresario noted, "were up and down."

"When Dave Brubeck and Carmen McRae were there, it was nearly filled. When the people weren't so famous, it fell off. I think primarily, though, the audience for jazz is white. The audience for soul is black.

"Out of town, jazz and soul together catches on. It doesn't in New York."

Petite, Blonde Actress Veronica Lake Is Dead

BURLINGTON, Vt. (Reuter) — Actress Veronica Lake, 53 one of Hollywood's biggest box office attractions in the 1940s when her "peek-a-boo" hairstyle started a national fad, died Saturday.

A spokesman at the Burlington Medical centre said Miss Lake succumbed from acute hepatitis at 4:15 a.m. after entering the hospital a week ago.

Miss Lake appeared in 26 films, and at the height of her fame and beauty her suitors included such world-famed multimillionaires as Howard Hughes, Aristotle Onassis and the actor Bing Crosby.

One of her three husbands was film director Andre de Toth.

She co-starred with Alan Ladd in several movies, the best-known which was This Gun for Hire. Her other films included So Proudly We Hail, Bring on the Girls, I Married a Witch, and Blue Dahlia.

Miss Lake's career went into decline in the early 1950s and she dropped out of sight for several years. She was in the news again several years ago when a reporter discovered her working as a waitress in a New York cocktail lounge.

Miss Lake admitted to having a drinking problem.

Asked by an interviewer if she would change anything if she had her life to live over again, Miss Lake said, "I wouldn't live it any differently than it was. How would I learn to be a person otherwise?"

The "peek-a-boo" hairstyle developed purely by accident, a natural wave of her long, blonde locks fell over her right eye during a rehearsal for one of her earliest films, I Wanted Wings, in 1941. People on the set liked it so much that she decided to make it her trademark.

Other American women copied the style — so much so that the U.S. government asked her to change it during the Second World War so that many women were catching their hair in machinery in defence factories.

Romeo and Juliet In New Production

OTTAWA (CP) — Modern wonders of electronics and stage craft have been combined with classical ballet and the words of William Shakespeare in a stunning new production of Romeo and Juliet at the National Arts Centre.

Star Cross'd, the title, given the work by choreographer Brian Macdonald from the prologue of the play, opened Tuesday night and won a five-minute ovation from an audience which nearly packed the 2,300-seat opera house.

Feuding of the lovers' roles are Lawrence Rhodes, a West Virginian now with the National Ballet of Canada, and Annette av Paul, a graduate of the Royal Swedish Ballet who played the role of Rose Latulippe for the Royal Winnipeg Ballet.

Music was composed by Harry Freedman of Toronto in Elizabethan Renaissance style, using instruments of Shakespeare's day, such as lutes, recorders and viols.

The music is prominet only in the ensemble dances, and gives way to recordings of Shakespeare's words, spoken or whispered and reproduced in multi-channel sound.

The costumes, too, are Renaissance, brilliantly colored court dress and robes except for Juliet's nipple white dresses and Romeo's tights.

About the only contemporary touch is the set, made of several 18-foot sculptured panels that are moved about to create scenes.

Star Cross'd was presented with two other, shorter new works—Series 2, Occasion, to music by Harry Freedman and J. S. Bach, choreographed by Macdonald, and Songs for Dark Voice, choreographed by Bry. Seaman to music composed by the National Arts Centre Orchestra conductor Mario Bernardi and classical ballet steps with the fluid movements of modern dance.

Songs for Dark Voice, choreographed by Sonia Tavernier of the Royal Winnipeg and Les Grands Ballets Canadiens, depicts life for a girl in a big city,

Records to be Picked

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences has announced the establishment of a Hall of Fame "to honor recordings of lasting, qualitative or historical significance."

The academy said Sunday that recordings selected—the first year there will be only one—will come from before 1958. Hall of Fame selections will be announced when the academy began giving its Grammy Awards for excellence.

Paul Weston, conductor-composer, who has spearheaded the project, said: "The idea will be to select recordings, rather than any individual artists or song writers or producers."

It ha not yet been determined what city will have the Hall of Fame.

Mariposa Festival Pulls Full Houses

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's premier showcase for folk music, the Mariposa Folk Festival, drew capacity crowds Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Toronto's Centre Island, dispelling any doubt that it has grown into an established institution.

Organizers, who had budgeted $12,000 for promotion, spent only a fraction of that as word-of-mouth was mainly responsible for the audiences of about 8,000 each day.

About 150 new folk musicians sent the festival audition tapes, asking to be booked for an appearance, but Mariposa had room for only two unknowns — one person was Bal Konle, who came all the way from Gambia.

Dick Fidali, a member of the local music fraternity and a Mariposa pensioner, told a seminar at the festival that the Canadian Association of Performers, Authors and Composers — the organization in charge of collecting fees for the use of Canadian songs on radio and television and in clubs and concerts—paid out $4 million in royalties in 1972.

Bill Mair, Gitzinger Gordon Lightfoot's business manager, told the seminar that Lightfoot's touring tours of Russia in January, the first Western folk singer to receive such an invitation.

There was a concert of love songs, featuring many of the festival's name performers, such as Jack Scheciman and John Prine.

The contrast and variety of the festival continued with the appearances of Indian dancers, a symphony of seven fiddlers and a sprinkling of blues.

ELDORADO Joyce Mc-Carey of Belleville; Mrs. Fred Walker and her grandson of Windsor were weekend visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Blakely and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Blakely, Mr. and Charlie of Silver Springs, New York are spending their vacations in their home here.

Showbiz Shorts

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Sandy-colored hair hangs over his collar, and a moustache curves about his lips. But George C. Wallace Jr. says his father, the Alabama governor, doesn't seem to mind.

George Jr. wants to be an entertainer. He has temporarily given up business courses at the University of Alabama so he can purse a music career.

George Jr. feel he's on his way to success in entertainment. He recently signed a contract with MGM Records. His first recording under that label was released Friday. There Will Never Be Anyone Like You and Why Don't They Understand?

The Alabama governor joined with his son in announcing the release. "It's a happy day for me and for my son, George Jr. I'm very proud of his song. I like it."

NEW YORK (AP) — Duke Ellington, 74, has become the first jazz musician to receive the French Legion of Honor.

Jacques Kosciusko-Morizet, French ambassador to the United States, made the presentation Sunday. He said France's President Georges Pompidou wanted "to honor a great musician, a great American and a great friend of our country."

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, July 10

Aries (March 21-April 19): Today is continuation of yesterday's beginnings. Messages from long out-of-touch people are indicated.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Don't associate yourself with rash acquaintances. Regular work becomes complex; allow time to figure it out.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Premature starts are common today—maintain careful preparations. What comes later is sounder in quality.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Balance your passiveness with aggressive friends. You have the energy, they have the skill for avoiding wasted motion.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Get several opinions on any matter. You wouldn't follow advice, but do need the information. Creativity, curious now, straightens out later.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make a study of your entire life, consider changes; plan precautions, consolidations. Tomorrow promises sudden pressure.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Strive for efficiency, avoiding cord—or escape from long job. Later, you'll be in better mood.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Consolidate recent gains; quit while you are ahead in specific action. What is left undone cannot be corrected later.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tact and charm serve well; may help you avoid unnecessary work. Partners are up to good-natured mischief.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stimulus for an extra push is all about, but be sure of its direction. Take it easy, wait for the full story.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Favorable results are obtained if you let others do their own thing. Be a good sport and a good lover.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Incomplete enterprises continue thus; new ones come partly into shape. Attend to working out details.

Plants Face Close Controls

SIDNEY, B.C. (CP) — Obtaining entry into Canada may be much easier for humans than for plants, which are subject to microscopic tests that can last up to two years before they are cleared for "landed immigrant" status.

For several years inspectors have been keeping a wary eye on the movement of plant material between countries to prevent the spread of insects and plant diseases. Within the last 10 years a new demand has been evident for plant imports and exports to have a clean bill of health, particularly when overseas shipments of vineyard and orchard plants are involved.

Don Bertels, in charge of the quarantine and virus indexing program at the Post Entry Quarantine Station here on Vancouver Island, says the station's job is to detect tree fruit and grape virus diseases in imports and to check all plant stock from Canadian breeding programs "before it is released domestically or for export."

In the early 1900s concern was about introducing new virus diseases into North American orchards through plant imports.

Scientists, including Dr. Maurice Wallace of the research station at Summerland, B.C., began reporting on some new virus strains into Canada by hiding in plant imports that did not show disease symptoms.

He said visual inspection cannot detect a virus which fails to cause symptoms in the host plant and once the virus entered the country it spread to crops that show disease symptoms and you have a new problem on our hands.

"It became clear that nations soon would need to clamp down with certification programs to produce plant shipments leaving or entering their borders are not harboring viruses that would escape visual inspection."

Now when a research team or private business wants to bring into Canada a new fruit tree or grape variety, the quarantine station's plant-wide advisory committee of six scientists and specialists decide whether entry should be permitted.

The committee operates under the Destructive Insect and Pest Act, which grants the authority for the federal agriculture department's plant protection division.

If the import request is approved, a permit is issued and the shipment goes directly to the station here where indexing plants which react to specific viruses are used to find hidden infections.

The virus indexing takes two or more years and at the end of the period, the advisory committee decides whether the new plants should be released.

Private importers are given exclusive rights to the new material for the first two years after indexing is completed.

If viruses are found, the decision may be to use heat therapy, a method of growing plants at high temperatures to eliminate virus infection. However, if the infection is too severe, the decision could be to destroy the material to avoid possible contamination.

Some countries in Europe have their own certification programs which meet Canadian standards and such plant material for these countries can enter without post-entry quarantine, although spot checks are made regularly on samples of such shipments.

Materson Cuts Off Late Melrose Rally

With the ninth inning score 6-5 for Latta, three Melrose runners threatening home plate, and two gone, John Materson's arm had to be in good working order.

Materson delivered — 8 strike outs — and put his fifth straight win in as many starts into his pocket to move Latta in to sole possession of third place in South Hastings Baseball League (SHBL) play Saturday.

Coasting through seven innings on five runs picked up in the first, Latta noticed the bat for another run in the eighth, before Melrose's late night surge.

Latta scored five runs on three hits, two Melrose errors, and one hit batter in the initial run - around. Brothers, Terry and Ron McTaggart suffered the loss for the first place club.

Pitching two - thirds of the first inning, Terry gave up five runs while Ron, pitching the remainder of the game, allowed one runner to score on four hits and one batter walked. He felled eight at the plate.

Materson gave up five hits, two singles to Scott McLaren, allowed eight batters a free base, while fanning 10, for the win. Bob Smith and Keith Dickey each hit twice.

In other SHBL play Saturday, Read pulled up their bellies to take 10 hits from Shannonville's Fry and 8 to 3 Barbershack pitching combination to win their contest 6-3.

Moving out of last place with the aid of Carm Millgan's home run hitting, Read batters, Pat O'Connor, pitcher Larry Coffey and Peter Enright, each trapped two hits off the Barbershack combo.

Coffey gave up six hits, walked three batters while getting seven on strikeouts. Shannonville's Bill Barbershack snagged Coffey pitches twice.

In Sunday's only contest, Plane's Concrete walked away from Reserve in the final three-innings with six runs to earn an 8-2 victory.

Receiving credit for the win, Bob Robb returned seven batters to the Reserve bench while giving five hits. The pitcher gave up three hits over the nine innings. Roger Ruckstuhl, Craig Empey and Doug Eggleton trapped two apiece off Glen Maracle.

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Waterloo Lutheran University has been renamed Wilfrid Laurier University. Rev. France Warns Shipping To Shun Test Region

PARIS (AP) — France has warned shipping to steer clear of its South Pacific nuclear test site beginning Wednesday, a clear indication that its much-disputed 1973 nuclear test program will begin soon.

Some reports said the atmospheric explosions could come Saturday, Bastille Day, the July 14 French national holiday.

The United States, Britain and the Soviet Union abandoned atomic testing in the air with a 1962 partial test-ban treaty. But France and China have refused to sign the accord, charging it is designed to perpetuate Soviet-U.S. nuclear superiority.

A wide campaign in France and Pacific countries has failed to dissuade the French from proceeding with their nuclear tests on Mururoa Atoll, about 900 miles southeast of Tahiti.

71 Per Cent of Americans Believe Nixon Involved

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Seventy-one per cent of Americans believe President Nixon had some involvement with the Watergate bugging or its cover-up, but only 18 per cent feel he should be removed from office, the latest Gallup poll shows.

The poll, taken June 22 to June 25, also shows 90 per cent of the 1,451 persons questioned were aware of the Watergate scandal. This indicates a growing awareness since a survey taken last September when 52 per cent said they knew about Watergate.

The poll shows little change in Americans' opinions concerning Nixon's involvement in Watergate since the last Gallup survey of June 1 to June 4. The most recent poll was taken after former presidential counsel John Dean charged in public testimony that Nixon knew about the Watergate cover-up.

Alberta May Export Gas From North in Dirigibles

EDMONTON (CP) — The provincial government is investigating the possibility of transporting natural gas from the North in dirigibles, Bill Dickie, mines and minerals minister, said Saturday.

"It is possible the study could be extended into the transport of oil as well, but our preliminary examination has been into the possible transport of natural gas by dirigibles," he said in an interview.

Prices for Food Push Index Up

By VIC PARSONS

OTTAWA (CP) — Escalating food prices during June made consumers spend two per cent more on food than they had in May, Statistics Canada figures revealed today.

The monthly consumer price index, 25 per cent based on costs of food, shows that in the last year food prices have risen by 18.7 per cent to an index figure of 160.5.

This means that $10.75 cents of groceries in June, 1972, would have sold last month for $10.96.

The spiralling food price rise was the major factor in raising the all-items consumer price index for June by 0.9 per cent, a faster than normal increase for this time of year.

All other items included in the index, except transportation costs, which increased 0.9 per cent, were lower than the all-items total.

The index is based on 1961 price levels, which were set at 100. Since then, the purchasing value of one dollar has declined to 62 cents, government figures indicate.

The all-items index stood at 149.7 in June, up from 148.4 in May. This means that household goods and services costing $14.84 in May were $14.97, in June.

The two per cent increase in food prices between the two months contrasted with 0.2 per cent and 0.1 per cent rises between the same two months in 1972 and 1971.

But in 1969, the change in food prices between the two months was 2.2 per cent.

Statistics Canada said all main elements of food consumed in the home rose in price between May and June but indicated that fresh produce, beef and poultry costs increased the most.

Although fresh vegetable and fruit prices normally rise between the two months, there was a marked increase this year.

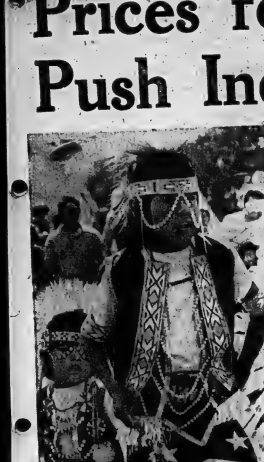
Potatoes, lettuce and tomatoes all jumped by about 8.7 per cent on the average, the bureau reports, outweighing decreased prices for some other vegetables. Fresh fruit increases stood at 3.1 per cent.

In the last year, the price of fresh vegetables and fruit have top all prices. Further increases exist respectively.

Meat, poultry and fish prices, which eased slightly in early May, climbed back up by 2.7 per cent, with beef increasing by 3.1 per cent and poultry rising 2.3 per cent.

Eggs cost 61 per cent more than a year earlier, beef 21 per cent more than in June, 1972, pork was 19 per cent higher and poultry 26 per cent more costly.

Lesser price increases between May and June were registered for cereal and bakery products, beverages, sugar, dairy products and fats and oils.



Major factor in the transportation costs to the consumer was a 1.6 per cent increase in cost of automobile maintenance due to higher gasoline and motor oil prices. Further increases in these fuels are expected this month.

Increased train fares and inter-city bus fares and higher prices for new cars imported from outside North America due to devaluation of the dollar were other increases for the transportation index rise.

Transportation costs make up about 15 per cent of the consumer price index.

Housing costs, which make up 31 per cent of the price index, rose by one-half of one per cent as shelter and household operating expenses rose by 0.8 per cent and 0.4 per cent respectively.

Furniture costs increased 1.3 per cent and fuel oil prices rose in cities in Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

No Federal Lawyer At Land Hearings

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal government lawyer will take part later in proceedings before the Northwest Territories Supreme Court dealing with land claims of territorial Indians, Justice Minister Otto Lang said Monday.

The government representative did not participate in Monday's opening session in Yellowknife, N.W.T., at which Mr. Justice William Morrow began hearing Indian claims to most of the Mackenzie Valley.

While the hearings are going on, a temporary freeze on land transactions is in force.

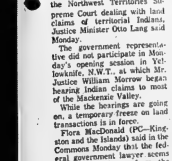
Flora MacDonald (PC—Kingston and the Islands) said in the Commons Monday that the federal government lawyer seems to have withdrawn from the hearings.

She noted that Judge Morrow had felt obliged to find a replacement for the government lawyer before allowing the Indians to begin their case.

"It was not a matter of our counsel being instructed to withdraw but rather not to participate in the immediate placing of evidence on the claims," said Mr. Lang.

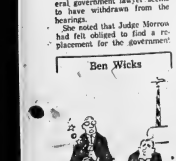
"We will of course be present again at the judgment on the issues which are before the court," he added.

Mr. Lang also said the government has not decided whether to appeal the decision of the Federal Court, which allowed Judge Morrow to hear the case.



Ottawa had argued that the territorial court had no jurisdiction to hear the Indian claims. It said such claims against the Crown could be argued only in the Federal Court.

But a Federal Court judge rejected the government argument Friday in Yellowknife, paving the way for hearings that opened Monday.



Uruguay Police Battle Marchers

MONTEVIDEO (AP) — Hundreds of demonstrators were arrested and scores injured as police attacked 5,000 marchers protesting the dictatorship in Uruguay.

Leaders of the outlawed labor unions ordered a step-up in the general strike that has nearly paralyzed the country since President Juan Bordaberry dissolved congress two weeks ago and began ruling by decree.

Rescue Said Near For Two Canadians

SAIGON (CP) — Officials of Canada and the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) awaited word from the Viet Cong today on where they can pick up two Canadian officers missing since June 28.

Canadian planners and helicopters on standby to take off on 20 minutes notice as soon as final arrangements were made to pick up the men in an area about 35 miles northeast of here.

The Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) announced Monday that the Canadians, Capts. Ian Patten of Toronto and Fletcher Thomson of Ottawa, are in Viet Cong hands.

But it said the men and their two Vietnamese ICCS employees have been moved from the rubber plantation near Cam Tam, 30 miles west of their ICCS base at Xuan Loc, where they were detained.

Canadians waited today for the Viet Cong to locate the new position of the men.

It was reported early today that ICCS officials had delivered to the PRG South Vietnamese guarantees of safety for helicopters going into the area. The PRG found the guarantees acceptable.

Provision of those guarantees meant that a major hurdle had been overcome and, barring more unexpected developments, the rescue of the Canadians appeared to be just a matter of time.

Florida Is Suing Major Oil Firms

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The state of Florida filed suit in federal court Monday against 15 major United States oil companies, charging them with conspiring to contrive the current U.S. fuel shortage.

The suit calls for the companies to rid themselves of all their oil exploration and development capabilities if they stay in the retail gas business, Florida Attorney-General Robert Shevin said.

"To this date we've found everybody talking about the crisis but nobody doing anything about it," said Shevin.

The suit alleges the oil companies have engaged in an illegal monopoly and unreasonable restraint of interstate trade and commerce.

"The gasoline wars are supported by profits made at the crude oil level," said Dearing. "If we remove that section we can make the marketing truly competitive."

The suit is a class action on behalf of all counties, cities and school boards in the state, Shevin said.

NDPer Argues Ballard Not Ready for Millhaven

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario New Democrat Ian Deans urged federal authorities Monday to transfer Harold Ballard to Kingston penitentiary "where he might get a better insight into the normal penal system."

Ballard, president of Maple Leaf Gardens, is serving a three-year term in the Millhaven correctional institution for theft and fraud. His application for parole will be reviewed this fall.

Ballard was quoted in Toronto as saying he and his fellow prisoners eat steaks, enjoy golf and play prison life pleasant.

Mr. Deans said he has written the federal solicitor-general and justice minister about the case.

He said Ballhaven is for prisoners who are being rehabilitated, but "any prisoner who doesn't believe that he has committed any crime and feels no remorse obviously is not ready for rehabilitation of this type."

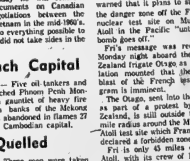
Mitchell Calls Liddy's Proposal 'Horror Story'



WASHINGTON (AP) — Former attorney-general John Mitchell testified today that when G. Gordon Liddy first brivered plans for 1972 political espionage it was "a complete horror story" that involved wiretaps, call girls and code names.

Mitchell told the Senate Watergate committee that in hindsight, he not only should have thrown Liddy "out of the office, I should have thrown him out of the window."

Testifying about a meeting Jan. 27, 1972, Mitchell said Liddy outlined a political intelligence proposal that "just was beyond the pale."

Mitchell said as he recalls the meeting, "I told him to go burn the charts," and said when President Nixon's campaign organization was interested in was information gathered and protection against demonstrators.

At the start of his testimony at the Senate committee's televised hearings, Mitchell said he joined the late J. Edgar Hoover in opposing a domestic intelligence plan that contemplated burglaries.

Parking Study Proposed

Should Belleville have an over-all policy with respect to one side parking in residential areas rather than dealing with no parking requests on the present piecemeal basis?

This was the question asked Monday by Alderman Arnold Orr as the city council traffic and light committee dealt with still more complaints about parking on residential streets.

Prompting the question was the request of a Jane Street resident complaining about her driveway being frequently blocked.

Alderman Orr suggested that a study was needed for an over-all parking policy rather than considering each request as it came in.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey agreed but stated it would be unfortunate if the Jane Street resident had to suffer for another two months while a study was made and an over-all policy adopted.

A police department report on the Jane Street problem said the majority of the daytime parking was by people who worked in the city's downtown core area.

It was suggested that these people were discouraged from using Coleman Street because parking meters there had a two hour limit.

The police report recommended parking be banned on the south side of Jane Street and that consideration be given to extending the metered parking time on Coleman.

The committee went along only with the first part of the recommendation and the motion for one-side parking on Jane Street will be up for approval at next week's council meeting.

Also approved by the traffic committee was a recommendation both sides of Moira Street West from Elgin Street to 227 feet east of Sidney Street.

And the committee voted to reaffirm its recommendation at a previous meeting for one-side parking on Albert Street in the Bridge Street area.

The matter was before the committee at its last meeting but was referred back to the traffic committee by council for further consideration.

First Patient Treated At Deseronto Centre

DESERONTO — Monday, July 9, was a red letter day for this town of 1,900 persons.

That was the day on which the town's new $60,000 medical centre, the ambitious project of the Deseronto Lions Club, became operational.

First patient at the centre on the east end of the town's main street was 85-year-old Eric Gustafson, employee of the town's public utilities commission and himself a member of the Deseronto Lions Club for 27 years.

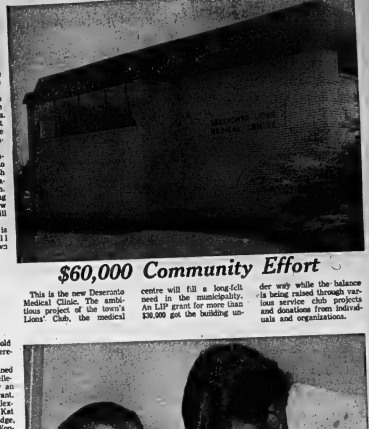
Medical officer at the centre is Dr. D. S. Miller, formerly of Toronto and recent graduate from Dalhousie University in Halifax. He also has a B.Sc. degree from McMaster University at Hamilton.

Medical secretary and receptionist at the centre is Mrs. Joan Prue of Napanee.

The new medical centre, which has two doctors' offices, four examination rooms, laboratory, staff lounge, patients' waiting room and general office, is the result of many months planning on the part of the town's Lions service club.

The club received a L.I.P. grant for more than $30,000 to help defray costs but the medical centre is truly a community effort.

The town's senior citizens club contributed a cheque for $1,000, other residents and businesses have made donations for lesser amounts while the Lions membership through various club ventures have pledged themselves to raise the balance.



In the meantime the club has borrowed $20,000 from the bank to meet construction bills.

Club member Gerald Lett said that assistance for the centre project hadn't been limited to cash donations.

The Deseronto Royal Canadian Legion and Deseronto Firemen chipped in to furnish two of the centre's examination rooms — cost $500 each.

Workmen are still adding finishing touches at the new centre which eventually will offer dental care.

But Dr. Miller notes this is still in the future and will have to wait until the town finds a dentist.

$60,000 Community Effort

This is the new Deseronto Medical Clinic. The ambitious project of the town's Lions' Club, the medical centre will fill a long-felt need in the municipality. An LIP grant for more than $30,000 got the building under way while the balance is being raised through various service club projects and donations from individuals and organizations.

Receptionist

Mrs. Joan Prue of Napanee acts in the dual capacity as medical secretary and receptionist at the Deseronto Medical Clinic which was opened for patients Monday.

Ameliasburg Museum Curator Is Honored

AMELIASBURGH — A special presentation to curator Harry Bladee marked the fifth anniversary of the official opening of the township's historical museum here yesterday.

Mr. Bladee received a plaque from the museum board in appreciation for services rendered in connection with the project since it was conceived and adopted as a centennial undertaking by the community in 1967. Museum treasurer William Nightingale and board member Arnold Weiherall performed the ceremony.

The turnout was entertained by the Culp Factory of Belleville, a group financed by an Opportunities For Youth grant. The cast including Chris Alexander, Linda Seefjellis, Kat Forester, Kate Hambridge, Bev Hitchon and John Wonacott presented a variety of short skits.

The museum started in the century - old United church in the village has been developed into a complex which includes an authentic pioneer's cottage, a large newly built shed for the display of antique farm machines and related pieces and a park where domestic and wild fowl and small animals are kept in cages for public viewing.

The show area in the main building was enlarged this year with the addition of an upstairs gallery.

The complex attracted more than 3,000 visitors last year.

Decoration Day Turnout Large

By HOWARD KOKESH

Despite a torrid temperature, the Annual Decoration Day drew a very large and enthusiastic audience to the Belleville Cemetery on Sunday.

A change from the usual late September service to July vindicated the faith the Veterans' of Belleville Council had in their objective "A flower on every grave", as the cemetery presented a virtual sea of color. The combined veterans' organizations colors made a brilliant splash as they billowed in the gentle breezes.

The parade was commanded by Cdr. Sydney Scott while the colors were led by Cdr. Fred Smith.

Veterans and their ladies' auxiliaries marched along to the music of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit Pipe Band. Music for the hymns was supplied by the Belleville Brass Ensemble under the direction of Frank Howard.

Her Worship, Mayor Robin Jeffrey, read the lesson and Rev. J. Leigh Dean delivered the address. Other clergy in attendance were Rev. Donald J. Himmelman and Rev. Cyril J. Betts for the service held in front of the mausoleum.

Envoy Brass Hamphreys touched off a campaign for a permanent memorial that could be erected in conjunction with the relocation of the main gates and entrance since the re-alignment of Highway 2 is completed.

The advisory committee of Veterans of Belleville Council, with Cdr. Jack Rathotte as its chairman, has undertaken this project and expects to present something concrete to the public in the immediate future.

Downed Helicopter Was Out of Fuel

TRENTON — The search is over for four downed fliers listed as missing in the James Bay region of Northern Quebec since last July 2.

Their stranded helicopter was sighted Monday shortly before 6 p.m. by a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Summerside.

The four men were sighted running around the crash site. Once radio contact was established with them all were reported in good shape.

Nature of the terrain would not permit armed forces planes to land and retrieve the men but a Trans Québec helicopter — owner of the downed craft — will bring the men out today.

An officer at CFB Trenton's rescue co - ordination centre said the clue to the search came Sunday night when a 424 Squadron (from Trenton) picked up the faint beeping of a distress beacon.

The Hercules, low on fuel, was forced to return to base with other planes continuing the search. The downed helicopter was not in the search area and could have remained stranded without fuel for at least another week before rescuers would venture outside the search zone, said an armed forces spokesman.

The helicopter, forced to land when it ran out of fuel, will be capable of flying out of the bush under its own power, ending a seven-day rescue wait for the four men.

Frankford Man Faces Charges

Police recovered a tape deck, turntable, amplifier, microphone and wires from the car's trunk. Mr. Sweet admitted he had been borrowing the vehicle for the past month.

The man was also carrying a master key used to open coin - operated machines. He was released on an undertaking to appear on Provincial Court.

Waking up to the wise use of electricity means more than owning a clock radio

Ontario's demands for electricity virtually double every decade. Not simply because there are more people around who need it, but because it is used in more and more ways. Industrially, commercially and domestically.

Not so long ago it was generally thought that this province had inexhaustible hydro-electric (water power) resources. Today, there are no more major sites available for economic development. While electricity can be generated in thermal stations fuelled by coal, gas, oil or uranium, such fuels are not unlimited either. And although Canada's wealth of natural uranium is a welcome newcomer, it will be some years before nuclear generation of electricity becomes the primary source of power.

Through a program of planning and development shaped with the help of public involvement, Hydro is endeavouring to meet future electricity requirements. But we must realize that the fulfillment of these requirements has a cost, both environmental and financial. Every consumer can help to minimize this cost.

All we ask is that when you use your power, use it wisely. It's a matter of waking up to the thoughtful use of electricity... and all resources.

Royal Visit Success

Now that the Queen and Prince Philip are back in Britain again, the old argument as to the role of the Monarchy in the Canadian scheme of things may be laid to rest for a time.

But not for long, we suppose, for the Commonwealth Conference is being held in Ottawa in August and Her Majesty will return for that occasion.

To judge however from the undoubted success of the recent visit to Canada, and considering the genuine warmth and enthusiasm of the crowds, including a host of new citizens from overseas and thousands of children, it is fair to say that the sentiments of a very large number of Canadians are with the Royal Family and with the Monarchy as an integral part of the Constitution.

One of the most specious arguments advanced by those who are opposed to the Monarchy and who wish to see Canada advance to a republican form of Government, free of any lingering suggestion of lackey status or colonialism, is to blame the materialist aspect of the Monarchy — the monetary cost of its maintenance — for the plight of the underprivileged of the world.

Monarchy or no monarchy, Royal Family or not, there would still be people starving in the streets of various cities around the world, while governments and citizens elsewhere — spending the taxpayers' substance as if it grew on the proverbial trees — would still be doing no more or less than they have ever done to alleviate th plight of these wretched members of suffering humanity.

That argument then is as shallow as it is ludicrous — as if the Royal Family were to blame for the rigors of nature and the incompetence, not to say the belligerence (consider the millions spent on armaments by those very countries where people have not enough to eat) of governments.

In any event, in the arguments of those who criticize the Monarchy and its role here, there is often the hint of a desire for some such pinnacle to which we may turn, amid the humdrum of life, or personage whom we may look upon with respect and admiration. Since we already have such an institution with the Queen as its head, and enshrined as they are in the affections of a large section of the population, there is little indication of a need at this time for any such constitutional change.

Soviet Motives Are Suspect

Conference on Security Finally Under Way in Helsinki

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The Russians have wanted security conference since 1954, some of the smaller European nations since the early 1950s, the larger Western European nations not until quite recently.

These varying time scales have now come together in the 35-nation Conference on Security in Europe under way in Helsinki. They are reflections of the once conflicting national attitudes in Europe that such a large meeting would do little good until other accomplishments had first been met.

The mid-1950s was ripe too soon for Russians and Western Europeans to mutually discuss continental security, since the West with its new NATO agreement to contain Soviet Europe saw Russian eagerness only as a smoke screen to hide European domination.

Also 20 years ago there were no signs whatsoever of any kind of rapprochement between East and West Germany and the nations of Eastern Europe and the West. Today they not only recognized each other diplomatically—Albania being the clear exception—but trade flows freely between capitalist and Communist Europe.

The smaller nations, especially restive partners of the U.S.S.R. in Eastern Europe, chiefly Romania, of Spain in Western Europe, seeking entry into the Common Market, could see no point in such a conference geared only to big power needs.

And finally those major European powers themselves could only come together after the above basic issues had been resolved, perhaps after mutual reconciliation of East and West Germany and economic liaison with the East had been established.

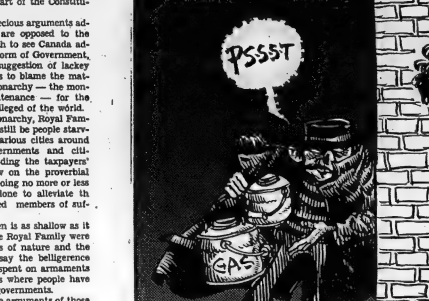
All these events have come to pass which should suggest clear sailing for a conference bringing together such dissimilar nations as Finland, the Netherlands, Portugal, Malta, Norway, Ireland or Italy, to name a few.

At first glance, however, this monster European conference on security would appear to be an escalation of the bureaucratic process of the smaller groupings of European nations already found, for example, in NATO, the European Common Market or Comecon (the Soviet bloc's separate common market).

If so, the differing national views on security problems are less likely to be resolved in Helsinki, than at a smaller conference or during the kind of bilateral meetings which brought about the essential rapprochement between East and West Germany.

Harmony in Europe for individual nations means individual responses. For Spain it means the Gibraltar crisis is off the agenda, for the Irish it's Ulster, for Iceland it's the unilaterally declared 50-mile territorial ocean limits.

Harmony in Europe for the two outsiders invited by the European Canada and the U.S., means different things in Washington and Ottawa.



The U.S. is still the backbone of NATO which still remains a military alliance. Accordingly will not take one step back militarily in Europe until she is sure what the Russians mean when they talk about mutual security agreements in Europe.

We for ourselves, a large and open country with a multi-racial electorate representing all the nations at Helsinki, we favor and encourage the trend in Europe of the last 15 years to open economic, political and cultural accords.

Hence it was easy for External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp in Helsinki to calmly discuss details of recognition with East Germany's foreign minister.

But what of the Russians who wanted the conference in the first place, with their Brezhnev Doctrine still in force as the basis for direct interference in western and Soviet-bloc states? Remember the brutal Czech invasion of August, 1968?

For Monday, in this 35-nation gathering just the latest excuse for new cold war tactics?

Life 'Inside'

We have all heard often enough that minimum security institutions such as Millhaven are places of considerable comfort, where the prisoners are more comfortable than they are on "the outside" and where the living generally is easy.

One of Millhaven's more distinguished prisoners is Maple Leaf Gardens' president Harold Ballard who is serving time on counts of theft and fraud from the Gardens. He looks after foodstuffs and other materials coming to the institution and, according he also remains very much in charge of affairs at the Gardens, as he indicated in recent Toronto interview. Mr. Ballard was on a temporary pass and while he talked about future plans — such as a new arena and baseball stadium, as well as additional seating at the Gardens — he also spoke about prison life, confirming some of the impressions that the especially groups like the pensioners, have obtained concerning the much more relaxed conditions stemming from prison reform.

We can see Mr. Ballard gives the authorities no reason to doubt the wisdom of making prison conditions more humane than in years past, but when the Gardens' chief points out that some of his fellow inmates have a history of drugs and that some still use stuff smuggled into the institution it gives us reason to ponder further. What happens when a drug addict escapes, perhaps commits further crimes to maintain his habit. This is the sort of question that worries law-abiding citizens.

Nor do reports that prisoners are served meals fit almost for a king sit well with the pensioners whose taxes help pay for this sort of luxury. As Mr. Ballard says, "in some ways it is more like a motel . . . the food is out of this world."

And that is the way it goes — nice and easy — and the prisoners can even play golf. It is not so pleasant for many on the outside, and that tells us something more about the Government's mixed up system of values and priorities.

Shades of Adam Smith in U.S. Economic Policies

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Adam Smith is to economics what Abner Doubleday was to baseball. And since this month marks the 250th anniversary of Smith's birth his work is currently attracting almost as much attention as Babe Ruth's home run record.

One of the points that Adam Smith made two centuries ago is as relevant as though it had been made yesterday:

"Every regulation introduces some degree of real disorder into the constitution of the state which it will be difficult afterwards to cure without occasioning another disorder."

The renowned economist might well have been writing about the latest regulation introduced by United States President Richard Nixon on June 13, and the varied assortment of economic regulations that the president has been bringing in throughout his terms of office.

Disorder is an apt word to describe the changes that have been taking place in world trade, foreign exchange values and stock markets since 1929. Each Nixon regulation seems to have occasioned another disorder.

The latest Nixon regulations, you will recall, put a choke-hold freeze on some prices and controls on some U.S. exports. But the authorities appear to have comprehensive plan to prevent further disorders, once the freeze melts in the mid-August heat.

This uncertainty about the outlook for the U.S. economy is perhaps the biggest single factor in the current weakness in stock prices both in the United States and here.

As veteran financial analyst Bob Stone of McEwen Securities Ltd. points out, none of the Nixon measures strike at the root cause of inflation, which he describes as "the product of the business—direct in the form of currency, indirect in the creation of near money such as treasury bills and other government instruments and, not least of all, bank credit."

Is it possible to bring monetary inflation under control without bringing on a recession?

"Many think not," says Stone. "Others don't know.

"So it's no particular surprise that the stock market is beating a retreat. Stock markets scarcely thrive on uncertainty."

No comprehensive plan to prevent recession has been announced by U.S. circumstances, but it hits Canadian markets as hard. The average portfolio of good Canadian stocks has lost more than 10 per cent in value since the highs of January.

For investors, there's little comfort in the fact that the stock market's sharp drop has coincided with a generally encouraging upturn in business activity and corporate earnings (up 31 per cent in January-March vs. a year earlier, for 151 representative listed companies).

This year, the stock market has chosen to display its mistrust of government intrusion, rather than parade its confidence in the fundamentals of business.

Lady Jane Grey, 16-year old great-granddaughter of Henry VII, was proclaimed Queen of England 423 years ago today—in 1553—by the terms of Edward VI's will, which the boy-king had been persuaded to alter on his death-bed. Jane had herself been coerced into this position by the intrigues of her father and Lord Northumberland, her father-in-law. Her reign lasted nine days before Queen Mary, Edward's older sister, claimed the throne successfully. Lady Jane pleaded guilty of treason and her sentence was suspended, but her father rebelled again so she was executed.

'Impeachment'—A Mysterious Edict Explained

The Brantford Expositor

The old and almost forgotten word "impeachment" has returned to prominence in the wake of the scandals shaking the U.S. administration, shocking millions of Americans and many Canadians who have been asking what it means. The U.S. Library of Congress has been asked to deal with requests for enlightenment that it has compiled an information kit.

Impeachment is a cumbersome initial step towards throwing out of office a public office. It has been an ineffective means of removing American wrong-doers. In the 177 years since the first of 11 U.S. impeachment trials, only four such officials — 20 judges — have been convicted. One need not be a sceptic to comment that surely there must have been more than four dishonest "high federal" officers in nearly 200 years. The only president ever tried by impeachment, Andrew Johnson in 1868, was acquitted by one vote. He has since come to be known as a patriot who served reasonably well in trying times.

Though most U.S. administrations, not to say presidents, have suffered occasional talk of impeachment, the procedure originating in England's 17th century—has come around almost as frequently as Halley's Comet. It is initiated in the House of Representatives when a member or congressmen charges a named person with specific "high crimes or misdemeanors" and move they be investigated. If the motion carries, a committee, acting as a grand jury, conducts hearings.

If it finds that the charges are supported by facts, the motion goes back to the House. There a trial is conducted, endorsing the findings suffices to send the impeachment bill to the Senate. Then the accused is arrested and the case is heard, much as in a court trial, by the Senate presided over by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. On conclusion of the trial, the senators vote on each charge. A two-thirds majority against the defence on any charge means removal from office.

The impeachment clause in the Constitution mentions other penalty than this forced exit. But a Senate verdict of guilty does not bar prosecution in the ordinary civil courts.

In Britain, where impeachments were not uncommon before the establishment of representative responsible government, there has not been such a trial — by the House of Lords on the motion of the Commons — since 1805. Ten years earlier, there had been the disgraceful politically motivated impeachment trial of Warren Hastings a Viceroy of India accused of pecuniary wrongdoing. It lasted seven years and ended in acquittal and with the comment of a lawyer that it was "not an impeachment of wrong, but a waste of impeachment." In 1840 the historian Macaulay maintained a long speech on the "possibly of value in the 19th century, but of no use now."

Today, under a president accused of much but convicted of nothing, Americans are argued about Macaulay's verdict that impeachment is obsolete. They could be wasting their breath.

More Use of Schools Is Advocated

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau

Select committees are often criticized, and often accurately, as being ineffective and perhaps wasteful.

Some of these inquiry committees of the house can turn out this way, particularly when they are given a field which is really over their heads.

But that they also can be really useful is demonstrated in some recently released findings contained in the interim report of the Select Committee on Utilization of Education Facilities.

This wasteful usage has been largely due to jealousy on the part of school boards and educationists. They have looked on school buildings as their castles.

There now almost certainly will be a change, and thanks to the work of this select committee.

All of its recommendations may not be adopted, but its fundamental one we can assume will be.

This is that educational facilities must be regarded as a resource of the whole community, and that they should be available seven days a week and 52 weeks a year.

To make this practical it proposed that the government in its education grants should recognize and allow for this usage.

And to make sure that it works, it recommends that there should be community coordinating councils which would be recognized by the government.

There is much more than this to the report. Also much more that is good.

For example it goes into the question of increasing leisure time, and the need to start planning and educating the public how to use it. This is a key section which has been given little attention here.

But the most important aspect of the committee is that it represents a strong voice, and a voice which should be strong enough to break down the barrier which has held back full and proper use of our school plant.

Health Councils

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The workings of the United Community Services are indeed strange. In his recent letter to The Intelligencer, Mr. Pepper indicated that a meeting had been held and that it had been decided to set up a committee to study district health councils. A few inquiries would have elicited the fact that the Quinte District Health Council has been in operation for some time past and, with the aid of consultants from Woods, Gordon, has carried out a survey of the area needs. Now it appears that Mrs. O'Rourke is going to do this by means of a questionnaire.

Monetary System Is Near Collapse

LONDON (CP) — Fluctuating uncertainty on extremely nervous foreign exchanges, the United States dollar is clinging a few cents of uneasiness rarely paralleled since the early 1930s.

Some seasoned stock brokers and money managers are even beginning to think in terms of a possible collapse of the post-war world financial system.

"The world isn't far from no emergency which could see the bottom simply fall out of our traditional financial structure," said one veteran broker.

"I've been in this business for 35 years and I've never seen anything like it. In this kind of situation, rational forecasting is useless."

His view appears to be shared by a number of commercial bankers and stock dealers in Europe. Their fear seems to be that continuing speculation against the dollar—and to a lesser extent, sterling—has exceeded the limits of reason and may no longer be subject to traditional remedies.

Meanwhile, in countries such as Canada and the United States, imports become more expensive as the dollar declines tending to force up prices and aggravate inflation. Tourists who have to convert dollars for other currencies are especially hard hit. Reports from dollar countries, however, become cheaper and their payments balances usually improve.

Central bankers and politicians are maintaining their facade of confidence, apparently hoping by their silence to convince the world and currency speculators that they are in control.

But the fact that their efforts have produced no remedies and no visible signs of progress, despite countless conferences and pious statements of success, has gradually eroded the confidence of businessmen.

In the past, the international community tended to look to Washington for decisive action during monetary crises. But the Watergate scandal and the apparent inability of the U.S. to solve its own economic problems have seriously weakened the American position.

Most Europeans readily agree that the dollar is grossly undervalued in relation to other leading currencies.

But be that as it may," said an official with Barclay's Bank, "the real question is how you can get people to believe it.

"Until recently . . . there was always a fairly strong belief that regardless of the dollar's present problems it would eventually get stronger. Now, with Watergate and its aftermath, so sure anymore."

Commons Is Slow In Approving Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Everything takes time in the Commons—even doing nothing. MPs proved that Monday when they put in their third full day of debate on legislation that would, in effect, give them 18 months to take a step the dicey question of electoral redistribution.

Introduced last week, the bill would suspend the almost-completed work of 10 separate electoral boundaries commissions—one for each province. It would give members until 1974 to come up with a revised formula for altering the boundaries of Commons ridings to take changing population patterns into account.

While generally supported by all parties, the bill has yet to receive second reading, though this could come ac... time today. The bill will then go to committee for detailed study before coming back for final passage.

In effect, the legislation repudiates the existing redistribution formula, which gives independent commissions the responsibility for revising electoral boundaries every 10 years in line with new census figures. The last census was taken in 1971.

The decision probably means that:

—The next election will be held with the electoral boundaries that now exist, with representation weighted in favor of thinly-populated rural areas.

—Commons membership will be enlarged, possibly to 300 members or more.

—Present safeguards against sharply declining rural representation will be strengthened even further, but the ratio will be fairer because of increased urban representation.

—It will be several years before any boundary changes occur since the Dec. 31, 1974, deadline is for devising a new formula rather than making actual alterations.

While the majority of MPs seem glad to support the bill and give the extra time to ponder the issue, reaction ranges from unqualified approval to outright condemnation.

Paul Dick, (PC—Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton) accused some MPs Monday of opposing changes for fear of losing their seats.

Mr. Dick, whose riding includes both rural and urban areas, said Parliament took part in distribution out of the political arena in 1965 by placing it in the hands of independent commissions. It should not be reversing its position now.

Ralph Stewart (L—Cochrane) argued the opposite viewpoint.

"It is as though there were something unclean or uncouth about politicians doing the work of politicians. Who knows more about politics than politicians?" he asked.

No one would suggest that medical problems be taken out of the hands of doctors.

Many rural members, including Rene Matte (SC—Champlain), argued that rural MPs face special problems in representing constituents scattered over a wide area. They said urban constituents, concentrated in one area, are much more accessible to an MP.

Elias Nesdoly (NDP—Meadow Lake), whose riding is heavily rural, said he does not accept the argument that it is difficult to communicate with rural constituents. This may have been true at one time but radio, television and telephone facilities have eliminated the problem.

Ian Arrol (PC—Toronto York East) said if the Commons is expanded to 300 members, it will be only a matter of time until it grows to 400 and then 500 members.

The result would be reduced effectiveness for every MP because all would be competing for the same amount of available time during a session.

Successful Living
Coffin Nails False Friends

By DORIS CLARK

"Living can be ageless". Such was the theme of this year's pre-retirement c a m paigns, which took place in Ontario in June.

The idea of the week is to focus attention on the contribu- Ontario's older citi- have made in the past and to encourage them to remain actively involved in the community today.

This year the week had a second objective. The province launched a pre - retirement campaign aimed at person- 40 years and over to promote awareness of the need to think about, and prepare for, retirement years.

I couldn't agree more. In fact, I know one fellow who thinks we should start getting ready for retirement when we start getting educated for life! Anyway, science has given us all those lovely extra years after we have raised families and moved into our second half-century.

We should be able to use those years happily. Don't look at retirement as the end of everything. It is true, if y o u want it to be, that living can be ageless. Planning is what it needs.

Dear Doris: Since I've quit smoking (approximately a l x weeks) I've gained quite a bit of weight. I'm really not complaining as I've always been fairly underweight. I'm and now weigh 121 pounds.

The problem being - I'm five - foot - five, weighted 107 sure I've gained 75 percent of this on my "gut". Could you please tell me what exercises and how often, so I might get rid of this pot? If I continue - I'm afraid I might get fed up looking sloppy and may go back to smoking. Ahhh! which took a lot of will power to quit after 10 years.

Tummy Trouble

Dear T.T.: Don't for Heaven's sake go back to those coffin nails. They are false friends if there ever was such a thing.

What you need is the knowledge of a proper diet without too many weight producers in it. Then an exercise program.

"Canada's Food Guide", which you can get at your own health centre, will keep you on the rails about nourishment without an over supply of the things that make you fat. For exercise I can suppl- "Be Figure Perfect" and "P o r That Spare Tire — A Special Massage". Each of these leaflets is 20 cents; they can be yours if you will w r i t e in again enclosing 40 cents and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Confidential to Bridal Shower: No. Certainly don't do it. If you want to celebrate for your own beloved y o u n g bride, make it a party — not a shower.

However, if someone wants to ask you or any other member of the family to a shower for your granddaughter, y o u go. And it is quite all right to ask guests to the trousseau tea, even if they haven't been invited to the wedding.

There are Canadian resources to help solve your problem. Write to Doris for direction. In care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Lost Bail Money

BOMBAY, India (AP) — An accused gambler claimed a pickpocket took his money in the courtroom just before his bail hearing. The judge gave him the benefit of the doubt and freed him without bail.

PM Investigates Wife-Beating

LONDON (CP) — Bachelor Prime Minister Edward Heath has decided to turn his hand to one of the country's more painful problems:wife beating.

Heath has promised opposition MPs that he will undertake an immediate investigation of the issue.

He has asked Labor MP Jack Ashley for his dossier containing 900 of the most serious complaints in what one newspaper columnist calls the "tale of the battered brides."

Ashley's report gives details the suffering some women undergo when they are beaten by their husbands. It also provides evidence that both the police and local authorities are reluctant to intervene.

Ashley made some of the wives' complaints public when he read their letters during a Commons debate.

One woman complained she had been beaten constantly during her pregnancy.

He kicked me, stood on me and throttled me into insensibility time and again. I don't know if this was the cause, but our son was born blind and mentally retarded."

Ann Landers
Writers Sign 'With Love' She Thinks It's Bad Taste

Dear Ann Landers: This is no earth-shaking problem but it's been bothering me for a long time. It is it good taste to sign a letter "Love" if you are not terribly close or related to a person

When I was young, "Love" at the end of a letter really meant something. I remember the first time I received a letter with that closing. I floated three feet off the ground for two days.

Today we get cards and letters signed, "With love . . ." or just "Love" from casual friends. It makes me a little uneasy. Comment, please. — Yours Truly

Dear Truly: "With Love" or just "Love" does not mean "I am in love with you." It is a warmer and m o r e intimate close than "Sincerely," or "Yours Truly." If it makes you uneasy, it indicates that you have erected a barrier between yourself and others and you don't want it penetrated.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is a career military officer. He loves his work and I enjoy the life, but part of his responsibilities (and mine) includes social activities with his commanding officer a n d family. Their five-year-old is driving me bonkers.

The last time they were at our home I caught the child trying to pry the tiles off our basement ceiling. (He was sitting at an open stairway.) That boy has so mistreated our dog that she snaps at children and we must keep her muzzled when our youngster's friends come over. After the tile incident, I scolded the child and told him he must behave himself in our home. He became angry, stomped on a toy radio that belonged to our daughter and broke it to pieces. His parents didn't say one word to him.

One cannot tell a mother her child is not welcome and to please leave him home. But he wears me out running after him. (His mother just sits.) Any suggestions? — Beside Myself In Rapid City

Dear B.: Perhaps the child is hyperkinetic. There are tests to determine whether or not he is and drugs to control it.

Needless to say, life becomes vastly improved not only for the child but his mother when the hyperkinetic child is on medication. I hope you will have the courage to suggest it. The C.O.'s wife might be eternally grateful.

Dear Ann Landers: After all these weeks I am still bothered by the letter from the mother who was mad at the store manager because he told the lad down to her "poor little well-meaning son" who stole the 39 cent pen.

I now am 14 and will never forget a similar incident. When I was only five I was in a shopping centre with Mom. I wanted some gum. She said, "No, I don't have the money." But when she wasn't looking I took a package. I sneaked a piece into my mouth when we reached the car and she smelled it. I was dragged right back to the store. Mom gave me the money to give to the cashier (on a loan basis) and made me apologize.

I have never taken one single thing that didn't belong to me since that day and I'm sure I never will. The look on my mother's face and the humiliation I suffered when I had to apologize to the cashier will be with me for the rest of my days.—Glad It Happened.

Dear Glad: So am I. It's life had it doesn't happen more often. Mothers who defend their kids against teachers, neighbors, friends and store managers often end up trying to defend them against the police.

Neptune Theatre Rises To Difficult Challenge

HALIFAX (CP) — A difficult and demanding play, Peer Gynt, received general acclaim from critics and theatre goers as Neptune Theatre celebrated its 10th birthday Monday.

The nearly three-hour presentation, featuring Heath Lamont Hamilton in the title role, was the gala birthday festivities for Neptune Day in Halifax.

Opening night for the summer season attracted 485 persons to the 335-seat downtown theatre just 10 years and nine days from Neptune's first opening night back in the heady days of 1963.

Financial and other crises have plagued Neptune in the succeeding years.

One of those who enjoyed the play was Leon Major, the theatre's first artistic director and now general director with the St. Lawrence Centre for the Performing Arts in Toronto.

"I enjoyed a good night of theatre," he said. "It was a difficult and courageous presentation."

Neptune artistic director Robert Sherrin also received praise from the critics for tackling the play.

Monday's Birthday party started with a noon-hour ceremony in front of City Hall in downtown Halifax. Municipal officials praised the theatre's success as Peter Evans, head of its board of directors, cut a large birthday cake.

Pieces were passed out to more than 1,000 Haligonians.

During an afternoon news conference, Mr. Major, who served as artistic director during Neptune's first five years, said while it did not live up to what he had hoped, it had built up a solid base of support in the community and was making its influence felt elsewhere in the Atlantic region.

Gander Appears Likely to Expand

GANDER, Nfld. (CP) — "I can't see anything for Gander except expansion," Mayor Hazel Newhook says when she talks about the town's consistent prosperity and the ability of its international airport to accommodate changes in aviation.

Mrs. Newhook, elected in May as the first woman mayor since Gander was incorporated in 1938, believes her four-year term will see the type of continued growth that has virtually eliminated the pessimism of the early jet age.

For Gander International Airport, carved out of the Newfoundland wilderness as a Second World War jumping off spot for fighters and bombers being delivered to Britain from North American factories, came about by chance when airlines switched to jets.

While the world's airlines depended on propeller-driven planes Gander was a mandatory refuelling stop for most flights between North America and Europe.

The airport's main terminal, at one time the world's busiest, was a wartime hangar. Residents lived until 1955 in wartime barracks converted to apartments.

The first jets were overflying Gander when a new terminal was opened in 1958. The number of landings decreased rapidly.

But Gander's population, 4,200 in 1955, continued to grow.

In the early 1960s new roads were being started to communities on Newfoundland's northeast coast that had previously been reachable only by sea.

In 1961 the population was up to 7,000 and the then mayor, Jack Rodgerson, believed Gander would survive as a market town.People from scores of communities in the northeast coast were coming to Gander to shop.

The airport accounted for 95 per cent of Gander's economy in 1855 but 10 years later the town's dependency on aircraft-related jobs was down to 45 per cent. The slack had been taken up by local service industries and shoppers.

Today the population exceeds 9,000. The economic base is provided by 2,700 permanent jobs, of which more than 800 are at the airport which has recaptured some of its former importance.

In an effort to enrich some of the business being generated by a growing world tourist tendency to move vacationers on charter flights, the federal government reduced landing fees at Gander two years ago. One American-based charter line immediately agreed to land aircraft 500 times a year at Gander. Others followed and Gander once again is becoming known as a servicing, provisioning and refuelling stop on tragatlantic flights.

The town, a mile from the airport, is without unemployment and also without sufficient housing.

Mrs. Newhook figures that at least 200 of 300 new serviced building lots will be prepared will be sold immediately.

The demand for houses has almost doubled real estate prices. A house built for $18,-000 to $19,500 about 10 years ago now would fetch between $28,000 and $35,000.

The demand for apartments is such that building managers refuse to maintain waiting lists. If an apartment becomes vacant it goes to the first asker.

While housing is tight, Gander is not afflicted with many of the pollution and other problems associated with more municipalities.

It's one of the few places in Newfoundland with a sewage treatment plant, which protects the purity of Gander Lake, a 40-mile-long body of fresh water on the town's southern boundary.

The lake and scores of smaller ponds and rivers nearby help make Gander an outdoorsman's town. Boat trailers, campers trucks and four-wheel-drive vehicles can be seen in many driveways on the crescent-type streets that radiate from Gander's main road.

The accessibility of the outdoors adds to the quality of life in Gander, Mrs. Newhook says. Most residential streets have walking distance access of the main shopping area. The speed limit is 20 miles an hour.

Theatre Gets Grant

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Gallery Theatre in London has received a $56,500 Local Initiatives Program grant, Margaret Watkins, the gallery's publicity director, said the grant will finance about 50 per cent of the cost of the school work, and in addition, "it will temporarily let us do about three productions in the hall. We'll have to go on from there."

Solo Performer Now

Chad Allen has given up university and singing with a group to attempt to make it as a solo artist. The 20-year - old was a singer with the Canadian group called the Guess Who. His first single and album as a solo performer are due for release this spring and Allen is organizing a new group to back him on a cross-country tour, his first since his days with the Guess Who.

A young-looking 30, thanks to hair extending over his ears and an almost baby face, Allan has complete confidence in his ability to succeed and past performance would tend to support his feelings.

Twice he has had hits at the top of the Canadian rock charts. Eight years ago it was Shakin' All Over by Chad Allan and the Guess Who. Last year it was Dunrchin's Gone by Brave Belt, with Allan the lead singer.

But he gave up the groups for university, now has all the necessary courses for his master's degree and just "99.9 per cent completed my thesis on optical illusions."

"But I'm not quite motivated enough to finish it yet. I want to get finished with the music thing. I found that in the past it seems I've always been in that situation. Should I go the academic route or should I go the music scene?

"I've never quite resolved it before but I have now. I think it's . . . at least for a couple of years."

With problems with his throat and the main worry of a pending divorce now behind him, Allan's enthusiasm is strong and realistic.

ON HITS OWN

"Before I was always part of a group, sometimes as an after-thought. Now I'm alone and either I make it or I don't. There's no one else to blame if I fail."

Allan's up a soft, yet solid voice and control over a number of instrumentals is Allan's understanding of his talents and shortcomings. Although he has written a number of top-selling songs—he earned a BMI award for Quesnel's Gone—Allan admits he is not a good lyricist.

"I haven't time to sit down and write a complete tune: words and music usually get hold of a good lyricist. I have no trouble putting words to music, that comes naturally."

The natural talent lies in taking raw material and shaping it into a desired commercial product and, unlike most musicians, Allan admits he works for the commercial market.

"I find it exciting. A lot of people look upon that as commercial market as sort of an evil, but necessary, thing. I really get off on it. It's kind of an art to satisfy myself, get a good technical tune, plus try to satisfy the masses . . . It's a difficult thing to do."

Singer-composer Going It Alone

WINNIPEG (CP) — As the final notes from the piano drifted away there was a polite splatter of applause from three girls sitting directly in front of the stage.

The rest of the audience in the half-empty lounge didn't appear to even be aware there was a singer performing . . . the music might have been from the jukebox.

The entertainer, Chad Allan, smiled politely, offered a half-hearted thank you and went on to his next number. An original, he informed those interested, Sixty Cents a Shot, one side of his new single, his first as a solo artist.

The song, a tongue-in-cheek, half raunchy rocker, drew little more appreciation than the previous numbers.

It didn't seem to bother Allan. He completed the set and sat down for a drink—a screwdriver.

"I really don't care if there's no reaction from the people. I can only please myself in my music. . . . I've got to the point where I don't put too much stock in people's reaction to my songs anymore."

After seven years of playing the pub and lounge circuit of Winnipeg one learns to ignore most of the happenings in the rooms.

"Playing the pubs didn't hurt me. I didn't like things about it, like your drinks coming in and getting one all their problems. And the pubs tends to stifle your creative talent because you can stick to the occasional original but people want the old standbys.

Now, however, the 30-year-old ex-rock singer is giving up the circuit, along with a major's degree in psychology, to attempts to make it as a solo artist.

His first single and album as a solo performer was due for release this spring and Allan is organizing a new group to back him on a cross-country tour, his first since his days with the Guess Who.

MARMORA (Special) — Poison ivy at the Deloro Village playground is creating a problem and Reeve Douglas Lynch has ordered that it be sprayed. Committee Recommends Parker St. Extension

The city council traffic and light committee has endorsed a planning advisory committee recommendation calling for the extension of Parker Street through to Sidney St. Earlier this year the planning advisory committee recommended the extension of Parker Street following a request from Albert College for the closing of Henry Street, an unopened road allowance running south from Parker to Dundas Street.

The suggestion was that the city negotiate with Albert College for the extension of Parker Street across college property in return for closing Henry Street.

Yesterday, however, Alderman Paul Russell said his understanding was that Albert College was not interested in the proposal because it would divide college property.

Monday City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said he would favor a right - of - way at the north end of college property rather than a direct extension of Parker Street.

The traffic committee recommendation asks council to initiate negotiations with Albert College for a road allowance as close as possible to the extension of Parker Street.

Assistant planner Frank Suttmann said a road connection between the Parker Street area and Sidney Street was needed to provide an access for these residents to the west without having to go around by Bridge Street.

High Schoolers Become Summer Soldiers

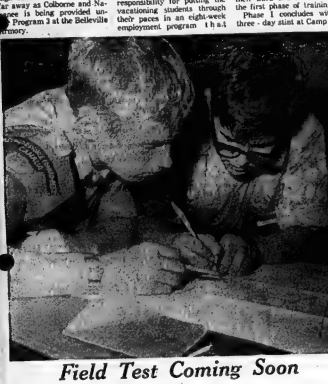
Stocky, tough and every inch a soldier, Warrant Officer Bill Vallance (left) has gone a long way toward shaping this group of high school students on summer vacation into an efficient platoon for the field exercise they face later this week at Camp Borden. Under the Militia's Program 3, 25 students from Hastings and Prince Edward Counties are being given the basic military training that will qualify them as Pay Level C privates by the end of the summer — as well as providing them with summer employment that will help pay their way through the school year. The students are drawn from Grades 11, 12 and 13 and come from as far away as Colborne and Napanee.

Students Get a Taste of Army

A taste of the Army for 25 high school students from as far away as Colborne and Napanee is being provided under Program 3 at the Belleville armory.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has taken responsibility for putting the vacationing students through their paces in an eight-week employment program that provides basic military training. The students are into their third and final week of the first phase of training.

Phase 1 concludes with a three - day stint at Camp Borden this Thursday, Friday and Saturday. For five of the Program 3 students, things will be more rigorous — they are on exercise at Resolute Bay with the Hastings and Prince Edward platoon of the Militia Company taking part in Operation New Viking.



Map - work, small - arms use, fieldcraft and parade square drill have been the first concerns of the 20 that stayed in Belleville. The end-of-week trip to Camp Borden will put what they have learned at the armory to a practical test in the field. Hasty Pee Warrant Officer Bill Vallance, who has been putting in most of his time with the Program 3 students, is confident they will perform well in the field.

Things do not let up after Camp Borden. The program moves into Phase II on Monday. The syllabus includes platoon drill, advanced map-work and weapons use, communications, field defence works, vehicles, casualty evacuation and battle drills. Phase II also winds up with a spell in the field.

From July 30 to August 2 the students will be bivouacked at the Meaford Training Area, an old artillery and tank range, where again they will be given practical experience in the use of skills taught in the classroom and on the parade square.

The third and final phase of the program is shorter than the others, but includes a full week at Camp Petawawa. August 12-25. The return from the Petawawa session is the end of a hard summer for the group of students, but one that is hoped will be of use and benefit to them in terms of the basic skills learned and the confidence, self-reliance and self-discipline acquired.

The students will be encouraged to join the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at the end of Program 3. Warrant Officer Vallance said the decision is theirs but if the trend is the same as last year, most will want to retain their association with the militia regiment.

Field Test Coming Soon

Map reading is one of the classroom subjects being studied by a group of high school students taking part in Program 3, a Militia summer employment program for students that trains them as soldiers. Above, Private Kevin Wall (left) of Stirling, a student at Centennial Secondary School, and Bayside Secondary School student Private Brian Bellmore of Belleville, study map locations during a class given by Hasty Pee Corporal Rick Cunningham. At the end of the week the group goes to Camp Borden for a three-day workout in the field: the first of three practical tests of what they have learned in the three-week Phase I of the eight-week program.

Best Way to Be Found Is to Stay in One Place

TRENTON — How do you know you will not be one of the dozens of hunters and campers who will become lost in Ontario's wilds this summer?

And if you are, how do you know you can survive until help arrives?

A spokesman for Canadian Forces Base Trenton's 424 Squadron says these are the two questions all vacationers must ask themselves before leaving the city behind.

Every summer, search teams are called out to comb the province's vacation lands in search of people who didn't plan on getting lost.

It is the particular duty of 424 Squadron to engage in air searches. Squadron captain Jim Stewart offered a simple warning, "you're going to get into a lot of trouble if you don't know what you are doing. And when you are lost, knowing what you are doing means being able to use what is handy."

With the Quinte region providing a wealth of opportunity for the outdoor enthusiast, area residents should be particularly aware of survival procedures.

Captain Stewart, confining his comments to tenters and canoers, said pre-trip planning is the key to a successful, safe holiday. The most important rule being letting someone know where you are going, how you expect to get there and when you plan to arrive.

One thing all campers should anticipate is getting lost.

"If you are prepared for the worst, there shouldn't be much of a problem," he said.

Included in a list of necessary items are a good compass, knife, hatchet or axe, sewing kit, well-stocked first aid kit, area maps and matches in a waterproof container.

The captain says with these articles a lost camper should be able to ward off the seven enemies of survival, pain, cold, thirst, hunger, fatigue, boredom and loneliness.

Once in the position of being lost, the armed forces teaches a routine of priorities.

These are first build a fire of any description for warmth, first aid if necessary, construct a shelter, prepare signals and finally food.

Captain Stewart commented, "survival rations (jelly beans are good) should be separate from your regular food, and should not be eaten until you are at the point of starvation.

"You shouldn't touch roots for days; foraging for food from the wild wherever you can get it."

He also advised that campers should "know themselves before attempting anything. Most people are likely to overestimate their physical condition and assume they can walk out of the forest.

"Unless you are really an expert woodsman, stay where you are. People will be looking for you and if you have left word, you should be found soon."

A lot of people go into the bush without knowing what to do or how to live, he said. "Stay where you are."

For complete information on how to make summer outings safe, write to Queen's Printer, MacKenzie Building, 36 Adelaide Street, East, Toronto, where you can obtain for $3 a copy of Down But Not Out, a book referred to by Captain Stewart as the "Bible of Survival."

CNIB Van In County

TWEED (Special) — A Canadian National Institute for the Blind mobile eye care team is visiting Northbrook on Highway 41.

The Land O'Lakes Lions Club is sponsoring the clinic and appointments are being made by Northbrook Medical Centre. The Northbrook Community Centre is providing facilities for the van. The CNIB mobile service is aimed at prevention of blindness and individual eye care.

A prevention team is visiting centres in rural Ontario to discover vision defects early before permanent eye damage occurs and to teach residents how to take care of their eyes.

The CNIB Ontario division, Prevention of Blindness and Eye Service Department with the support of the section of Ophthalmology and the Ontario Medical Association, coordinates with local CNIB district administrators and service clubs. The van, Ontario's first, was donated in 1971 by the Physicians Services Incorporated Foundation, a granting agency incorporated by the doctors of Ontario to utilize the reserves remaining after PSI went out of the health insurance field when the Ontario Government took it over. Last year, 2,300 patients from 19 communities were given complete eye examinations.

The staff includes ophthalmologists who have volunteered their services for one to two weeks," says Miss Mary Morgan, co-ordinator of the van and a CNIB eye service nurse. "Our staff sees 125 persons weekly for complete eye examinations and, abased on statistics, 72.5 per cent of these people have eye problems. "We don't know what caused most of the eye diseases which lead to blindness, but we do know how their damage can be stopped," explained Miss Morgan.

Pimping the Pathfinder

Crew members, aged between 14 and 18, keep busy on deck of the Pathfinder, Toronto brigantine which set sail from Belleville today for the Murray Canal. The steel-hulled training vessel met with disaster last Thursday when a 16-year-old Mississauga boy fell overboard near Oswego, N.Y. Late Monday, searchers had found no sign of him. The ship spent the night tied up to the Government Dock accompanied by the Kingston brigantine, St. Lawrence II.

Bardon Still Picking on Top Teams

Bardon Supplies made it three straight Commercial Softball League wins Monday night when they upset second place Devolin Motors 5-2. The Bardon squad refuses to play favorites. Three times they have come at the expense of the loop's top teams.

After the Supplies had kept their hot streak alive, Rollins Construction opened up a four-point lead at the top of the standings by handing Howatt and Robert Pringling a 6-1 setback. The Printers missed a chance to take over alone in third place and instead fell a shade behind Trenton Augur's.

Auger's own a 7-7 mark while the Printers' record stands at 7-8.

The winning pitcher Jamie Hunter string of wins in three. Bardon escaped from the cellar, a position the club had shared with Ellis Juniors prior to last night's action. The team has five wins in 14 starts while the Juniors have won four of 13.

The Supplies' squad gave winning pitcher Jamie Hunter all the runs he needed in the first trip to the plate. Hunter helped his own cause during that early outburst by collecting a single.

Devolin managed to hold the edge in the hitting department 8-6 but the losers, although getting the runners into scoring position, display ed a lack of punch when it really counted.

Touched for eight hits, Hunter recorded five strikeouts while issuing only one walk.

Ron Marsele took the loss on a six-hitter. He fanned six and walked four.

Bardon shortstop Bill Gallagher had the only extra base hit for the winners, connecting for a safe homer in the third.

Bruce Sickle's two-bagger and a single led the Devolin output. The losers got a pair of singles each from Miles Cook and Eric Maher.

In the late game, winning pitcher Ken DeMille was working on a one - hit shutout with two gone in the sixth. But he lost his control and the Printers used three walks and a single to count their lone run.

Larry Griffin came on to finish up for Rollins, yielding a seventh inning double to John Campbell sandwiched between a pair of walks but managing to keep the opposition off the scoreboard.

DeMille notched eight strikeouts and walked six during his five and one-third innings. Griffin fanned two and walked as many.

Glen Carleton and Griffin enjoyed four singles at the plate for Rollins. Carleton hammered a two-run triple and a pair of singles and Griffin collected three singles.

Doing the distance in defeat Bob Swan surrendered 11 hits. He struck out two and walked one.

Safe at Third

Eric Maher slides under Bardon Supplies' third baseman Ted Wallwork in Devolin Motors 5-2 loss in Commercial Softball League play last night. Base umpire Jack McBride signals safe.

Cosy's Squeeze Hurts Roofers

The Cosy Grill gave T. Bailey Roofing a squeeze in Monday night's Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League game but not the kind that brings sighs of delight.

Rather the squeeze brought moans of defeat from the Roofers when Pat Robson scored Cathy Brown on a two out squeeze bunt to help give the Cosy Grill a 3-2 victory.

Sandra Claus hurled the win for the second place Grill giving up five hits and striking out eight. Donna Brant was touched for the loss, allowing eight hits and whiffing seven.

Pat Robson added another single to her game winning bunt while Cathy Brown doubled and singled.

Sharon Hill pounded a pair of triples for the losers' big blasts.

Cobourg's Crisp Passing Is Fatal for Belleville

Had their play been less sloppy, Belleville juveniles would have been celebrating their second win of the South Central Lacrosse Association season yesterday.

With a 3-2 lead in the second period in an eventual 8-7 loss, an arched back save by goaltender Steve Hale on a two on one play kept Cobourg out of the net for a moment.

But on the following Cobourg rush, the Belleville defence broke down to allow Wayne Smith to score his second of four goals, to tie the score.

Just over a minute later, Belleville's manager, Tom Helm, losing his proverbial cool, suggested loudly that Cobourg be given a penalty. The referee, little appreciative of sideline assistance, gave Helm a bench minor — forcing Belleville to play two men short.

Playing poor defensive lacrosse at the best of times, Belleville collapsed with the manpower shortage. Gary Clark, with Smith assisting, then Smith, with Clark assisting, banged two goals into the net within two minutes to force Belleville into catch-up play the remainder of the game.

Outside the dressing room after the game, Helm was not pleased with the referee's work.

"The thing that bugs me is that I didn't swear at him," said Helm. "I was just yelling at him. I've gotten bench penalties before, but that series cost us two goals. We only lost by one."

Helm's vocal exhibitionism cannot be blamed for Belleville's fifth loss of the season however.

In the third period Hale provided solid goaltending, but in the second, replacing Alan Tebworth, Hale's slick had holes. He gave up six scoreboard markers.

But Hale's work in the nets cannot bear the blame of the blame, as defensively, Belleville was constantly outmaneuvered by the crisply passing Cobourg offensive lines.

More than once, Belleville was caught in three on one, two on one situations, while the forwards made their tardy progress back up the floor.

Cobourg would work the ball around the perimeter of Belleville's defensive box in the hope of finding lovers not of formation. Far too often, they were successful.

Only Cobourg's final goal, Clark carried the ball down in a three on two attack. Clark carried into his right lane corner, drawing Andie Brant after him. Clark passed in front of the net to John Mitchell who held the ball long enough to draw Tebworth out. Mitchell flipped the ball over to Brian Skinner in the left lane. Mitchell scored as Belleville's forwards were all coming up the floor.

Tiredness cannot be offered as an excuse for the loss. Bench strength was minimal, but Cobourg's was no better. Belleville played with 10 men, Cobourg with 13.

Kerry Reid continued his solid work for Belleville in the third period as the home club started picking up their pace, playing more aggressive defence.

Things Look Up For Intell Team

The Quinte Mall Lenders moved a step closer to the securing of first place in the Industrial Softball League eastern division and The Intelligencer has finally escaped from the dank depths of the eastern cellar after games played Monday night.

The Lenders coasted behind the three hit shutout effort of Mark Sheridan to post an 8 - 0 victory over Canadian Tire and move within four points of division leading CNR. The Intell escaped from the basement for the first time this season by hammering the Constabulary 16-6. The win combined with the Post Office's 10-4 loss to the Independents moves the Printers one point ahead of the Postles.

Sheridan threw strikes past 11 Tiremen and walked only one in posting the Lenders' 11th win of the season. Jim Paraskevy pulled a homer and three singles and Larry Graber punched a four-bagger and two singles to give Sheridan all the support he needed. Herb LaMadeleine also connected for a home run.

John French lasted five innings for Canadian Tire giving up seven runs and 14 hits. Andy Pruden hurled the final two frames. Pruden had a pair of doubles and Ken Trice a triple for the Tiremen.

A 12 run burst in the fourth inning broke open a tie game and propelled The Intell to their decisive win over Constellation.

Joe Edwards led the Printers' 16 hit production with a triple and two singles with Rick Hay, Maurice Notary and Ron Culloden adding three baggers.

Culloden hurled a 10 hitter for the win. He struck out three.

Steve Gatcum had a triple and double to pace the losers' hitting with Jim Thompson adding a pair of doubles. Thompson took the loss on the Carpetmen's mound.

The Postles latched on to a 10 lead after two innings last night but the Independents pushed across seven in the third to assure their victory.

Hunter Fournier, Bob Craig and Jim Northey had a double and single for the winners. Northey fired a six-hitter for the win.

Reg Gilbert and George Johnson shared the Post Office mound duties.

Orioles Convinced Angel Rates A Halo

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Of all the Angels in their ball-park Monday night, Baltimore Orioles thought Richie Scheinblum had the biggest halo.

Scheinblum's troubles began in the second inning when he drew a one-out walk but was picked off first by Dave McNally. That negated a subsequent double by Lee Stanton.

In the bottom of the fourth, right fielder Scheinblum dropped Earl Williams' fly ball after a long run for a two-base error. The only thing that hurt was Scheinblum's fielding average, but an inning later, with two Orioles aboard and one out, Bobby Grich lofted a long fly to right and when Scheinblum dropped that one it meant a three-base error and a tie game. Tommy Davis then singled home the lead run.

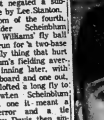
The Angels' last chance came in the eighth and again Scheinblum blew it. Bob Oliver singled with two out and up stepped Scheinblum to try to the tying run. The best he could muster was a grounder to first and Cal Flornia bowed to the Orioles 5-3.

Elsewhere in the American League, Chicago White Sox clubbed New York Yankees 4-3, Boston Red Sox blanked Minnesota Twins 3-0, Kansas City Royals outshutout Milwaukee Brewers 4-1, Oakland Athletics trounced Texas Rangers 9-7 on Jim Mason's 13th-inning homer.

The victories by the Orioles and the Red Sox further tightened the race in the East Division. Jim Petrocelli drilled a two-run homer and Bill Lee pitched a seven-hit shutout as the streaking Red Sox beat the Twins and rallied within one game of first-place New York.

The Orioles are 1½ out.

Pat Kelly's one-out single rapped a two-run rally off New York relief ace Sparky Lyle in the ninth inning and lifted Wilbur Wood and the White Sox to victory.



Kurt Bevacqua's pinch grand slam home run in the fifth inning sparked the Royals over the Brewers and helped ignite a five-overall run spree in both dugouts.

With the Royals leading 4-1, Bevacqua hit the first pitch from Milwaukee's Jerry Bell over the fence. Jim Wohlford three straight brushback pitches to Fran Healy and the Kansas City batter charged the mound and narrowly missed Bell with a punch.

Several fights broke out and Bell was ejected shortly before order was restored.

"I wasn't mad at Bell," Healy said. "I just like to show him that I didn't believe in stuff like that. I didn't hit him; I just tackled him.

Mason entered the Rangers' game with Detroit in the fifth inning after Texas used a pinch hitter for the starting catcher. With one out in the 12th, Tom Grieve singled off Bob Miller and Mason hit his second homer of the season.

Troon Golf Course Has Two Nightmares

TROON, Scotland (AP) — The last time the British Open golf championship was played here, the scoreboard operators ran out of cards marked seven, eight and nine.

Some players blamed the "postage stamp" for the skyrocketing scores in 1962. But most shook their clubs at the railway.

Arnold Palmer, at the crest of his career, humbled Troon with a 72-hole total of 276 for a six-stroke victory. That 12-under-par score is the record for the British championship.

But as Palmer flourished, others withered. Many blamed their misfortunes on the eighth, a mere 128-yard hole believed to be the shortest in championship golf and called the "postage stamp" because of its tiny target, a green menaced on all sides by dunes and ferocious bunkers. One golfer took a 14 on it.

The "railway" is the even more sadistic, 481-yard 11th hole, a par five with both tee and green close by the railway carrying trains between Glasgow and Scotland's West Coast. Its fairway at no point measures more than 45 yards across. Gorse-covered hills close in on both sides and bunkers loom near the green.

The men on the 1962 scoreboard used up most of their sevens, eights and nines on the 11th. Kel Nagle, the champion after by the name of Jack Nicklaus had a shattering 16.

Nicklaus is the favorite, a 7-to-2 betting choice, among the 153-man field scheduled to start the 102nd British Open Wolfe-dog. Second choice at 6-to-1 is Lee Trevino, aiming to become the first American to take the title in seven years in a row.

Palmer, who looks stirring in preparatory rounds so far this week, was listed at 14-to-1 along with Johnny Miller, the U.S. Open champion, and Bruce Crampton of Australia, leading money winner this year on the U.S. tour.

Palmer is a little greyer than he was on his last trip to Troon, but nobody is saying age will hurt him on a course where experience counts so much.

In the 1962 tournament he highballed it through the "railway" with 4-3-4-3 scores in four rounds. He was one of the few players who realized the hole had to be played safe, and left his driver in the bag in favor of a No. 4 iron.

Asked after a practice round this week how he fared on the dreaded hole, he grinned. "A bogie four."

It was as if he'd never been there.

Cows on the Runway Upset NHL Travellers

NEW YORK (CP) — Flying over a tiny village in Finland four National Hockey League players had a close call when the pilot had to bum the landing strip to get the cows off the field.

But Dennis Hextall, Minnesota North Stars centre, says he wouldn't have missed the trip for the world. "It was quite an experience."

Hextall, his 1972-73 team-mate Don Blackburn, and Pulse Burghs Jim Rutherford and Rick Kessell are back Blue in visit to Thailand and Hawaii sponsored by the U.S. defence department as a morale booster for American servicemen.

The NHL began sending groups of players to Southeast Asia three years ago. Last year five members of the North Stars went to South Vietnam.

"We visited guys in various hospitals who had lost an arm or a leg," Hextall said. "And yet, it's amazing how they kept their spirits up."

Not one guy told me he wouldn't play hockey because it's too rough a sport. Imagine, some guy who has fought in a war thinking hockey is rough.

"We had only one close call.

We were coming in for a landing at a small village in a plane that seemed to be 35 years old. The pilot had to buzz the strip to get the cows off the field.

"Then when we touched down we bounced and the plane took a sharp left turn. The pilot cut the engines, but we managed to keep on the runway. That scared the heck out of us."

Hextall says one way U.S. bomber pilots relaxed was to slide down a barracks floor with beer, then squash a soda can and use it as a puck in "one of the wildest games I ever saw."

The NHL group arrived in Thailand June 9, stayed until June 20, then spent five days in Hawaii.

The players answered a lot of questions about the stars in the NHL, Hextall said. "A lot of the pilots were from the New England area, so they kept asking us about the Bruins and Bobby Orr. And they would ask us why the Canadiens were so powerful.

One lighter moment of the trip still remains vivid in Hextall's memory: Rutherford pedalling a rickshaw.

"The rickshaws in Thailand are powered by a native pumping on a bicycle. One day Blackie and Rutherford decided to hike, Rutherford pedalled while Blackie and the rickshaw driver sat in the back. It was a pretty funny scene."

The only casualty of the visit was Blackburn, who "got a little sick and lost 12 to 14 pounds," Hextall recalls. "Other than that, all went well.

Bombers' Don Jonas Full of Confidence

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

WINNIPEG Blue Bombers will be out to make this hometown fans they still pack some offensive punch when they meet Saskatchewan Roughriders in one of two Canadian Football League exhibition games tonight.

In Vancouver, head coach Eagle Keys will try to find a pattern for his revamped British Columbia Lions with a win victory over the Grey Cup champion Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Bombers' quarterback Don Jonas is full of confidence following "a good training camp" that turned up a few good surprises.

He said rookie wide receivers Charlie Collins and Richard Trapp have done a fine job in camp and praised the potential of rookie running back Jerry Bledsoe. Don Johnson, Gary D'Aton and Allan Thompson, gained in trade with Ottawa, immediately after last week's 10-10 exhibition.

The roughriders, following their 24-10 loss last week to Montreal Alouettes, are expected to run more against Winnipeg as new head coach John Payne seeks his first CFL victory.

The big issue in the Roughriders' camp is whether rookie Brian Lumpkin can become ahead of perennial backup quarterback Bubba Wyche in the race for starter Ron Lancaster.

Tackle Tim Roth, with strained ligaments in his foot, tight end Allan Ford, with a scratched eye, wide receiver Rick Eber, with a mild concussion, and tight end Cliff Bailey, out with knee and back problems, also have been doubtful for action.

Rookie Canadian Brock Ayotte will help out the defence for the Lions after moving from halfback to linebacker. Added attention from veteran Mike Leciello and rookie Canadian Ross Clarkson, and Jim Young, with a rib cartilage injury, probably will be sidelined.

The Tiger-Cats, under second-year quarterback Chuck Ealey and coach Jim Young, with a rib cartilage injury, probably will be sidelined.

Bill Etter alternating, will continue their search for a running back.

Rookie Andy Hopkins seems to be a strong contender for the

Aaron Can Handle All the Attention

NEW YORK (AP) — The closer Hank Aaron gets to Babe Ruth's record, the more interest and pressure becomes. But all the attention from the media, Aaron says, is something he can handle.

Aaron's two home runs Sunday against New York Mets were the 695th and 696th of his career, and only 18 away from the Babe's career total of 714.

For the 39-year-old Aaron, in the season of a 19th major league baseball career, they were his 22nd and 23rd homers of the season.

At his present pace, he would hit only four more to tie Ruth's record. Last year, Aaron hit 34 homers.

Aaron admits the home run record is the thing that is keeping him going. For "when you're close to 40 you're at the age where the desire sometimes is dull. But since the record is so close I'd be denying myself the privilege if I didn't go for it."

As to how long he might continue playing, Aaron says, "If I wasn't as close as I was, this would be my last year. But now I'll see how definitely will be my last."

Should one start to think that Aaron might be doing their part in making Aaron's task a little easier, Hank denies it.

"I don't even get balls down the middle to swing at pitches anymore," he said.

When Aaron reaches the 700 milestone, the countdown will begin in earnest. Hank has expressed the hope that he hits his 714th in Atlanta where he began his career 21 years ago in Milwaukee.

The Braves already have made a standing offer of $700 in silver dollars for the return of that historic baseball. If it comes on the road, the money will go to Aaron's favorite charity. In addition, everyone in the ball park will receive scrolls and medallions commemorating the feat and attesting the fact that they saw it.

10 Pitchers-25 Walks New NL Record Set

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hal King is hard to please, a picky pinch-hitter who won't swing at just any old pitch, and Monday night he decided to be more than usual.

His wait at the plate paid off. He finally found one he liked and belted a grand-slam homer to highlight a seven-run uprising that lifted Cincinnati Reds to an 11-6 victory over Montreal Expos in a game featuring a National League record 25 walks.

It was the Reds' fifth consecutive victory and ninth in 10 outings.

In the only other league games, Atlanta Braves topped Philadelphia Phillies 6-3 in 10 innings and New York Mets edged Houston Astros 2-1 in 12 innings.

King started the Reds on their hot streak July 1 with a three-run pinch-homer in the ninth inning against Los Angeles that lifted Cincinnati to a 4-3 victory. He has three hits in 11 times at bat this season, all of them homers.

"I wanted something I could get my bat behind," he said. "I was going to wait for a pitch I liked, if I broke even I'd be happy, and also try to get everything behind it."

The veteran catcher, formerly with the Pirates, Astros and Rangers and recalled by the Reds from the minors this season to provide bench strength, clobbered the letter-high fastball from Pat Jarvis over the right field wall as the Reds broke open a 4-4 ball game.

The 10 pitchers used by the two teams surrendered 25 walks, one over the league record. The major league record is 30, set in 1916 by Detroit and Philadelphia of the American League.

Clay Carroll of the Reds, who picked up his sixth save of the season and was one of the five pitchers to permit a walk, delivered the 25th walk in the ninth inning to Ron Fairly.

"I think that's pretty funny," Carroll said. "I walk only two guys in four innings, and I'm the one in the record book."

Joe Morgan had a two-run homer and Johnny Bench a solo blast for the Reds.

With the score tied 4-4, the Reds sent 13 batters to the plate in the sixth inning. Bench delivered the go-ahead run with a two-out single to Ralph Garr and sacrifice fly to Marty Perez in the inning.

Paul Casanova sent the game into extra innings for Atlanta with a two-run homer, his first, in the seventh inning.

Felix Millan's two-out single between Jesse Orosco and Mike Marshall in the 10th inning with the winning run for the Mets. Lee May homered for the Astros for Houston, but pinch-hitter Jim Beauchamp sent the Mets into extra innings with a two-out run-scoring single in the ninth.

Right fielder Cesar Cedeno suffered torn ligaments in his ankle and will be out a minimum of three weeks.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, July 11

Aries (March 21-April 19): Business proceeds as usual; then diverges onto unplanned tracks. Romantic interests sparkle.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Nothing comes out quite as expected; make the best of it. Improvements are feasible later.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Be ready for a series of interesting episodes. The mildest incidents generate a wild story for later retelling.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Your sense of humor is beyond price — exercise it often on the abrupt start-and-stop pace. Home life needs entertaining.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Younger people continue capricious moods. Avocations become surprisingly useful, providing much needed information.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Business activity includes a potential good break. Partnership and competitive enterprises are lively.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): While coping with dissents of ads, others, hold your own balance. You must resolve your own troubles yourself.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Today's developments, as inconvenient as they may seem, turn out later to be most constructive. Be encouraged.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The brightest idea of today makes a big difference in your career. In personal affairs there is a brief delay.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your sensitivities are on the surface, bring you satisfaction as well as dismay. Select the best conditions you can.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business and personal life may hit awkward going — put yourself in the other fellow's shoes this can help.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Rely on nobody beyond your control for anything serious, and fewer changes will be necessary. Be explicit in your comments.

Welfare Snarls Are Seen

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's ministry of community and social services faces considerable problems unless its field services improve, a group of senior civil servants reports in a study released Monday.

The group says problems include communications, slowness is processing welfare applications and a split between head office and field staff over decision making.

It says the regional administration branch which handles applications for family benefits must process 2,800 applications each month and make 10,000 decisions on recipients whose circumstances have changed.

The report says field and head office staff tend to develop contrary directions and "the field staff seem to feel generally that the program has reached a size where a centralized decision-making function is ceasing to become viable."

"It has become operationally cumbersome and externally out of tune with public and client expectations," the report said.

The study group says the ministry would have more important future role in finding and creating jobs and therefore should concentrate on solving its problems.

The traditional market-place can no longer be expected to provide sufficient, suitable paid employment for all who want to work, and alternatives have to be found.

The report cites the federally-funded Local Intiatives Program and Opportunities for Youth as examples of where government could help rectify the situation.

Fewer Absent

TORONTO (CP) — A study by the Ontario ministry of labor indicates that workers on a four-day week seem to work harder with less absenteeism.

The study, released Monday, covered 157 of 700 firms in Ontario operating on a compressed work week schedule.

Plant Closed

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — About 100 employees of Andrew McNiece Ltd., a shoe manufacturing plant here ceased a day of work Monday, the result of damage to the plant from van-

Black and white - colored leather dye had been smeared over 50 cases of shoes, brooch making them unsaleable, company officials said.

Still Tied

WINNIPEG (CP) — Liberal Leader Izzy Asper and NDP candidate Murdoch MacKay remained deadlocked Monday after a final check of hospital votes from the June 28 Manitoba election.

Returning officer Jim Maloway of Wolseley constituency in south-central Winnipeg said he will cast the deciding vote later this week and a judicial recount is likely to be requested by the loser.

Slide Kills 40

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — Torrential rains which lashed Mexico during the weekend left about 40 persons dead in a landslide near the Lake of Chalala about 250 miles northwest of here, police said Monday. The landslide buried numerous adobe huts in three villages on a hillside overlooking a lake near Guadasjara.

Strike End

PORT MAITLAND, Ont. (CP) — Members of Local 6304, United Steelworkers of America, ended a four-day strike Monday against the Electrical Reduction Company of Canada (TERCO) plant here, voting to accept the company's original offer.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to give prompt relief the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing! Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as *Preparation H. RENE LEVESQUE

Levesque Says Offices Bugged

MONTREAL (CP) — Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque said in an interview Monday that Quebec police wiretap operations covered all the party's campaign offices during the 1970 provincial elections.

Mr. Levesque told Le Devoir that "all the offices of the PQ were bugged in 1970 and the most bugged of all was the party's Montreal headquarters."

A report carried Saturday by La Presse said police had wiretapped a PQ election campaign office, as well as the homes and offices of Mayor Jean Drapeau, the provincial public service minister and a member of the Olympic organizing committee.

Mr. Levesque said he believed "the impetus for this type of political espionage came from the federal government."

He said the federal government was acting through the RCMP to impose its views on Quebec.

Ajax Remains

AJAX, Ont. (CP) — Ajax council decided Monday night not to hold a referendum for a new name when the municipality of Durham amalgamates Pickering village and a portion of Pickering Township under regional government.

Council decided to accept the provincial government's suggestion that the name Ajax be retained for the enlarged municipality located just east of Toronto.

Reeve Dave Trebilcock said Pickering village has also agreed that no referendum is needed.

Profits Large

OTTAWA (CP) — Foreign-owned companies took about $500 million in dividends and profits out of the country last year, the Commons was told Monday.

The information was contained in a written reply tabled in the House by Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie. Harry Oliver (NDP—Coast Chilcoin) had sought the information.

The reply also said the government gate $5.1 million in subsidies to foreign-owned companies last year.

No Choice

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Architect Charles Simon of Toronto said Monday one reason apartment dwellers break furniture, defiance elevators and uproot plants is because they are not allowed much choice in their living accommodations.

He told a housing workshop on family and consumer studies at University of Guelph that there are no followers a year after people move in to find out why behavior has changed.

He said persons get angry at children who play in parking areas instead of those set aside for them. Instead they should find out why the children don't like the playground.

In addition, he said there are too many restrictions on housing in Canada which result in people with ideas not being able to put them into effect.

He said many houses and apartment buildings look alike.

Long Hours Disliked

TORONTO (CP) — About 800 members of Local 598, Operative, Plasterers and Cement Masons International Union went on strike Monday after rejecting a tentative wage and fringe benefit package totalling $2 an hour over three years.

Among construction affected is Canadian Industries Ltd., Metropolitan tower on the city's waterfront, Ontario Hydro's nuclear power plant in nearby Pickering and a downtown office-shopping project.

The most contentious issue with the Toronto Construction Association, was the matter of scheduling work and a limitation on daily concrete pours.

Anthony Anson, business manager for the local, said the men were fed up with the long hours that often began at 7 a.m.

"They put in long hours of overtime two or three days a week," he said. "What they want is a five-day week with smaller pours. The high overtime pay means half of it goes in taxes."

No Changes

TORONTO (CP) — There will be no changes in student, academic or clinical, when administration of eight schools of nursing here are taken over by the Ontario education system Sept. 1.

In making that announcement Monday, L. M. Johnston, assistant deputy minister of colleges and universities, said no changes will be made before the 1974-75 academic year.

"These decisions reflect the transfer of administrative responsibility only at this time," he said.

Tigers Escape

HEMMINGFORD, Que. (CP) — About 10 young tigers escaped Monday night from Parc Safari Africain, a natural wildlife reserve near this community 35 miles south of Montreal.

A spokesman for the park said four of the tigers were recaptured and police and park attendants were searching for the other animals.

The spokesman said the animals, all about a year old and about 100 lbs. in weight, may be dangerous.

She did not know how the animals escaped.

400 Killed

LONDON (Reuter) — At least 400 men, women and children were slaughtered by Portuguese troops in a "systematic genocidal massacre of people" in the Mozambique village of Wiriyamu, a Roman Catholic priest says in an article in The Times. Rev. Adrim Hastings, a priest in Birmingham, England, says his article was based on reports received from Spanish missionaries working in the Portuguese territory where, he says, troops were killing villagers thought to be aiding guerrillas of Frelimo, the Mozambique liberation organization.

MITCHELL SHARP

Sharp to Meet Girl's Parents

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp will meet Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Dribjer of Rockwood, Ont., parents of one of two girls killed May 15 by Zambian border guards in Africa.

A department official Monday said Mr. Sharp had suggested the meeting after hearing of an interview given by Mr. Dribjer. He later received a letter from Mr. Dribjer seeking a meeting.

Killed while viewing the Victoria Falls on the Zambezi River were Marjan Dribjer, 19, and Christine Louise Sinclair, 19, of Guelph.

Heroin Valued at $40 Million Found in Two Steamer Trunks

TORONTO (CP) — Two large steamer trunks, containing 70 pounds of heroin, were entered as exhibits Monday as a trial opened into charges against eight persons of conspiring to import heroin into Canada, conspiring to traffic in heroin, and conspiring to possess heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

The jury was told that the heroin, more than 90 per cent pure, had an ultimate street value of $40 million.

Facing the charges are Francisco Bellitti, 22, Benedetto Zizzo, 59, Vito Cutrona, 32, Francesco Cutrova, 47, Antonio Sciortino, 39, and Antonio Codispoti, 35, all of Toronto, and Nicolas Asiro, 58, and his wife Gaetana, 52, both of nearby Concord, Ont.

Each has been provided with headphones for translation of the trial.

The charges cover the period from Jan. 1, 1971, to Jan. 28, 1973. RCMP Sgt. Gerald Vandegraaf said he and other officers had kept some of the accused under surveillance between 1971 and 1973.

The police sergeant told court he flew to New York Jan. 18 this year, and the next day boarded the Italian liner Cristoforo Colombo accompanied by U.S. officers.

He said he checked the lists of passengers bound for Canada and noticed that Bellitti seemed nervous and several times tried to approach the immigration officer.

Bellitti was cleared and two steamer trunks were placed in a storage area of New York City's Pier 86, the RCMP officer said.

A police dog was unable to detect heroin inside the trunks. A U.S. agent then punched a hole in the bottom of one of the trunks with a screwdriver. A white powdery substance adhered to the screwdriver and both trunks were examined in Bellitti's presence, Sgt. Vandegraaf said.

"We removed the insides of the trunks. The insides were placed in the bottom before the outside." Each trunk contained 36 bags—10 in the bottom and 18 in the sides.

The trial is continuing.

Quebecers Leave

MONTREAL (CP) — About 250,000 Quebecers have left the province in the last six years while the population of the province hid increased by 150,000.

Statistics Canada figures show the province's population increased to 6,058,022 at the end of 1972 from 5,902,003 in 1967, but the increase was mostly due to immigration, says La Presse.

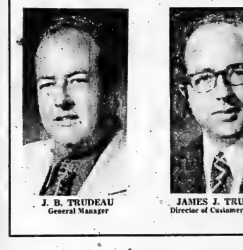
No More Private Sorties For Canadians in Vietnam

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian ceasefire observers in Vietnam have been ordered not to make any more field trips on their own, Defence Minister James Richardson said Monday.

He told the Commons it has been made clear to the 290 Canadians on the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) that during any further trips they must be accompanied by representatives of at least one of the three other countries on the ICCS.

He also said every effort is being made to free two Canadians, Capt. Ian Patten of Toronto and Capt. Fletcher Thomson of Ottawa, being held by the Viet Cong.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp was asked by Donald Munro (PC—Esquimalt-Saanich) if the trip by the two men was approved by the ICCS.



Mr. Sharp said their mission was not official but they were "on duty as members of the ICCS" and carrying out a function "considered quite useful."

Outside the House, Mr. Sharp said the Canadian force will be withdrawn from Vietnam at the end of this month as scheduled regardless of whether the two captains have been recovered or not.

Asked whether the main problem may be an internal communications breakdown among the Viet Cong, he said "it may be."

Blast Kills Four

CLEBURNE, Tex. (AP) — Army munitions experts are picking up hand-grenade fuses scattered by explosions that wrecked a munitions plant and killed four women employees. The fuses are "quite sensitive if handled roughly," said a spokesman. Three explosions Tuesday injured at least 30 other persons at the Gearhart-Owen Industries Inc. plant three miles north of here.

Prisoners Escape

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Two prisoners who slipped out of their handcuff and leg-irons, then commandeered their guards' car, were still at large today police here said. Steven Faust, 20, and Michael Mitchell McArthur, 21, were being driven to Kingston Penitentiary from Sudbury when they escaped near Oshawa.

Two Bodies Found

MONTREAL (CP) — Two unidentified men died of bullet wounds in hospital Tuesday night after police found them lying in the street opposite a vacant lot in suburban St. Laurent. Police inspector Fernand Savard said it is not known if the men had been shot opposite the lot or if their bodies have been dumped there. One witness said he saw the wounded men said the bodies were strewn about the road "like pins after they've been hit by a bowling ball."

Food Crisis Grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — An expanding world food crisis is a growing threat, with population increases and the new affluence of some countries cited as factors, says a report soon to be published here. The analysis by the Overseas Development Council warns of sharply increased competition among countries for food.

Volunteers Scarce

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States defence department officials, citing poor recruiting results for the army and navy in June, are concerned the armed services may not be able to attract enough volunteers to maintain their strength now that the draft is dead.

Nuclear Test Start Awaited

PARIS (CP) — The start of the controversial French nuclear weapon tests in the South Pacific was considered imminent today as a government ban on flights and shipping in the test zone went into effect.

The first blast, expected to be of a one-megaton weapon, may come as soon as Friday.

There was speculation that there might be as many as six explosions, combining next year's test program with this year's.

Defying a World Court injunction, widespread Europe's protests that fallout from the tests will endanger human life and plans by a New Zealand navy frigate and a group of private pacific yachts to invade the test area, the French government made clear it will not cancel the tests.

It says they are necessary for development of the nuclear strike force that the late President Charles de Gaulle sponsored to enhance France's voice in world affairs.

There may never be an official announcement that the tests have been held. This was the procedure last year, when the only official French word was an announcement after the last explosion that the area around Mururoa Atoll was no longer closed.

Today's Chuckle

Happy is the mosquito who can pass the screen test.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former attorney-general John Mitchell said today he told President Nixon nothing of the meetings which led to the Watergate wiretapping because he had rejected the plan and assumed "these matters were over and done with."

Mitchell, before the Senate's televised Watergate hearings for a second day of testimony, repeated his statement that he kept word of the case from Nixon during the election campaign for fear of endangering the president's re-election.

Had he told Nixon, he said, the president would have taken strong action against campaign and administration aides implicated in the planning and cover-up.

And after the election, Mitchell said, he withheld word, assuming there would be a housecleaning anyhow, and that the matter would take care of itself.

Once again, Mitchell went to Capitol Hill without his wife, Martha.

Senator Daniel Inouye (Dem., Hawaii) questioned Mitchell anew about the meetings of Jan. 27, Feb. 4 and March 30, 1972, at which wiretap and spy proposals drafted by Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy were discussed.

Disputing earlier testimony, Mitchell has said he never approved the proposal, and actually rejected it.

In fact, Mitchell said that at the first session, he told Liddy to go out and burn the plans.

He said he intended that order to eliminate incriminating documents and "also to abandon any concept that such activities would be part of the re-election campaign of the president."

Mitchell said he did not advise other participants to the three meetings, including Jeb Stuart Magruder, former campaign deputy, and the former White House counsel, John Dean, that the proposals involved them in a conspiracy to commit crimes.

Mitchell said he did not tell Nixon of the proposals advanced at the three meetings because "I presumed and had every reason to believe that these matters were over and done with, were through, and that was the end of them."

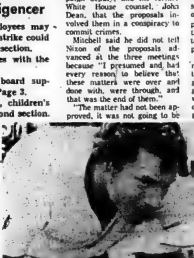
"The matter had not been approved, it was not going to be approved, and that was the end of it," he said.

Welfare Cases Use Denturists

TORONTO (CP) — At least one provincial government ministry promotes low-cost false teeth provided by dailawed denturists rather than those subscribed by dentists, Health Minister Richard Potter was told today.

The charge came in a 10-page brief to the minister by the citizens committee for the repeal of Bill 236, an independent group that claims province-wide membership of 2,000.

Their brief said extensive use of denturists—those who make false teeth — has been made by the community and social services ministry which indicates "that this agency, charged with the judicious dispensation of public monies, considers the service economical and proper."



The bill places a legal status on the province's 237 denturists by placing them under the supervision of dentists,and sets out standards of qualification they must meet.

About 30 committee supporters demonstrated quietly outside the Hepburn block, across from the legislature, while their leaders met privately with Dr. Potter.

Committee Chairman John Ireland, a Brantford machinery dealer, said after the meeting that officials of the community and social services ministry sends its welfare recipients to denturists for low-cost plates.

"We've documented evidence of this," he said. "It proves that the government itself recognizes the value of the denturist."

Dr. Potter said after the 20-minute meeting in his office that he shared some of the group's concerns, but that the government intended to proceed with the legislation to place controls on denturists and upgrade their standards.

Weighing The Evidence

Preston Shoup weighs a silver bar in Key West, Fla. He says this matches the description of silver lost in 1622 when the Spanish galleon Atocha sank in a hurricane off the Florida coast. Export Price, Not Costs Pushes Oil Higher Here

OTTAWA (CP) — Recent prices increases by oil companies have been caused mainly by rising export prices, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday.

He told the Commons world prices rather than rising production costs have, in his opinion, been the prime factor behind increasing prices for petroleum products.

"This bout has been the assessment of the New Democratic Party but NDP Leader David Lewis said later it was the first time Mr. Macdonald was "forthright enough to admit it" in the house.

NDP energy critic T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) said oil companies are taking advantage of higher United States prices to increase prices in this country.

Mr. Macdonald conceded international prices mainly have been responsible.

In Florida the state attorney-general has filed suit against 12 major oil companies, accusing them of causing a gasoline shortage by conspiracy to keep prices high and force independent dealers out of business.

Mr. Douglas said Imperial, the largest oil refiner in Canada, has jacked up gasoline prices four times since November. The government should act immediately to enforce a two-price system on rate for domestic products and a higher rate for export sales.

Mr. Macdonald said federal-provincial negotiations that could lead to a two-price system have been undertaken but no agreement has been reached.

The NDP has proposed a three-point program to protect the country from repercussions of a world energy shortage, particularly in the U.S.

The program calls for a two-price system, controls for exports and removal of the Ottawa Valley line that gives Canada into two energy markets—the east portion served by offshore oil, largely from Venezuela and the Middle East, and the west by domestic suppliers.

Gas Control Issue Adjourned to Fall

CALGARY (CP) — Ontario's legal battle with Alberta over the latter's constitutional right to interfere with gas sales between provinces was adjourned Tuesday until Sept. 25 to allow the Alberta Energy Resources Conservation Board and the oil industry adequate time to study this important matter.

The application to adjourn the hearing was made by M. A. Putnam, representing Pan Alberta Gas Ltd. of Calgary, a major gas-exporting company.

Mr. Putnam told board chairman George Govier that the Ontario government and the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario filed submissions with the board June 29, the last day for interventions to be submitted on an application by Consolidated Natural Gas Ltd. to sell gas to TransCanada Pipelines Ltd. of Toronto.

He said "the other parties have not had an opportunity to fully consider the constitutional spects of the matter."

Tuesday, the board heard representations fro mthe various parties who filed interventions to whether they wished the hearing is proceed.

Robin Scott, representing the Ontario government, said the board has no authority to conduct the hearing and the proceeding was unconstitutional, contravening section of 116 of British North America Act.

Consolidated Gas has applied to sell 125 billion cubic feet of gas annually to TransCanada Pipelines.

Opposing arguments that the case should be split to consider the application for gas sale and constitutional matters separately, Mr. Scott said the two matters were interlocked and should be considered in one silting.

Ontario consumes about 25 per cent of the two trillion cubic feet of natural gas produced annually in Canada and 20 per cent of the gas produced in Canada comes from Alberta.

Mr. Govier said since the case is adjourned until Sept. 25, the board is prepared to receive other submissions in connection with the constitutional aspect or the sale of gas itself. The deadline for new interventions is Aug. 25.

The Weather

Synopsis: Cooler air has settled across the province and should continue to keep skies bright in most areas today, except for a possible afternoon shower in southeastern sections. Canada Stalls Truce Work Until Two Officers Freed

SAIGON (CP) — The International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) met for only 13 minutes today then adjourned because of Canadian insistence that no routine business be conducted until two Canadian officers missing for two weeks are returned by the Viet Cong.

It was the second regular meeting of the commissioners at which no work was done as Canadian Ambassador Michel Gauvin attempted to put pressure on the Viet Cong by restricting ICCS business.

Meanwhile, Canadian and ICCS authorities were awaiting word from the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) on the location of the two Canadian officers and their two ICCS employees who fell into Viet Cong hands June 28.

The PRG issued a statement Tuesday saying that it was awaiting reports from the Xuan Loc area, 35 miles northeast of here, on whether there is any military activity.

It said when it has received assurances military action has ceased it will send liaison officers to the area to discover the location of the Canadians.

In today's meeting, Hungarian Ambassador Ferenc Esztergalyos, July ICCS chairman, said he was sending the Hungarian ICCS military attache to talk to the PRG later in the day.

It was believed that the general would remind PRG officials that Canada will permit the commissioners to do no more work until its two officers, Capts. Ian Patten of Toronto and Fletcher Thomson of Ottawa, are returned.

Earlier it was reported that there was a possibility that Canada could completely tie up the ICCS by ordering its men in the seven ICCS regions to do no more work.

The possibility remained late today but Canadians were believed to feel that, at the moment at least, they are applying enough pressure.

There are 4 PRG complaints of alleged ceasefire violations to be dealt with by the commissioners. There were four more cases to be dealt with at the last meetings this week that were adjourned.

No requests for alleged ceasefire violations are being processed by the commissioners here due to the Canadian position.

However, the regional ICC teams are continuing in function.

Canada Helps U.S. Aid Dollar

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada announced Tuesday that Canada has put up an additional $1 billion to help the United States combat downward pressure on the dollar in international currency markets.

Total funds pledged to U.S. authorities had thus been doubled to $2 billion.

The U.S. federal reserve board says its major trading partners have pledged a total of $17.98 billion.

Such swap deals mean that one country can draw on currency of a pledging country to intervene in foreign exchange markets and stabilize exchange rates.

Tuesday's statement said the arrangement with the U.S. will not affect any Bank of Canada operations on exchange markets to regulate the rate for Canadian funds.

There was no indication from the central bank or from Finance Minister John Turner that authorities have been intervening in the Canadian dollar from falling more than it has, by buying up Canadian dollars on foreign exchanges.

But total reserves of foreign currencies have declined in recent months, indicating that such action, always secret, has been taken.

Dollar Up As Backing Provided

LONDON (AP) — The United States dollar moved upward again today on the world's money markets following the U.S. Federal Reserve Board's announcement of a new contribution to a special fund to prop up the U.S. currency.

"Basically, the dollar appears to be much firmer today," one Frankfurt dealer commented.

The U.S. Federal Reserve Board on Tuesday expanded on Sunday's announcement. It said nine major central banks have agreed to add $6.24 billion to a special short-term "swap fund" available to the U.S. government to support the dollar, Canada put up $1 billion, bringing its contribution to the fund to $1 billion.

The swap fund already totalled nearly $12 billion, but nothing had been said about it previously because the Nixon Administration was maintaining a policy of not intervening in the market.

The swap fund works this way: the Federal Reserve can call on one of other central banks to buy a certain amount of dollars in the foreign banking major market. This buying increases the demand for the U.S. currency and should make it rise. But the Federal Reserve must redeem the dolars in the foreign currency used for the purchase within 90 days.

The countries contributing to the fund are Canada, Japan, Belgium, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Sweden.

Watch for the String Goliath on the Loose

BAYSIDE — The search is on for a runaway rooster owned by the Purvis family of Bayside.

The rooster, a family pet, is about five months old and may respond to the name Goliath, so christened through his bravery at warding off neighborhood cats and dogs including the family's beagle, Lady Biscuit.

Cathy Purvis, owner of the rooster, says Lady and most of the other animals in the neighborhood have "great respect," for Goliath's retaliations to trespassers who dare enter the family yard.

Cathy, with her parents' permission, began her strange hobby some time ago when the family was given two chicks — a hen and a rooster.

Goliath, who hasn't had a good break in his short life so far, was disowned by his mother and given to Cathy bringing the poultry count to three.

A problem cropped up. The resident rooster wasn't ready to accept Goliath and the Purvis family was forced to build a separate shack for the new addition. No-one in the neighborhood minded early morning solos from the Purvis back yard and most got a kick out of watching Goliath beat off unwanted company or strut around the yard with a string tied to his leg to aid capture. The string also served as a leash to lead Goliath to the store on shopping trips.

Last Thursday Goliath was noticed missing and the long faces of the Purvis children show the old coop just isn't the same.

Goliath was just coming of age. In the words of Cathy, "he was just growing a comb and learning to crow."

Goliath is a mongrel rooster and his voice wasn't the best, according to Cathy, who listened in on conversations between Goliath and the first rooster. "He was cranky, off-pitch, strained and broken."

The day after Goliath left, five eggs laid by Henny Penny hatched, the only bright side to the loss of Goliath as far as the children are concerned.

"Wish our luck they'll all be roosters," says Mrs. Purvis.

If anyone spots Goliath, contact Cathy at 392-6622.

Sailing Popular

Sailing is runnerup to gliding as one of the most popular activities of air cadet summer camp now in progress at CFB Trenton. Paul Haggis, of Belleville, gives instruction to Derek Dingledine, Trenton, and Stephen Lafrenze, Collingwood, two of more than 470 cadets in two-week camp.

Holiday Means A Classroom

While some officers consider summer training a reward and holiday following a year of home duty, camp at CFB Trenton means slogging through tents and pots in leadership training courses. More than 470 cadets from across Ontario have taken up quarters in the back tent city for two weeks of instruction. It's the 14th yearly camp at the base and will accommodate more than 1,600 cadets from Ontario, Quebec and Germany during the next six weeks.

CFB Trenton's Air Cadet Camp Is Adjusting with the Times

TRENTON — The face of the Canadian air cadet movement is changing with a broadened program that takes some of the military lock - step out of the schedule.

"Everything competes for a boy's interest," said Lt.-Col. Harold Mikkman, commanding officer of more than 470 cadets from about the province who will spend the next two weeks at Canadian Forces Base Trenton. We have to provide solid programming that interests the cadets or we won't keep them."

Recent years have brought drastic changes to cadet schedules, including driver education classes and addition of girls to the units.

This summer's camp, the fourteenth to be held at the base, typifies the broadened cadet program offering everything from sailing to gliding to making music.

For the next six weeks, groups of 400 - 500 at a time will stay in tent city on the fringe of the base.

More than 170 supervisory staff have been laid on for the camp with another 64 cadets employed for the summer to act as instructors.

There are also six padres to attend to the cadets.

"Some of them get lonely or homesick and want someone to talk to," said Lt.-Col. Miskiman.

CFB Trenton is the focal point of the program sponsored jointly by the Air Cadet League and the ministry of national defence. Groups of cadets can also be found at Mountain View airport trying for their civilian glider license by the close of the summer and at Campbellford taking sevenstering courses.

"We're not building young warriors but people capable of leading in the community," said one officer. "Just being away from home for the first time is quite an experience in growing up for a lot of them."

Most of the cadets are 14 or 15.

During the final two-week session, a large contingent of cadets from Quebec and Lahr, Germany will attend the camp.

While some of the discipline has been relaxed, camp still means getting up early in the morning, giving a 100 per cent all day and doing a lot of things cadets didn't think they could do.

Cadets will also make trips to Toronto, Ottawa and Kingston to tour Ontario Place, Fort Henry and the War Museum.

What we are offering is pretty much a holiday after a long winter of training, said an officer.

'Checkup' Visit From U.K.

British nurse Edna Gibson will have travelled thousands of miles before she's finished 30 years later check on Canadian veterans she nursed during World War II. Among them is Prince Edward County teacher Woodrow Blakely who introduced grandson Greg to Belgiejewski, of Demorestville, to Miss Gibson. The nurse and ex-soldier have kept up contact since wartime.

Nurse Checking Patients -- Thirty Years Later

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Edna Gibson is a conscientious nurse, fully convinced of the value of follow-up checks on her patients, even after doctors have declared them progressing nicely.

This month the diminutive ocean to visit Woodrow Blakely, a Picton school teacher who was admitted to Marston Green hospital in Birmingham 30 years ago.

Mr. Blakely, a member of was seriously wounded in action in the early days of the battle of Falaise Gap during World War II. Taken to a Canadian military hospital he met Mrs. Gibson, an auxiliary nurse working as a volunteer.

"I was a long way from home and it was a marvellous thing to have someone talk to me every day," says Mr. Blakely.

Mrs. Gibson visited her patient regularly during his four-month stay in hospital. He was discharged on New Year's Day, 1945.

The young soldier and his considerate nurse enjoyed a regular correspondence for almost 30 years after his return to Canada and last summer, Mr. Blakely and his wife visited Mrs. Gibson at her home in Solihull, Warwickshire, England.

"You haven't changed in 28 years," was Mrs. Gibson's immediate verdict on seeing her ex-patient.

The Blakelys enjoyed several days with Mrs. Gibson and planned an exchange visit with her that materialized this month with her arrival in Canada.

"I never though I should ever come," she remarked.

Since her Canadian vacation began, Mrs. Gibson has travelled to Cobourg to look in on still another of her former patients. She hopes to visit others in Scarborough and Fort Frances.

Mrs. Gibson, like her Picton patient, has changed little in 28 years. She is still actively involved in volunteer work and has great interest in the Sue Ryder Foundation. Sue Ryder is the wife of Group Captain Cheshire, originator of the concept of the Cheshire Home.

Mrs. Gibson notes the Ryder Foundation offers homes caring principally for the incurably ill or disabled, the homeless and others for whom general hospitals can do nothing more.

Mrs. Gibson's Canadian visit seems to be proving a pleasurable reunion with patients who became friends.

School Board Supports Protest on TV Policy

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward school trustees have backed a resolution by the Leeds - Grenville board of education protesting the uneven expansion of educational television in some areas of eastern Ontario.

A proposed expansion policy forwarded by the Ontario Educational Communication Authority does not provide for a signal in certain parts of eastern Ontario.

Lloyd Dennis, director of education for the Leeds - Grenville board, sent a letter to Prince Edward trustees stressing the unfairness of such an expansion policy.

The OECA has been requested to couple expansion of UHF broadcasting with authorization of new towers or acquisition of space on existing towers between Toronto and Ottawa for transmission. This transmission should be comparable to that proposed for southwestern and south central Ontario.

The Leeds - Grenville board also has asked the OECA to provide it with video - taped copies of programs available in better viewing areas.

Prince Edward school trustees supported the stand of the Leeds - Grenville board. Special services co-ordinator Russell Williams said that it has been sometimes necessary here for the county board to duplicate tapes for use by Prince Edward students. It created he felt the OECA is offering unequal opportunities for pupils in Ontario and he agreed with the letter forwarded by the Leeds - Grenville board.

Tennis Soon For Village

BLOOMFIELD — In Wellington village the call soon will be "Tennis anyone" for the sportsminded.

The Prince Edward County Board of education at a meeting last night, approved a plan for the erection of a net at Wellington school.

It was noted in a letter from Wellington resident Joseph Karaz that the village recreation committee might require two years to raise sufficient funds for a court at the recreation field. Permission to use the school area would provide interim facilities immediately.

Trustees agreed to plans outlined by the recreation committee and property between the school and Wellington's Anglican Church hall will be used as a court.

Community Group Contact Discussed

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward board of education trustee James Plomer has told board members that excellent feedback reportedly can result from meetings between school principals and community school associations.

The former board chairman who recently attended a convention of OISE (Ontario Institute for the Study of Education) notes that it recommends these community associations that can be "more free - wheeling" than home and school groups. Some boards meet with these groups once a year.

It was also mentioned at the OISE convention that boards might pay small grants toward these associations.

Village Seeks To Borrow

MARMORA (Special) — Ontario Hydro has approved the application by Marmora Village Council for the issuing of $40,000 worth of debentures. The money will be used for updating the village Hydro system and the debentures will be repaid over a 15-year period. Permission must now be sought from the Ontario Municipal Board to borrow the money.

Although OISE suggests all board should have liaison committees meeting with teachers, Mr. Plomer feels an "Old Chinese Wall" could spring up unless separate committees are organized for elementary and secondary schools.

Board - student committees formed for liaison with secondary schools were discussed at the convention and a low student interest reported. In New York, only two of every seven pupils showed interest in serving on such a committee, the board learned.

Progress Report From Chamber

TWEED (Special) — Directors and members of Tweed Chamber of Commerce will meet at a round dinner in the Hotel Tweedsmuir July 12 to discuss projects and programs.

A larger number of visitors than last year have registered at the tourist information booth in Tweed Jail.

The Chamber of Commerce has noted that the building boom continues in the village with three new houses now under construction. This brings to 16 the number of house starts in the last 1½ years.

Needs of Youth Get Youth Involved, Rotarians Are Urged

Salvation Army cadet Ken Chapman jells Picton Rotarians one way to meet needs of young people is to get them involved in community work. Modern youth matures earlier than previous generations, he said.

PICTON — Teenagers now grow "older younger", Salvation Army cadet - in - training Kenneth Chapman told Picton Rotarians yesterday.

Experienced in youth work in his home city of London, cadet Chapman noted tat today youths of 13 think differently than did their parents at the same age.

"We must feed them at their age level and mentality," he observed.

The youth worker said that 90 per cent of today's youth is seeking a foundation to build on and something to belong to. Young people want to be wanted and, unlike adults, cannot join service clubs such as Rotary to relate to society.

He urged Rotarians to involve youth in community projects and to encourage teens to express their ideas instead of superimposing their views on them.

Mr. Chapman remarks that not all of today's youth are drug users. Some teens did what his drop in centre in London feigning the symptoms of users, however, in a bid for attention.

Teens should be encouraged to take part in activities, contributing their own thoughts. Their need for an identity in society deserves recognition.

Cadet Chapman is serving the Salvation Army in Picton in the absence of a replacement for Capt. Alex Crewe who left recently for Hanover.

Mini Cold War

If it did not hold such important implications relative to the health of people around the world, and particularly in the South Pacific, the current "war" being waged between Australia, New Zealand and France over the latter's nuclear bomb experiments could almost be placed in the realm of comic opera.

The New Zealand frigate Otago has been reported steaming into the area of the tests on an atoll some 900 miles south of Tahiti. To give this brave protest additional bite, the vessel has on board a cabinet minister of the Labor government of Norman Kirk which together with the socialist-oriented Whitlam government in Australia is bitterly opposed to the tests.

And well they might. France has been dickering with these tests for an altogether too lengthy period of time now — more than a decade or so, while both the United States and the Soviet Union have long since finished with theirs.

For New Zealand, more so perhaps than Australia, the rift with France that now are so strained are of more than passing interest. Back in 1840 French settlers from Rochefort arrived in Akaroa, an idyllic spot on the Banks peninsula near Christchurch. It was just six days after the British flag was hoisted and while their dream of colonialization had been frustrated they stayed to make a valuable contribution to the country's present life. Today their influence remains — in street names such as rue Jolie, rue Lavaud, b the architecture and in vineyards they planted.

Then there are the sporting links. New Zealand soccer teams, especially in the largest city of Auckland, have frequent matches with teams from the French island of New Caledonia to the north, as well as from Tahiti. However, what with France being in the doghouse, its goods boycotted and with no New Zealand representation at the Seattle day celebrations in Wellington, many this mini cold war "down under" extends to sport also.

Hot Work

Watching a work gang on the rail track at South Front Street where in addition some road resurfacing was being carried out, we decided that, under a hot sun, it was undoubtedly an uncomfortable chore. Nor does sleep come easily these days, and considering the psychological implications of the long-hot-summer-syndrome, when people of uncertain mental stability have been known to come close to the breaking point, it can be a mixed blessing. Moreover, it is the allergy season. Today's cartoon, however, reminds us of an old Cole Porter number "Summertime" — and while the living may not always be that easy . . : well for the time being we cannot think of anything better.

Danger Spot

A note to Belleville General Hospital authorities: two rails, side by side, are missing from the railing of the parking lot across from the hospital entrance, leaving a large gap through which a child could easily fall. There is a considerable drop here to a narrow gravelled area around a transformer surrounded by the usual high wire. Children visiting the hospital with their parents, before getting into the car again will peer through the railings, as children do in such places and could be observed one come this perilously close to the gap in question. An immediate repair job is indicated.

Polio Threat

Word that parents are not having their children immunized against polio in the way that once was commonplace is disquieting. United States figures showing a more then ten per cent drop in immunization of children in the one to four age group are similar to the trend here.

Dr. John W. Davies, chief of epidemiology for the federal health department reminds the public that polio was once a killer and it could be again. "There is no excuse, he says, "for not seeking protection through the immunization programs."

Parents who have not had their children immunized should act immediately, remembering also that booster shots are required at intervals.

Energy Study Envisages Rise in Gas — Oil Prices

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Just the other day in this space (or in space very much like it) the government's newly-polished energy study was described. The report predicted increasingly pricey prices of gas and oil in Canada.

Both in the energy, mines and resources department study itself, and especially in the publication that is, one vital point has received insufficient attention:

Canadians need energy in abundance to support a dynamic society spread over nearly four million square miles in northern latitudes.

That fact almost seems to have been shunted aside in favor of esoteric arguments about oil taxation policies, foreign capital and the like.

The reason could be that, over the years, we have become accustomed to our own publicity. That dog-eared description of Canada as a "vast treasure house of mineral wealth" may be trite, but in the days of easy pickings are rapidly vanishing.

The easy accessibility of oil and gas in Alberta may have spoiled us. It's a difficult matter to put off difficult questions about the future except for the much criticized petroleum industry, which has the responsibility of assuring continued supplies.

The oil men are directing their exploratory efforts principally in two remote areas the Far North and off the East Coast.

A number of discoveries have been reported in the Mackenzie Delta of the Northwest Territories and in the Arctic Islands, although none that would assure any large-scale production.

Off the East Coast, the prospect of worthwhile discoveries seem even dimmer. The lack of any significance off-shore drilling results, after the years of effort and millions of dollars that the industry has spent, is beginning to destroy the dream of an Atlantic oil bonanza.

Exploring the Arctic and the floor of the Atlantic is a highly risky and expensive undertaking. Experience exploration there, the federal government has had to provide generous tax incentives and then do some arm-twisting to persuade the oil companies to spend the money and accept the risk.

The government's critics have been making political capital out of these tax incentives, especially since the publication of the energy, mines and resources study.

But when those critics complain that the U.S., and U.K. governments tax their oil companies more severely, let's remember that the U.S. and British production that is being taxed is coming from established and easily accessible deposits.

It could well be that the oil industry in Canada has some unwarranted tax privileges that should be cancelled. But in the coming debate on future energy policy, we must look at the question in terms of our own national requirements — not those of some other country.

A Ministry for the Retarded?

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

The Ontario Association for th Mentally Retarded met in Waterloo recently and produced a substantial body of resolutions, including one seeking the formation of a ministry whose concern would be the needs of the province's 70,000 retarded adults and children.

But there was one general effect of the conference's value would be difficult to measure. This was the impact on the community as a whole.

Under ordinary circumstances, normal individuals don't give a great deal of consideration to the problems of the retarded. In fact, most go short an though this is a problem of relevance to a very few, and one they can ignore.

Anyone cognizant of what went on at the sessions, however, would tend to think again. One subject discussed was the possible integration of the retarded into the community at large.

So the average individual might conclude, although these people are not as fully developed mentally as the average person, they are human beings with similar if reduced or restricted interests. If that measure got through in a substantial larger part of the community the association would have reason to be pleased.

The most striking proposal, that calling for a separate ministry should be treated more as a long-range goal than practical proposal.

Recognizing this, the association's directors have wisely needed that responsibility for the retarded, which is now under the health ministry, be transferred immediately to the ministry of community and social services.

This seems like an eminently practical proposal, for most mentally retarded are not specifically health problems. What they really need is attention directed toward their care and supervision and, so far as possible, their integration into the community.

The ultimate goal, according to association president Mrs. Merrett . . . of London, Ont., should be the achievement of rights enabling the mentally retarded to enjoy the same things as a normal adult, the ability to move freely if the community and to have access to community services, plus statutory school attendance with appropriate programs for retarded children.

Some of these objectives may seem unrealistic to those who would rather not look too deeply into the problem. But it is only necessary to accept the obvious truth about the humanity of the retarded to see the need for the kind of work the association is doing, and for a greater concern in the community as a whole.

The hour for which the whole world outside of the Axis has awaited, has come with the invasion of Sicily by British, Canadian and American forces. After months of speculation and excitement over the time and place of the invasion, the world realizes in the beginning of the end of the Axis domination of continental Europe has come. To Canadians the event is a great significance though Canadian troops have been in action on a number of previous occasions in fairly small numbers. The invasion of Sicily begins one of the great ventures of the war; the beginning of the campaign which is aimed at the utter destruction of Axis tyranny and the unconditional surrender of the Axis nations.

Robert Macaulay Back

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau

Former minister-of-everything Bob Macaulay is back on the scene.

As may have come to your attention, the brilliant but unorthodox member of the latter-day Frost and early Robarts administrations has been named general counsel to the energy board.

And naturally he is in the middle of a tempest. It would hardly be fair to do if he weren't.

Opposition members in the house have been asking the most look questions about what he is doing and what he is being paid in and Union Gas Co. spokesman have accused him of being an ombudsman rather than a counsel to the board.

Ho, hum and lackaday. It's like old times. And as in most of them you have to agree with Macaulay.

Insofar as being counsel to the energy board is concerned there are probably few, if any, lawyers in the province better qualified.

This is a man who was a member of the Ontario Hydro Commission and then was the first minister of energy we had in the province.

He grasped his field so well that he wrote a book on nuclear energy which was widely acclaimed.

Beyond this he now is recognized as one of the best barristers in the province.

Then when he quits and he gives it complete dedication.

Whatever he is being paid, the government and people of Ontario are lucky to get him.

And if he is acting as an ombudsman then good for him.

The energy board is supposed to act in the public interest.

Its main function to date has been to approve natural gas rates throughout the province. It probably also will be passing on electricity rates, and conceivably even gasoline and fuel oil in the future.

A gas rate hearing always covers a large area and is usually dozens of municipalities.

There has been an imbalance in the hearings to date because they've the municipalities banded together to present the public side of the question in opposition to the applicant company.

Yet rate questions are very complex and a skilled defender of the public interest definitely is needed for equity.

And if Macaulay is recognizing this then he is doing his job as it best can be done.

Benefits Of Meditation

Editor,
The Intelligencer,
In the June 30 issue of The Intelligencer an article appeared on Transcendental Meditation and the wonderful effect this system has on nerves.

Invented by a Hindu Monk in 1960, praised and propagated by the "Alberta Teachers Association Magazine," it became so popular lately that the executive members of the Alberta cabinet have agreed to discuss the possibility of implementing TM in their provincial institutions.

As the report says the meditator silently repeats a meaningless sound for 20 minutes twice daily which then "helps a rest deeper than sleep".

That there is a need for more rest and quietness in this age of speed, stress and strain is admitted by most people. The technique employed by TM may have a better therapeutic value than tranquilizers or dope and drugs.

We can be sure however, that any benefit derived from it can in no way measure up to the tranquil life of the wise old patriarch described in the Bible.

Some 2000 years ago a man walked on this earth who offered His followers "the water of life" and "the peace of God which passeth understanding".

A study of history and Christian biography reveals the fact that for centuries multitudes have recognized this supernatural source of life and were enabled by it to live and die happily.

Unfortunately pride in human nature often rejects things of great value if given gratis, without price, but will accept something inferior if introduced as new and exciting.

Britain held this territory until the signing of peace at Ghent, when it was handed back to the United States. The Duke of Wellington, who had defeated Napoleon at Waterloo, was instrumental in persuading the British to cede it to hold the territory.

1915—The Republican party in the United States nominated Dwight Pierce Brewer for president on the first ballot.

1877—American composer George Gershwin died.

1906—Canadian statesman Sir Hector-Louis Langevin died.

1758—The newly-established community of Halifax was almost entirely destroyed by fire.

Do It Yourself Divorces Popular in California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A number of California couples are undertaking a new do-it-yourself project—divorce.

Like many do-it-yourself projects, this method of marriage dissolution can come with a "kit," complete with instructions.

Some couples handle the divorce by themselves. But many are turning to a new breed of businessman, the non-lawyer divorce consultant. These persons provide assistance to the couple, usually at much lower fees than lawyers demand.

In effect, a couple seeking a divorce can complete all the necessary arrangements by purchasing the do-it-yourself kits from consultants.

The consultants appeared about the same time as more liberal divorce codes that have made it relatively easy in many states for consenting couples to end their marriage.

In 1969, Governor Ronald Reagan signed California's divorce reform bill, which absolutely replaced divorce with "the dissolution of a marriage." It also did away with the practice of blaming one partner in the marriage for the breakup by providing "irreconcilable differences" as a catch-all cause.

In 1969, the final year under the old law, California issued 79,208 divorce decrees. The next year it jumped to 107,307. New Jersey granted 36,389 divorces in 1971 when divorce laws were relaxed, nearly twice the 14,235 granted the year before.

Although the number of do-it-yourself divorces is unavailable, an unofficial survey in Los Angeles County shows 2,432 during a selected month of 1973, compared to 1,466 for the same month in 1971.

While more and more couples are filing dissolution forms without consulting lawyers, some get help from non-lawyers.

Two of the largest companies in California which sell marriage dissolution kits—a complete package of forms, samples and instructions—are the Wave Project, which has 16 offices, and the California Divorce Council, which has nine.

Lee Flinn, one of the owners of the California Divorce Council, and Hubert Parker, who opened the council's Riverside office, both have misdemeanor cases pending on charges of practising law without a license. Flinn also is accused of advertising legal services by a non-lawyer. A similar charge against Parker has been dismissed.

Charles Sherman, a Berkeley lawyer who closed his law office to begin Wave Project, acknowledges potential legal problems.

"There's a very thin line there," he said. "I don't think we've crossed it."

Sherman said one way his workers stay on the legal side of that line is through the use of a book he has written, How to Do Your Own Divorce in California.

"Since the book is protected under the First Amendment and was written by an attorney, Wave Projects just refer people with legal questions to the book instead of answering those questions themselves," Sherman said.

The California Divorce Council also has a copyrighted book but it is not sold commercially. It can only be obtained in the marriage dissolution kits, which the council sells for $55.

The Wave Project also charges $55 for its kits. The fees do not include filing charges.

Most California cases against non-lawyer divorce consultants still are pending. In Nevada, a 30-year-old hairdresser was fined $200 last December after being convicted on eight counts of practising law without a license. Ted Brandon, 39, had been selling do-it-yourself divorce kits for uncontested cases for $71.63.

However, Clark County District Attorney Roy Woofter said he would not have prosecuted if Brandon merely had sold the kits. He said he prosecuted because Brandon gave legal advice.

Spokesmen for divorce consultant companies agree that their business angers bar associations.

"Lawyers are angry because we're taking their candy away and telling people that in uncontested divorces attorneys aren't really necessary if people are advised how to fill out the forms," Sherman said. He said most lawyers charge at least $360 to handle divorces.

Lawyers argue that their service is well worth the fee. Michael James, a Corona, Calif., lawyer, said property problems are the major source of trouble if a couple tries to complete a divorce without a lawyer.

Do Your Own

Growing It Organically

People are doing more for themselves these days.

It may be a response to ever increasing prices in the markets. Or it may be a person's need to be at least somewhat responsible for his own survival. Perhaps it's just part of a revival of interest in Grandmas's way of life.

Whatever the reasons, it's a fact. We'll take a look at some of the region's do-per-owners in a weekly series which begins today.

They began with seed catalogues and books and pencils and papers. Then it was soil test kits and roto-tillers.

Now Ann and David McKelvey spend spare evenings weeding their 80 x 30 foot garden where they're raising a whole range of growing things from beans to watermelons.

Like many city-dwellers they didn't find sufficient room in the yard of their Highland Ave. home to raise the vegetables they wanted. So last year they advertised for garden space.

They received 14 offers of space, many from elderly couples who couldn't keep up their garden any longer but didn't want to see it go to weeds.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Bird were one of the couples and they accepted their offer; for two years they have raised vegetables on the Bleeker St. plot.

The McKelveys, who garden with assistance from seven-month-old Jennifer, raise their vegetables organically, without use of chemical fertilizers or insecticides.

"We don't want to eat chemicals along with the vegetables," Ann says emphatically.

"Insecticides only slow bugs down; then birds eat the bugs and it gets passed through the system," adds David, a graduate of an environmental studies course.

"I'd have to turn in my degree if we did it any other way," he says.

Bob Ann and David agree there's a lot of work to gardening, especially organic gardening.

Once the garden is roto-tilled — they pay someone $5 to do it — and planted, there's weeding to do, and pest control to look after. Ann, for instance, hunts cabbage worms and David picks them off the plants and squashes them.

Some bug control is more automatic in their garden, fortunately, since David and Ann companion plant. They take advantage of the repellant qualities of certain plants and the fact that some plants are mutually beneficial.

For example, David says, they plant alternate rows of beans and potatoes. Potatoes will keep the Mexican bean beetle from the beans and the beans will keep potato bugs from the potatoes. He's convinced it works.

David also surrounds his tomato plants with four toothpicks when planting them to foil cutworms and plants marigolds to keep the tomato hornworm away.

Natural fertilizers are part of the McKelvey's gardening program, too, and Ann faithfully saves kitchen scraps for their compost heap. Grass cuttings and leaves along with manure complete the compost which must be worked and turned.

Novice gardeners Ann says David knew even less about gardening than she did which was "almost nothing" — the pair planned their garden out on paper the first year.

"The rows were exactly three feet apart," Ann says.

Now more confident, this year's garden was planned as it was planted.

Some day Ann and David hope to raise all their own food.

"We want to be self-sufficient," Ann says.

For now, they're learning by experience and by reading and experimenting, and they are coping with bugs and plant diseases without use of chemicals.

So far, there's only been one very small disaster.

"David companion - planted sage with cabbage and I weeded all the sage out," Ann sighs.

Apart from that, though, last year's garden was a success and this year's garden is coming along well.

In fact, Ann has only one complaint.

"Last year we ate it all up. There was nothing left to can."

Super Supper Salads Make a Meal

Super supper salads are the answer for hot days or lazy days. Ground beef, cooked chicken or veal and seafood all turn salads into something substantial for supper.

Tuscanese Toss

1 lb. macaroni noodles
1 cup milk
one-third cup bottled French dressing one-third cup mayonnaise or mayonnaise - type dressing one-half cup thinly sliced celery one small onion sliced in paper-thin rings one large can tuna, drained salt and pepper to taste

Cook macaroni noodles according to package directions. Drain. While still hot add remaining ingredients. Refrigerate three hours. Serve on lettuce with crackers or hot rolls. Four servings.

Mexican Tacos Salad

1 medium head lettuce, shredded
4 green onions, chopped
1 can (14 ounce) kidney beans, drained and rinsed
Meat dressing
1 cup shredded sharp cheddar cheese

Toss lettuce, onions, kidney beans in salad bowl. Chill. To serve, spoon warm meat dressing over salad, sprinkle with shredded cheddar, and serve immediately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Meat Dressing

½ pound ground beef
½ onion (½ cup), chopped
1 can (7½ ounce) tomato sauce
1 cup beef broth (canned or bouillon cube dissolved in water)
¼ cup dry red wine or water
¼ teaspoon garlic salt dash pepper
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon basil

Saute ground beef and onion until browned. Add remaining ingredients and simmer uncovered 20 to 30 minutes. Cool slightly; skim off fat if necessary. Serve over salad.

Patio Chicken Bowl

Combine chicken, celery, mayonnaise, lemon juice, onion and salt; toss to moisten. Add 1 cup small cantaloupe balls and ½ cups grapes. Toss again and chill. To serve, line salad bowl with romaine or endive. Spoon in chicken-fruit salad. Pile remaining 1 cup cantaloupe balls in centre and ring edges with remaining grapes. Sprinkle almonds in a ring between grapes and cantaloupe. Makes four servings.

Ann Landers

'I Enjoy My Job'

Dear Ann Landers: Why is it that when you tell someone you are a barmaid they look at you as if you had said, "I am a prostitute." I enjoy my job very much, get $3 an hour base pay and work 40 to 48 hours a week. I average anywhere from $75 to $100 a week in tips.

Of course there are drawbacks. I'm on my feet eight hours at a stretch and I must work every night, including holidays. I get no fringe benefits such as vacation pay and insurance. I have to put up with a lot of drunks, block their passes tactfully (so they don't get mad), listen to their troubles and settle their dumb arguments.

I was educated in Europe, speak three languages fluently, type, take dictation and can use office equipment. But when I held a so-called "respectable" job, I couldn't clear more than $90 a week after deductions. This meant I had to share an apartment, drive an old car and wear tacky clothes.

Now I live in a beautiful duplex — alone — drive a new car, have a good wardrobe, give generously to charity and help support my widowed mother. My only problem, Ann, is this: What did I say to people who give me the fish-eye when I tell them I'm a barmaid? Unduly Sensitive.

Dear Un: Why say anything? Simply return the fish-eye and go on counting your tip money, honey.

Dear Ann Landers: Our six-year-old son is a bright child and extremely inquisitive. Billy has a great love for all living things. He wants to know about animals, insects and flowers — how they reproduce themselves and what makes them grow. He has been told that all living things come from seeds. Billy has seen pregnant women and he knows that babies' lives begin with a seed from the daddy and until they are ready to be born they will be carried in the mommy's tummy.

Recently he pinned me down and I had to tell him exactly how a new baby gets out of the mommy's tummy. He seemed perfectly satisfied and the subject hasn't come up since.

Last night I casually mentioned to my husband that Billy has an unusually good understanding of the life processes. When I told him about our recent conversation he became madder than I've ever seen him. He called me an idiot for going into so much detail. According to my husband, there is no need to describe human reproduction until a child is 12 years old. He says there is so much sex talk around these days that kids think about nothing else. He believes parents should stay with the seed story as long as possible. He claims the less information encourages "experimentation and investigation." We have two younger children and I need to know if he is right. Thanks, Ann S.O.S.

Dear S.O.S.: He is wrong. A child's questions should always be answered honestly. If your husband thinks he can stick with the seed story until a youngster is 12, I have a bit for him.

All children "experiment and investigate," and when they start to school they invariably trade information. It's far healthier for a child to get the facts at home, from a parent, before he goes to school and picks up bits and pieces from the kiddie underground.

Successful Living

Get Your Mind Off Yourself

Dear Doris: You misquoted me about smoking and receiving love. You suggested that a smoking wife might be showing evidence that she wasn't getting enough love.

What I meant was that her problem might be that she (not the husband) didn't know how to give love. I illustrated that I found it easy to quit smoking when I got my mind off myself.

I was not talking about sex. I was saying that the wife might learn to escape her own weaknesses by getting her mind off herself and directed to constructive activity elsewhere. Unfortunately, it is easy for our self-destructive ness to be excused as a failure on the part of the other person or the environment.

There is a very important aspect of the breakdown of personal relationships that is often ignored, or at least not properly understood. I refer to the fact that some depressed - type individuals cannot receive kindness or gentleness. This attitude is responsible for a fair amount of the criticism of men by women, and it certainly bulks large in the women's liberation trauma.

Sometimes I think men were better off when they didn't talk to their wives. Just worked for them. Not being an expert (who is?) on the subject, however, I can only go there. — Willing to Help

Dear Willing: You are right. I did misunderstand you.

Your suggestion that the important thing is for us to get our minds off ourselves is a dandy. It is also true that if is a human failing to blame the other person or the environment for one's failures. I might add that said failing is not limited to women.

Dear Doris: I have tried to reduce many times but my will power is too weak. I would like to lose a lot in a short time. If I could, do I have to stay on a diet because I do not notice I lose any weight or fat on my legs. — Large Curves

Dear Large: Helping people lose large amounts of weight in short amounts of time is not in my line. Crash diets are for extreme overweights, in hospitals, under doctor's care and in emergency conditions. My consulting nutritionists are firm about this.

You see, first of all we must protect your body's nourishment. Secondly, dieting hard for a short time may take off some pounds, but in many cases such poundage goes right back on. The dietary habits of the victim have not really changed.

So the best way is the slow way — a couple of pounds a week. Eating the right foods. And then, coupling this with exercise to smooth off the lumps. Your legs will slim down, inch by inch, with your weight loss combined with the exercises I am sending you in my 20-cent leaflet, "Be Figure Perfect."

Confidential to R. and D.L.: I am glad my "few kind words" helped to heal the hurt. Your message and the exquisite little gif. gave my heart a lift! I no longer have your address, so am counting on these words in my column, to reach you with my thanks.

We now have some understanding of why people act as they do. Write to Doris in care of this newspaper about your particular human problem, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Non-op Strike Decision Possible by Weekend

Non operating union employees of Canadian National Railways may know before the end of the week whether or not they'll be going on strike, a union spokesman said today.

Labor Minister John Munro Tuesday received the report of Mr. Justice Craig Munroe, chairman of a three-member conciliation board that met last month in an attempt to settle the six-month-old contract dispute.

The minister is also expected to receive reports from the other two board members either today or Thursday. Once the results have been announced, the union can legally strike after seven days.

Jack Thomas, chairman of Belleville Local 126, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, said information he has received indicated the board was unable to produce either a unanimous or majority report.

Since neither the CN nor union representative signed Mr. Justice Munroe's report, he said, it was apparent that the two bodies were unable to reach an agreement on wage and other conflicts that have delayed a new contract since the old pact expired Dec. 31, 1972.

However, he refused to speculate on the possibility of a strike.

There are 250 members in the Belleville local. They include personnel not directly involved in the operating of trains.

Last week, they voted unanimously to support the union if it calls a strike to back up contract demands. Other union members across Canada were to have conducted similar votes by July 10.

Mr. Thomas said the union was asking for a two year contract with a 14 per cent wage increase each year. Average wage under the last contract was $3.52 an hour.

"We feel we've got 60 - 70 cents under other union transportation companies," said the Local chairman.

Management has never disclosed its offer but Mr. Thomas said the two sides were "still too far apart to go back to the membership".

He said one issue that has been partially settled concerns pensions. A new formula was approved by union and management negotiators but it must still be ratified by the employees before going into effect.

Two other points of contention are sick leave and shift differential. The union wants both to be implemented.

Another railway local is also threatening to step off the job. Belleville Lodge 82 of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, which also takes in workers outside the city, voted last weekend to go on strike if necessary to back up contract demands.

Joe Hunter Dead at 81

Retired Canadian National Railways conductor and well known in local railway circles, Joseph "Joe" Hunter, 18 Cherry Gardens, died Tuesday in Belleville General Hospital. He was 81.

Born at Newcastle, son of, the late Mr. and Mrs. William Hunter, he made a lifetime career of railroading, starting as a brakeman and later being classed as a conductor.

He had been retired for the last 15 years but continued his interest by acting as legislative representative for the United Transport Union Local 108 (formerly the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen) and was active in the railway pensioners' organization.

Mr. Hunter was a member of the Durham Masonic Lodge at Newcastle and belonged to Tabernacle United Church.

He is survived by his wife, the former Christine Frantz, two daughters Mrs. Clarke (Joan) James of Belleville and Mrs. W. J. (Frances Ardell) Ord of Belleville and seven grandchildren.

There are two sisters, Mrs. Eliza Ransom of Pictonand Mrs. Sarah Carey of Belleville.

One son, Robert James Hunter and a daughter, Mary Elizabeth, predeceased him.

Rev. Leslie Deal will conduct the funeral Thursday, with service at 2 p.m. at the Thompson Masonic Chapel.

Two Accidents On Highway 7

TWEED (Special) — A driver who lost control of his car on Highway 7 when a tire blew, escaped injury Monday when the vehicle went into a ditch and rolled on its roof.

The accident occurred about two miles east of the Plainfield Road junction, when Eric Alfred Gilliher, 23, of Belleville was westbound on Highway 7. His car received $400 damage.

A second single-car accident occurred on Highway 7 Tuesday night, when Sukhvinder Sandhu of Agincourt swerved to avoid a driver in the wrong lane. His car, reptied from Le Page Court Auto Rental of Downsview, skidded on wet pavement and went into the ditch, causing $400 damage to the vehicle. Mr. Sandhu was uninjured. The accident occurred a half mile west of the Black River Ridge on Highway 7.

Women's Sauna Coming at Y

Women at the Belleville Family YMCA will no longer have to invade the men's locker room for saunas after August 14.

On that date, installation of a unit in the women's locker room is expected to be completed. It will accommodate 15 and help relieve the strain in the overused men's sauna.

Enthusiastic Campers Concern Authority

Increasing numbers of campers at the new Deerock reservoir northeast of Tintan are causing problems for Jim Moira River Conservation Authority.

At the last meeting of the authority executive committee it was noted that there were no sanitation or other facilities at the site and it was agreed that either campers should be prohibited or facilities provided.

Authority chairman Guy Hughes was authorized to discuss the matter with W. B. Cantelon, district manager, Ministry of Natural Resources at Tweed.

The Deerock Reservoir on the Patridge Creek tributary of the Skootamatta River, was officially opened last fall with speakers at the time commenting the area would be ideal for camping.

The reservoir dam, built to provide additional summer flow in the lower Moira is on authority property while the lake being mainly on crown property.

Three Months For Theft

Convicted one week before of stealing $443 worth of welding equipment, Marvin Wood of 1 Bowery St., Picton, was sentenced to three months in prison Tuesday in Belleville Provincial Court.

Mr. Wood, 24, was taken to Quinte Regional Detention Centre in Napanee. Judge J. J. Clendenning recommended he be transferred to a Hamilton centre for alcoholism for the duration of his sentence.

Mr. Wood pleaded guilty to renting the equipment from Complete Rent-Alls of Belleville last year. When he did not return, police were called in and their investigation led them to a Picton garage where they found the air compressor had been painted and the wheels removed from the tank cart.

Defence counsel Peter Girard said Mr. Wood had a drinking problem and was intoxicated at the time the equipment disappeared. He was also on probation for a false pretences conviction last year.

Judge Clendenning read a pre - sentence report before handing down Tuesday's ruling.

Queen Sends Thanks For Belleville Bouquet

Chris Redner, who is 12 years old, thought the Queen would like a few more flowers and a few less flags on her route Royal Tour.

So the day the Royal Train went through Belleville Chris picked red roses from the garden at his College Street home and went down to the train station to wait.

When the train came through, Chris tossed the bouquet to Her Majesty with a note welcoming her to the city and asking her to next time, please, stay a little longer.

Her Majesty caught the bouquet.

This week Chris got a letter from Lady-in-Waiting Kathryn Dagdale who said she was "commanded by The Queen to thank you for the beautiful roses. Her Majesty was very touched by your kind thought."

"I saw a lot about the queen on television," Chris says. "There's always lots of flags but no too many flowers."

Their Lives Got Tangled

While Katharine Dallaine, 7, left, "flies" her fish, Annalisa Wicks, 6, and Joel Ward, 5, contemplate their strings which became tangled while the two were trying to get the play kites airborne. The children attending YMCA's Kinder-Kamp, made the fish in crafts class Tuesday. Other activities in the two-week program are story-telling, art and swimming. There are also daily outings at Vanderwater Conservation Area for children aged 8-12. Next season begins Monday, July 16.

Y Camps Solve Summer Boredom

Two summer camps run by the Belleville Family YMCA are turning the between-school break into an education in living for 70 youngsters.

First two-week session of the Y's Kinder-Kamp, for children between five and seven, and Community Day Camp, for eight to 12-years-olds, concludes Friday.

Then beginning Monday, July 16, July 30, and Aug. 13, three more programs are planned, bringing the fun of camping in the summertime to another 200 youngsters from around the Quinte area.

The junior group has been meeting daily at the Y under supervision of three trained counsellors. Heading the program is Brian Bentley, the Y's new physical education director.

Starting at 9:30 a.m., the children take part in a variety of activities such as crafts, art, story telling and outdoor games. At the end of each day is a refreshing swim in the pool.

The older children head by bus every morning to Vanderwater Conservation Area where they are divided into groups of 10, according to age, with each group headed by a counsellor. Mrs. Darlene Maclennes, a Waterloo University graduate in outdoor education, is camp director.

Nature comes to life in the park as children are taken on hikes, learn outdoor lore, make field trips and, on the second - last night of each session, spend a night in Boy Scout cabins located in the park. A daily 3 p.m. swim in the Y pool is also part of the program.

Vacancies are still available for the remaining three Kinder-Kamp periods. Children aged 4½ were accepted to fill the first session and applicants can be accepted on a one-week stay if they wish.

Fees vary according to length of the stay and the number of children a family enrolls. A full two - week period costs $18, plus $15 for each additional child, and the one-week cost is $10, plus $8 for additional children.

The July 18 session of the Community Day Camp is already full but openings remain for the other two. Again, one-week outings are available.

Fees are slightly higher at $20 for two weeks, plus $15 for additional children, and $12 for one week, plus $10 for each extra child.

Youngsters bring duffel bags to carry towels, swim suits and lunches. Transportation to and from Vanderwater is provided by the Y.

City Hall Art Display Gives More Exposure

The corridors of Belleville's prosaic old city hall are a modern eye dazzler these days.

Bellevue is setting the scene for what could be a quiet cultural revolution in provincial communities.

Its banner bearer is the Quinte Arts Council.

The QAC is tackling a problem which long has baffled all involved in a community's artistic creativity: Getting their art to the masses.

Now the QAC may have hit on the means — public buildings, with their constant changing flow of people.

At Belleville General Hospital, a month - old display is still drawing response.

And no one could fail to see the transformation wrought in city hall's interior this week after the QAC went to work Monday.

The dutifully sober surroundings of civic business are suddenly alive with the dynamic colors and shapes of contemporary painting, sculpture and wall hangings — all the work of local artists.

But these are — hopefully — just beginnings.

What such in - depth exposure may initiate is acceptance of art in other scenes of mass activity — industry and office centres, says Paul Bernard, designer for the QAC's annual visual arts show.

The concept isn't new. It originated in Sweden with a factory display 25 years ago. When the exhibit ended, workers protested. In Canada it's been recently tried in Lindsay.

What is believed new is its adaptation in a smaller urban centre like Belleville, says Mr. Bernard.

"None of the smaller communities, I think, have gone this far," says Mr. Bernard.

The idea arrived for Belleville when it and Belleville General Hospital executive director Philip Rickard organized the show for the hospital. Mr. Rickard arranged for some 40 works to be displayed in areas of max mum use. At the end of three months a new display will be installed. Mr. Bernard says the exhibits continue to evoke comment and criticism from staff, patients and public — exactly what the organizers had hoped. They didn't seek more flavoring responses.

"When art reaches any kind of honest reaction at all it at talks its goal as an esthetic and humanistic development of our society," says Mr. Bernard. "The reaction (at BGH) be it positive or negative . . . has been overwhelmingly successful.

"For the first time . . . we're finally reaching the public mass and exposing them . . . to good art produced by our own talented artists and craftsmen."

Since the works went on show in June, two paintings have been sold, reports Linda Mustard, QAC visual arts committee co-ordinator.

Mrs. Mustard supervised Monday's installations at city hall — a venture which won the enthusiastic support of Mayor Robin Jeffrey.

Both the hospital and city hall are "ideal showcases" to get the adopted QAC theory of mass exposure to practice, says the co-ordinator.

But the concept has a broader implication than its display case value for artists seeking a wider showing and heightening public awareness of local arts and crafts development.

The QAC hopes the expos ure "may also develop an appreciation of art where it never existed before — says Mrs. Mustard.

People viewing the exhibition see art they ordinarily might not take the trouble to seek out in more formal gallery or art show programs.

For many it may trigger a new appreciation of something they've hitherto dismissed as outside our context of daily life.

County's Schoolbus Drivers Get Hike

BLOOMFIELD — The Prince Edward board of education has approved a 7.35 per cent raise for its bus drivers and has agreed to discussions with them should the price of gasoline rise above 65 cents a gallon.

Initially drivers sought an eight per cent raise. They accepted the figure of 7.35 subject to re-negotiation should the price exceed a price of 65 cents a gallon.

Trustees agreed that should the price of gas go above 65 cents a gallon Prince Edward and Bloomfield areas they would discuss the impact of such a change with bus drivers. It was observed that present price of gasoline quoted by the bus drivers is 57 cents a gallon.

High-speed Chase Ends in Crash

BRIGHTON — Two Oakville men are in custody here following a high-speed chase along Highway 401 last night that ended when the men drove through guide posts at the Highway 41 exit near Napanee.

Officers from Belleville and Napanee detachments of the Ontario Provincial Police found James Wilson and Arthur Wade Robinson, both 20, in a field only a short distance from the Quinte Regional Detention Centre.

The men were returned to Brighton where they were charged with theft of a car owned by Joseph Williams of RR5, Colborne. Mr. Williams is on holiday.

The chase began when Brighton OPP were notified the car was missing. They alerted Belleville detachment, which launched a cruiser in pursuit of the vehicle.

Police said speeds exceeded 110 miles per hour as the fleeing car proceeded east. The chase came to an end with the Williams' vehicle crashing into guide posts on the Highway 41 ramp, damaging the car's front end.

Napanee OPP were also on the scene. Officers saw two men jump from the car and begin running through a field near the regional prison.

Shortly before 2 a.m., they arrested Mr. Wilson and Mr. Robinson. The two attempted to elude police by splitting up and were caught some distance apart.

They told police they were on their way to Halifax when a car they had borrowed in Oakville broke down on High way 401.

Mr. Robinson has also been charged with careless driving and driving without a licence.

Shy Learner

YMCA counsellor Marilyn Eagle lends encouragement to four-year-old Claire Merbaum of 19 Forest Hill Cr. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jamie Merbaum, Claire came to Belleville from her native Chile six months ago. The youngster is attending Y's Kinder-Kamp to aid her English before beginning nursery school next fall.

Marg Globe, first contestant in the Miss Downtown Belleville beauty contest, chose a bathing suit at Marrianne's yesterday, one of the prizes offered entrants. The contest will be held in conjunction with Fiesta Days, July 19 to 21. Entry forms may be obtained at Roluf's Travel Centre and the contest closes July 18. The winner will be crowned in the downtown mall at 2 p.m. July 21. Contestants must be 16 to 21 years old and single. Miss Globe, the first contestant, is an employee of a men's hair stylist shop.

Bill Limiting Election Spending Here Seen by NDPer as Watergate Result

OTTAWA (CP) — It took the Watergate scandal in the United States to convince the government the Canadian people will no longer "tolerate the nonsense" that went on in federal elections, Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina-Lake Centre) said Tuesday night.

Mr. Benjamin joined Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East) in commending the government on its bill to limit the spending of political parties and candidates in elections and require public disclosure of those who donate $100 or more to campaign funds.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen called the bill "the most comprehensive attempt to control election expenses taken in Canada so far."

It would result, he said, in "one of the most open and democratic elections in the world."

In a rare burst of co-operation, Mr. Forrestall said the Conservatives are ready to conclude second-reading debate by Thursday and send the bill to a committee for detailed study.

Earlier the Commons gave second reading to a bill to halt the work of 10 provincial electoral boundaries commissions that have been adjusting Commons seats on the basis of the 1971 census.

Under this bill the Commons will have 18 months to propose changes in the work of redistribution which has added three new seats in Ontario and British Columbia but reduced the representation for five other provinces.

It was the loss of seats in the less-populated areas and the added political power given to cities that caused most debate on the bill.

John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert), whose riding would have disappeared had re distribution gone ahead as scheduled, said Mr. Justice R. L. Brownridge, head of the Saskatchewan boundaries commission, had political considerations in mind in drafting proposed new ridings in that province.

He said Parliament had established the independent commissions to stop the practice of gerrymandering—changing the boundaries of a riding to favor a particular party.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) sounded a familiar theme in the debate when he said Parliament must ensure an effective political voice for rural areas.

Andrew Fortin (PC — Lotbinière) agreed, saying the Quebec commission did not take into account that rural MPs must travel farther to serve small, scattered populations.

Mr. Benjamin said a previous government bill to limit election expenses did not deal with party spending. He disagreed with a provision of the new bill limiting parties to spending 30 cents for each eligible voter in each riding where they have an official candidate.

On the basis of 15 million voters, that would allow the parties to spend $4.5 million, he said. The amount should be cut to 25 cents a voter.

Mr. Forrestall said the government must clean up clauses in the bill that could be misinterpreted. One thing the government must make clear is when the expense controls will become law. The bill now says they will come into effect on a day to be set by the cabinet, a common parliamentary practice.

It provides fines of up to $25,000 for pagies that over-spend and fines of $1,000 for individual candidates who go beyond the approved budget.

Candidates would be allowed to spend $1 for each of the first 15,000 eligible voters in their ridings, 50 cents for each of the next 10,000 and 25 cents for each one over 25,000.
